

EVENING : CAPITAL : NEWS

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER.

MEMBER OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Published Every Afternoon and Sunday Morning at Boise, Idaho, a City of 50,000 People by THE CAPITAL NEWS PUBLISHING COMPANY, LIMITED.

RICHARD STORY SHERIDAN,

Entered at the Post Office at Boise, Idaho, as Second-class Mail Matter.

Phones—Business Office, 234; Editorial Rooms, 234; Society Editor, 1281-3.

BOISE, IDAHO, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1912.

THE IRON MEN.

When the north wind roars at your cottage doors and batters the window panes, and the cold's so fierce that it seems to pierce right into your bones and veins, then it's sweet to sit by the fire and knit, and think, while the needles clank, of the iron men, of the shining yen, you have in the village bank!

Over Manna

Copyright, 1912 by George Matthew Adams.

G. H. MARTIN.

Before dismissing entirely the recent election in this state, the Capital News wishes to say that among the fine leaders that the election brought forth to battle for the cause of the common good, is G. H. Martin of Sandpoint, Progressive nominee for governor of Idaho.

He did not seek the nomination. Indeed, it had literally to be forced upon him and he took it solely for the good he might do the state and not for any personal good it might do him.

The campaign has made Martin a great state leader in the struggle that has only just begun to keep opportunity open in the new industrial America as it was in the America of the free homesteads.

SCHRANK INSANE; HIS TEACHERS SANE?

If all those who have been talking the same insane talk about the "third term menace" that Schrank, the assailant of Roosevelt, put up are to be declared insane and sent to the asylum as it is proposed to send him, a few new asylums will have to be built.

But why not send them there as well as send Schrank to one of them? Is his excuse for shooting Roosevelt any more silly than the same talk put out by men armed only with wicked tongues and corrupt journals?

Is he who makes rambling and irresponsible talk knowing its falsity to be excused while he who believes and acts upon it supposing it is true is to be sent to an insane asylum?

Of course, Schrank should have known they were lying, but because he did not, he is to be deprived of his liberty and committed to an asylum, while those who told it to him are to go free to repeat the harm they have already done because they knew they were lying!

It is a peculiar situation and one well worth thinking about by the people, all of whom know of persons who made the same declarations that Schrank has made, but who go free, while Schrank is to be committed to an insane asylum, probably, for holding to the same views the others hold to.

If any one can figure where the press of the nation and those individuals who have diligently peddled the same beliefs get off with any degree of credit to themselves, we should be glad to have them furnish us with the figures.

DEMOCRATIC GAINS FOR PROGRESSIVES.

Notwithstanding Woodrow Wilson's sweep of the country, his popular vote is less than that received by Bryan four years ago.

Wilson in order to "beat Roosevelt," it shows that many former Democrats have become allied with the Progressive movement. Otherwise the vote of Wilson would have been far greater than was the vote of Bryan.

In several states, notably in California, South Dakota, Kansas and Iowa, it is known that several thousand former Republicans voted for Wilson. This was probably done in other states also.

For this reason Wilson's vote should have shown a great increase, whereas, it actually shows a decrease during the four years. It is impossible to suppose that many Democrats voted with Taft under the circumstances, even though they might have been disposed to do so, under different circumstances.

The next two years will witness the turning of many other thousands of Democrats to the Progressive movement. They cannot remain in the Democratic party and they will not go to the poor reactionary remnant of the Republican party.

The Republican party is "officially dead" in North Carolina, having failed to cast sufficient votes at the last election to authorize it to be called a party under the laws of that state.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By Ruth Cameron.

BUT I never actually felt tired," protested a woman who had completely broken down after a period of overwork.

"No," said the doctor, "of course you didn't. You were too tired for that, but you had other warnings. Nature has a great many danger signals. The most common is the red light of actual physical weariness.

For instance, if at the end of a hard day's work your back aches, you know that you have overdone; but if you meet an acquaintance and simply cannot think of his name, do you connect that also with your overwork?

Again the trick of saying the exact opposite of what you mean. Hot when you mean cold, summer when you want to say winter and so on, I have found, in my own camp at least, to be a reminder that I am overworking.

On Tuesday the organization in control of the Republican party were able to poll in its name and for their candidate 2 votes in the electoral college, with a total popular vote throughout the country of approximately 5,765,000.

No such reversal of fortune has been encountered in our political history. The defeat was that of standpatism. The victory that of progressivism.

Never was fate more richly deserved than the fate that has befallen these men, who, pretending to be true Republicans, ruthlessly overrode the will of the party and attempted to make it the instrument of obstruction and the defense of privilege.

It is the part of wisdom to recognize this. The differences of the late campaign should not be permitted to keep apart genuine progressives. Some of the strongest and ablest men in the progressive movement, Borah, Cummins, Kenyon, for example, remained formally in the Republican party.

There are between the progressivism of Wilson and that of Roosevelt some radical differences. There is outside of the Democratic party among those who voted the Progressive ticket and those who remained "regular," though not reactionary, the most important community of opinion on essential issues of policy.

It is the part of wisdom to recognize this. The differences of the late campaign should not be permitted to keep apart genuine progressives.

There are between the progressivism of Wilson and that of Roosevelt some radical differences. There is outside of the Democratic party among those who voted the Progressive ticket and those who remained "regular," though not reactionary, the most important community of opinion on essential issues of policy.

It is the part of wisdom to recognize this. The differences of the late campaign should not be permitted to keep apart genuine progressives.

There are between the progressivism of Wilson and that of Roosevelt some radical differences. There is outside of the Democratic party among those who voted the Progressive ticket and those who remained "regular," though not reactionary, the most important community of opinion on essential issues of policy.

It is the part of wisdom to recognize this. The differences of the late campaign should not be permitted to keep apart genuine progressives.

There are between the progressivism of Wilson and that of Roosevelt some radical differences. There is outside of the Democratic party among those who voted the Progressive ticket and those who remained "regular," though not reactionary, the most important community of opinion on essential issues of policy.

It is the part of wisdom to recognize this. The differences of the late campaign should not be permitted to keep apart genuine progressives.

There are between the progressivism of Wilson and that of Roosevelt some radical differences. There is outside of the Democratic party among those who voted the Progressive ticket and those who remained "regular," though not reactionary, the most important community of opinion on essential issues of policy.

It is the part of wisdom to recognize this. The differences of the late campaign should not be permitted to keep apart genuine progressives.

There are between the progressivism of Wilson and that of Roosevelt some radical differences. There is outside of the Democratic party among those who voted the Progressive ticket and those who remained "regular," though not reactionary, the most important community of opinion on essential issues of policy.

It is the part of wisdom to recognize this. The differences of the late campaign should not be permitted to keep apart genuine progressives.

There are between the progressivism of Wilson and that of Roosevelt some radical differences. There is outside of the Democratic party among those who voted the Progressive ticket and those who remained "regular," though not reactionary, the most important community of opinion on essential issues of policy.

It is the part of wisdom to recognize this. The differences of the late campaign should not be permitted to keep apart genuine progressives.

There are between the progressivism of Wilson and that of Roosevelt some radical differences. There is outside of the Democratic party among those who voted the Progressive ticket and those who remained "regular," though not reactionary, the most important community of opinion on essential issues of policy.

It is the part of wisdom to recognize this. The differences of the late campaign should not be permitted to keep apart genuine progressives.

There are between the progressivism of Wilson and that of Roosevelt some radical differences. There is outside of the Democratic party among those who voted the Progressive ticket and those who remained "regular," though not reactionary, the most important community of opinion on essential issues of policy.

It is the part of wisdom to recognize this. The differences of the late campaign should not be permitted to keep apart genuine progressives.

There are between the progressivism of Wilson and that of Roosevelt some radical differences. There is outside of the Democratic party among those who voted the Progressive ticket and those who remained "regular," though not reactionary, the most important community of opinion on essential issues of policy.

It is the part of wisdom to recognize this. The differences of the late campaign should not be permitted to keep apart genuine progressives.

There are between the progressivism of Wilson and that of Roosevelt some radical differences. There is outside of the Democratic party among those who voted the Progressive ticket and those who remained "regular," though not reactionary, the most important community of opinion on essential issues of policy.

It is the part of wisdom to recognize this. The differences of the late campaign should not be permitted to keep apart genuine progressives.

There are between the progressivism of Wilson and that of Roosevelt some radical differences. There is outside of the Democratic party among those who voted the Progressive ticket and those who remained "regular," though not reactionary, the most important community of opinion on essential issues of policy.

It is the part of wisdom to recognize this. The differences of the late campaign should not be permitted to keep apart genuine progressives.

There are between the progressivism of Wilson and that of Roosevelt some radical differences. There is outside of the Democratic party among those who voted the Progressive ticket and those who remained "regular," though not reactionary, the most important community of opinion on essential issues of policy.

It is the part of wisdom to recognize this. The differences of the late campaign should not be permitted to keep apart genuine progressives.

There are between the progressivism of Wilson and that of Roosevelt some radical differences. There is outside of the Democratic party among those who voted the Progressive ticket and those who remained "regular," though not reactionary, the most important community of opinion on essential issues of policy.

It is the part of wisdom to recognize this. The differences of the late campaign should not be permitted to keep apart genuine progressives.

There are between the progressivism of Wilson and that of Roosevelt some radical differences. There is outside of the Democratic party among those who voted the Progressive ticket and those who remained "regular," though not reactionary, the most important community of opinion on essential issues of policy.

It is the part of wisdom to recognize this. The differences of the late campaign should not be permitted to keep apart genuine progressives.

Birthday Calendar

If This is Your Birthday Keep your health and that of your family in order, and in affairs in general be cautious. A dull season will trouble you, but later on the signs are favorable.

Letters From the People

The Goldstein Lecture. David Goldstein of Boston, the noted anti-Socialist lecturer was greeted Wednesday night by an immense audience in the Pinney theatre, which most eloquently attests to the intense interest the people have in the Socialist philosophy.

It would be asking too much space to reply in detail to his speech. This must be too brief to do justice to his great effort.

He appealed to the prejudice of his sympathetic hearers, especially to those of the Catholic church, and by taking isolated parts of some of the writings of noted Socialists, proved to his own satisfaction, and to the delight of the unthinking, that those students did not fully believe in the Bible.

He appealed to the prejudice of his sympathetic hearers, especially to those of the Catholic church, and by taking isolated parts of some of the writings of noted Socialists, proved to his own satisfaction, and to the delight of the unthinking, that those students did not fully believe in the Bible.

He appealed to the prejudice of his sympathetic hearers, especially to those of the Catholic church, and by taking isolated parts of some of the writings of noted Socialists, proved to his own satisfaction, and to the delight of the unthinking, that those students did not fully believe in the Bible.

He appealed to the prejudice of his sympathetic hearers, especially to those of the Catholic church, and by taking isolated parts of some of the writings of noted Socialists, proved to his own satisfaction, and to the delight of the unthinking, that those students did not fully believe in the Bible.

He appealed to the prejudice of his sympathetic hearers, especially to those of the Catholic church, and by taking isolated parts of some of the writings of noted Socialists, proved to his own satisfaction, and to the delight of the unthinking, that those students did not fully believe in the Bible.

He appealed to the prejudice of his sympathetic hearers, especially to those of the Catholic church, and by taking isolated parts of some of the writings of noted Socialists, proved to his own satisfaction, and to the delight of the unthinking, that those students did not fully believe in the Bible.

He appealed to the prejudice of his sympathetic hearers, especially to those of the Catholic church, and by taking isolated parts of some of the writings of noted Socialists, proved to his own satisfaction, and to the delight of the unthinking, that those students did not fully believe in the Bible.

He appealed to the prejudice of his sympathetic hearers, especially to those of the Catholic church, and by taking isolated parts of some of the writings of noted Socialists, proved to his own satisfaction, and to the delight of the unthinking, that those students did not fully believe in the Bible.

He appealed to the prejudice of his sympathetic hearers, especially to those of the Catholic church, and by taking isolated parts of some of the writings of noted Socialists, proved to his own satisfaction, and to the delight of the unthinking, that those students did not fully believe in the Bible.

He appealed to the prejudice of his sympathetic hearers, especially to those of the Catholic church, and by taking isolated parts of some of the writings of noted Socialists, proved to his own satisfaction, and to the delight of the unthinking, that those students did not fully believe in the Bible.

He appealed to the prejudice of his sympathetic hearers, especially to those of the Catholic church, and by taking isolated parts of some of the writings of noted Socialists, proved to his own satisfaction, and to the delight of the unthinking, that those students did not fully believe in the Bible.

He appealed to the prejudice of his sympathetic hearers, especially to those of the Catholic church, and by taking isolated parts of some of the writings of noted Socialists, proved to his own satisfaction, and to the delight of the unthinking, that those students did not fully believe in the Bible.

He appealed to the prejudice of his sympathetic hearers, especially to those of the Catholic church, and by taking isolated parts of some of the writings of noted Socialists, proved to his own satisfaction, and to the delight of the unthinking, that those students did not fully believe in the Bible.

He appealed to the prejudice of his sympathetic hearers, especially to those of the Catholic church, and by taking isolated parts of some of the writings of noted Socialists, proved to his own satisfaction, and to the delight of the unthinking, that those students did not fully believe in the Bible.

He appealed to the prejudice of his sympathetic hearers, especially to those of the Catholic church, and by taking isolated parts of some of the writings of noted Socialists, proved to his own satisfaction, and to the delight of the unthinking, that those students did not fully believe in the Bible.

He appealed to the prejudice of his sympathetic hearers, especially to those of the Catholic church, and by taking isolated parts of some of the writings of noted Socialists, proved to his own satisfaction, and to the delight of the unthinking, that those students did not fully believe in the Bible.

He appealed to the prejudice of his sympathetic hearers, especially to those of the Catholic church, and by taking isolated parts of some of the writings of noted Socialists, proved to his own satisfaction, and to the delight of the unthinking, that those students did not fully believe in the Bible.

He appealed to the prejudice of his sympathetic hearers, especially to those of the Catholic church, and by taking isolated parts of some of the writings of noted Socialists, proved to his own satisfaction, and to the delight of the unthinking, that those students did not fully believe in the Bible.

He appealed to the prejudice of his sympathetic hearers, especially to those of the Catholic church, and by taking isolated parts of some of the writings of noted Socialists, proved to his own satisfaction, and to the delight of the unthinking, that those students did not fully believe in the Bible.

He appealed to the prejudice of his sympathetic hearers, especially to those of the Catholic church, and by taking isolated parts of some of the writings of noted Socialists, proved to his own satisfaction, and to the delight of the unthinking, that those students did not fully believe in the Bible.

He appealed to the prejudice of his sympathetic hearers, especially to those of the Catholic church, and by taking isolated parts of some of the writings of noted Socialists, proved to his own satisfaction, and to the delight of the unthinking, that those students did not fully believe in the Bible.

He appealed to the prejudice of his sympathetic hearers, especially to those of the Catholic church, and by taking isolated parts of some of the writings of noted Socialists, proved to his own satisfaction, and to the delight of the unthinking, that those students did not fully believe in the Bible.

He appealed to the prejudice of his sympathetic hearers, especially to those of the Catholic church, and by taking isolated parts of some of the writings of noted Socialists, proved to his own satisfaction, and to the delight of the unthinking, that those students did not fully believe in the Bible.

He appealed to the prejudice of his sympathetic hearers, especially to those of the Catholic church, and by taking isolated parts of some of the writings of noted Socialists, proved to his own satisfaction, and to the delight of the unthinking, that those students did not fully believe in the Bible.

The Evening Story

A Companionable Girl

By EDGAR L. THOMPSON

When I was a tenderfoot in New Mexico, clerking in a bank, I was sent one day with $1,000 for a man who had just opened a store in a settlement on the Pecos river.

I had about fifty miles to go, traveled on horseback and, of course, carried a .42 caliber revolver at my hip. I took a snack with me, but ate it up before 10 o'clock. About 2 in the afternoon I passed a house where there were a lot of horses tied to posts before the door.

Thinking I might get a dinner, I rode up to the door and called out: "Hello, there!"

I heard a commotion inside, and pretty soon a man came to the door. He looked as if he were ready to kill some one if necessary, and I noticed he held his right hand behind him, so that he could have easily drawn on me. He asked what I wanted, and when I told him he said there were a little salt pork and corn pone in the house that I could have if I could worry them down.

I dismounted, went in and found another man and a girl apparently about twenty years old. They gave me the salt pork and when I had finished my meal one of the men asked me where I was going. I told him, and after a conference with the others he came to me and said:

"Neighbor, would you mind helpin' a gal through on the way you're goin'?" "I'd be very glad to do so," I replied.

"Well, Moll, you'd better go with him, and you'd better take two of the horses with you. We won't need 'em. You wouldn't mind leadin' 'em, would you?"

"Not a bit," said Moll. "We'd been on the road together about an hour when we heard a distant clatter of horse hoofs behind us. Moll looked at me, frightened. I asked her what scared her, and she said she was afraid road agents were coming. At the same time she turned her horse's head into a thicket beside the road. I followed her, and after riding a few hundred yards from the road she stopped. We listened and failed to hear the footfalls. Moll looked awfully scared and said she believed whoever she had heard behind us had seen us turn into the wood and were following us and that the reason they made no sound was because they were riding on the turf.

I thought of the thousand dollars I carried, and, thinking a girl might be better able to keep it from men, I told her I had money with me and asked her if she could conceal it on her person for me till the danger had passed. She was too frightened to reply at once, but when I got her attention she took the bills and crammed them into her bosom. I was much pleased, for I felt that they were safer there from men than on me.

It was soon evident that some person, or rather persons, were after us, for we heard them near us in the wood, but we were in a depression, with the bushes thick between us and them, and, although we got glimpses of them, they didn't find us. Our great fear was that one of the horses would betray us by a whinny, but fortunately we escaped that, and in time our pursuers gave up hunting for us in that vicinity. We heard a man call to another, "We've come too far; they turned in farther back." Then we heard them go in the direction from which we had come.

The girl, taking the lead, started up and made for the road farther on, I following. But when she reached it she kept on the turf. I was astonished at the energy and foresight she displayed. She clung to the led horses, though occasionally when fearful of being overhauled she showed signs of turning them aside. Finally, hearing approaching hoof beats on the road in the direction we were going, she let the horses go, striking them with her whip, and they made off into the wood. This done, she modulated her gait, and we rode on at a slow canter. We met a man driving a team, and I expected Moll would warn him of the road agents ahead of him, but she didn't, and we went on till he had passed out of hearing, when she began to lash her horse like a fury. I spurred my own mount to do his best, but it was soon evident that he could not keep up with hers, and the first thing I knew he stumbled and fell, throwing me over his head on the turf beside the road.

I heard the road agents coming, but I could now do nothing to escape them. Indeed, it wasn't necessary since Moll had gone on with the money, at which I was much pleased, as I considered it saved. When our pursuers—three men—came up to me I recognized one of the employees of the bank where I was employed, and he recognized me. He told me that they were after horse thieves, and when I told him my experience he pronounced my friend Moll one of them. The look on my face startled the party, and when they asked for an explanation I told them that Moll had the bank's thousand dollars.

One of the men went after the led horses Moll had let go, while the other two went on after Moll. Had my horse not stumbled I would not have been in a position to inform the pursuers of the direction she had taken and the money I had given her for safe keeping would have been lost. As it was she was captured, but not hanged because she was a woman.

Those I had left at the house escaped with their plunder.

BUT HE HAS HOPES

I REFUSE TO BE INTERVIEWED!

SATTERFIELD