IN A SERVANT'S BEDROOM.

One day a German soldier arrived at an inn in a Swiss town, fatigued, dusty and travel-worn. The landlord was on the point of telling him he was "full," but finally ordered the waiter to show the "old man" to a dismal little room in the upper part of the house. The waiter shortly after brought him a little book in which he asked him to sign his name, which he did, the waiter carrying the book back to the landlord. "My God!" said the landlord, looking at the name and wringing his hands, "what have I done? In one of the servants' bedrooms! My hotel will be ruined." And he flew about as if half-crazy. All the waiters were summoned, the handsomest suite of rooms in the house ordered in immediate readiness, and the conscience-stricken landlord departed for the upper regions to make his apologies to the seedy-looking "old man" and to transfer him to more elegant quarters. "I beg ten thousand pardons. I would not have done it for the world, but I did not know that it was you—ten thousand pardons," said the quaking landlord, half out of breath. "But what have you done that you should need to be pardoned?" asked the "old man." "This room—it is not the room for you. It was a mistake. I did not know who it was. I have rooms for you below—an elegant suite of rooms—may I beg you to have your baggage removed to them at once?" "May I ask what is the matter with this room?" inquired the "old man," who had stripped off his coat and vest and rolled up his shirt-sleeves for a wash; "I have slept for years in quarters not so good or comfortable as this." "It is too small, and the furniture is too ordinary. The rooms which I have for you below are those which I reserve for Princes and distinguished guests." "What is the price of them?" inquired the "old man." "Only 100 francs a day." "And the price of this room is how much?" "A bagatelle—but 3 francs." "Well, as my stay is short, you must excuse me if I do not change quarters. I think I shall sleep as sound on that bed as on any bed in your house." And Von Moltke, the great military strategist, was allowed to remain undisturbed, much to the annoyance and chagrin of the landlord.

DENTISTRY IN THE UNITED STATES.

There are now, says the San Francisco Scientific California, about 17,000 dentists in the United States, and they pack into the teeth of the American people about a ton of pure gold, and five times that amount of less precious metals (tin, silver, platinum, etc.) annually. Now, these metals are worth $1,000,000, and it will take only about 350 years to bury all the coin in the United States in the graveyards (another feature in favor of cremation).

There are about 4,000,000 of artificial teeth made in the United States yearly, yet only one-third of the people avail themselves of this blessing.

Perfect teeth are to be found in the mouth of only one American in eighty, the dental organs of seventy-nine being more or less affected.

This state of affairs will never improve until mothers are to bear children with perfect teeth, and preserve them intact until the offspring is 20 years of age.

"Who is John Kelly for?" asks the Detroit Journal in a blood-curdling and inquisitorial manner. We should say that he is for John Kelly's wife's husband—first, last and all the time.
