EXPERIMENTS SHOW THAT TOO MUCH SEED IS USED BY FARMERS

That the farmers of the state are wasting money by the use of too much seed and that they would get better results with less material and more cultivation is shown by a series of experiments recently conducted by Don H. Bark, engineer in charge of the United States Irrigation Investigations. Five fields were planted on one of the stations to determine the amount of alfalfa seed that a farmer should use on his hands to get the maximum returns. It was discovered that the field where 13 pounds of seed was used to the acre, the return netted was 3.94 tons of alfalfa, while on the field where 20 pounds was used only 3.57 tons was cut. The fields were handled in the same way, the plan of the engineers being to learn just what amount of seed under the same condition would produce the best results. Fields where 16 pounds were used produced 3.44 tons, eight pounds, 3.55 tons, and four pounds, 3.83 tons. Some of the farmers of the Boise valley are using as much as 50 pounds of seed to the acre and returns are not high in comparison with the money invested. The engineer believes that the solution to the problem is not in thick seedling, but in more consistent cultivation. He believes that the farmers should use less seed and should spend more time and energy in the cultivation and irrigation of the crop and that they would, by this plan, get a higher percentage of returns from their acreage on the money invested. Professor Villars, a prominent dancing instructor, has purchased the dancing school which has been conducted by Professor Mazanti, and will continue the students in the course. The school has been moved to the K. of P. hall. The new instructor has engaged several competent instructors. Dentist, Dr. Carpenter, Idaho Bldg.

HUNGRY DEMOCRATS BESIEGING LEADERS

Washington, Nov. 13.—A forerunner of the office hunting deluge which is expected in the change of the political complexion of the administration is being experienced already by Democratic senators and representatives. Applicants have not begun to arrive in person, but letters and telegrams are coming by the hundreds. Up to date most of the applications are for federal offices within the various states, but some intimations of a wish to serve the country abroad or in the executive departments in Washington have come to hand. Generally the writers confess the wish to get on hand early in order to forestall others. Many original boomers for Mr. Wilson have been discovered, while others indicate underlying loyalty to the congressmen to whom their letters are addressed. Many of the Democratic statesmen are making provisions for an extended system of filing and generally they manage to look cheerful. There are between 5000 and 8000 presidential post offices, to say nothing of the executive, diplomatic and other offices throughout the federal service. Intimation is given of a desire to revise the civil service law in order to give the rank and file of the party freer access to the public employment, but the general disposition appears to do nothing in that line, at least until their places are taken care of. Representative Johnson, author of the bill introduced at the last session to fix a given tenure of office for civil service employes, is among those who would have the existing law changed.
