FRAZIER AND NESTOS LEAD

Pointdexter and Olness on Nonpartisan Ticket Assured of Places—Control of Senate With Independents, House Still in Doubt.

Control of the state industrial commission remains with the Independents. R. A. Nestos more than doubled his recall majority in his race against B. F. Baker for the gubernatorial nomination, while it is certain from returns from about two-thirds of the votes cast that George Shafer has defeated P. A. Garberg for attorney general, and Joseph A. Kitchen has kept a safe lead over W. J. Church for commissioner of agriculture and labor.

Two of the Nonpartisan candidates who are practically certain of nomination are D. C. Pointdexter, present incumbent, for state auditor, and S. A. Olness, also present incumbent, for commissioner of insurance.

On the face of incomplete returns both factions of the Republican party are claiming control of the house of representatives, although latest figures indicate that 55 Independents and 55 Nonpartisans were nominated. Control of the Senate lies with the Independents by one vote, if all nominees are elected this fall.

J. F. T. O'Connor defeated Frank Hellstrom for Democratic nomination for the senate and will oppose Frazier this fall. In the 1920 primary Ladd polled 54,957 votes as against Gronna's 51,142, and White's 5,477. At the general election Ladd defeated the Democratic candidate, H. H. Perry, 130,614 to 88,495.

In the 1920 primary Frazier defeated Langer 59,855 to 53,941. The vote at the general election in the fall was 117,118 for Frazier to 112,488 for O'Connor, the Democratic candidate.

In the recall last fall Nestos won over Frazier 111,434 to 107,332. Sveinbjorn Johnson defeated Wm. Lemke 112,361 to 105,575, for the office of attorney general, while for commissioner of agriculture and labor J. A. Eltchen's vote was 111,249 as against 105,914 for J. N. Hagen.

R. A. Nestos, Gubernatorial Nominee.

VOTE LIGHTER THAN LAST TWO ELECTIONS

Perfect Weather Falls to Draw Out Electorate—Returns Come In Slowly.

An election day involving the office of United States senator, a state constitutional amendment and two initiated measures, all the state, legislative, and county offices, and unmarred by a drop of rain in any quarter of the entire state, so far as all weather reports indicate, still failed to bring out a vote anywhere near equal to that cast in the last general election and smaller even than that of last fall's recall election.

The entire campaign was marked by a cryptic silence on the part of the voters throughout the state and while the contestants and various parties all made many forecasts and predictions, yet everyone who was in close touch with the voting constituency felt that to foretell the tide of the vote was out of the question.

It is generally believed that many voters stayed away from the polls because of an inability or lack of desire to choose between some of the paramount issues and leading candidates, while it is known that hundreds of others were out of the state on vacation trips. Although many of these latter sent back absent voters ballots, many more failed entirely to do this and others sent their ballots too late for them to be counted.

Two factors entered into the noticeable delay with which definite returns were received and tabulated. One of these was that, while election day was rainless, that night a storm broke which deluged many sections of the state and made the roads difficult if not for a time impassable, so that getting returns to county seats and points of dissemination was delayed. The other and more important factor in this element of the election was the vast number of candidates and issues on which votes had to be counted.

There were, for instance, three candidates on the Republican ballot for nomination for senator, three for governor, three for attorney general, six for railroad commissioners, eleven for the supreme court bench, three laws, and all the county and legislative posts, besides the congressmen and other state officials to be nominated.

Definite returns on the entire ticket were scarcely available Monday and it will be many days yet before the official canvass will be completed and published.

For purposes of comparison, the following total votes on various offices are interesting:

For Senator.
1920 Primary (Republican)	111,576
1920 General (Total)	229,606
*1922 Primary (Republican)	169,175
For Governor.
1920 Primary (Republican)	118,296
1920 General (Total)	229,606
1921 Recall (Total)	218,766
*1922 Primary (Republican)	166,115
For Attorney General.
1921 Recall (Total)	217,998
*1922 Primary (Republican)	136,516

It will be remembered that the women gained the franchise in 1920, accounting for the wide variation between the 1920 primary vote and the total votes at following elections.

Party leaders and close political observers estimated at election time that possibly 10,000 who had previously registered as Democrats changed their registration so as to be able to participate in the Republican primary. The total Democratic vote cast was around 10,000.

VII. AERIALS AND HOW TO INSTALL THEM

One of the greatest advantages of wireless telephone receivers is that an elaborate or expensive aerial is not required. Although good sets with vacuum bulb detectors may be used with an indoor aerial, or even with a bedstead or wire springs as an aerial, yet an outside aerial will always give better results. As I have already mentioned, a single wire will do as well as several, the main thing being to get the aerial long and high in order to catch waves which are not interrupted or interfered with by surrounding buildings, steel bridges, electric wires and similar objects. Next, or rather most important, is to have the aerial and lead-in thoroughly insulated from all surrounding objects, for even wood, when damp, is an excellent conductor. The best material for an amateur aerial for receiving is a stranded phosphor bronze or copper wire, about No. 14, although solid copper wire, copper-covered steel wire or even insulated copper wire will serve every purpose. For insulators, use porcelain cleats. These may be used both where the lead-in is attached to walls or other objects, and where the aerial wire is attached to the supports or guys. The accompanying figures, No. 9 and No. 10, illustrate aerials installed, the first showing the wire attached to a chimney or similar structure and to a wall; the other, an aerial which is designed for a tin or slate roof and which obviates making holes for attachment. Where the lead-in wire enters the building it should be of rubber insulated wire and may be brought in at the corner of a window, either by cutting a small groove or by jamming the window down until the wire flattens and is buried partly in the wood. All joints in the aerial and lead-in should be scraped bright, tightly twisted and soldered, finally being wrapped with insulating or adhesive tape or covered with "spaghetti" tubing. For the best results, be sure to run your lead-in from the end of aerials towards the station which you most frequently wish to hear or towards the most distant station which you desire to pick up. Very often, this will make a vast difference in results, especially with a small receiving set. Care in following directions will insure good results.

HAIL STORM DAMAGED CROP NEAR COLGATE

NUMBER OF FARMERS SUFFER HEAVY LOSS IN STORM ON TUESDAY EVENING

About 7:30 Tuesday evening a heavy rain storm accompanied by hail struck in the vicinity of Colgate and did considerable damage. In some of the fields the damage will amount to 50 per cent or more which practically makes a total loss as the remaining grain will not be sufficient to cover the extra expense of harvesting and threshing. Other fields on the edge of storm are damaged about 10 per cent.

Among those who suffered the heaviest loss are Jack Kelley, A. F. Cole, C. A. Wiswell, H. S. Boyer, Richard Boyer, Frank Boyer and L. H. Smith. Very few of those who suffered loss carried any hail insurance.

A heavy rain also passed between Hope and Finley and extended into the Mayville country but was not accompanied by hail. It soaked the fields up in good shape.

J. E. AUBREY COMING WITH ROUSING SPEECH

Chautauqua folks are to get a chance to hear J. E. Aubrey, the booster for promotion and progress.

His addresses are characterized as witty, eloquent, forceful, instructive and inspirational. This seems to leave nothing to be desired.

Last year Mr. Aubrey filled a date at Ozark, Arkansas as a substitute for the great ex-Governor Chas. H. Brough of this state. At the close of the address J. F. Turner, head of the highway commission said to him: "Aubrey you are the first man I ever heard who could fill Gov. Brough's place as a speaker. The people forgot that the Governor had failed to come."

He is scheduled to speak here on "The One Mile Town." His theme deals with the mistaken psychology that settles down and decides that we have attained our full growth and possibilities. That is the end of all possible progress.

It is the mission of Mr. Aubrey to jar people from their moorings and engage them in the general forward movement in all things that look toward community progress and development.

It is predicted by the management that the people who bear Aubrey will vote that his address alone is worth in practical value, the whole cost of the Chautauqua.
