

The Boys Had Run Away

BY J. D. GILLILAN, D. D.

A white-haired man was seen wandering about over the hills of his boyhood home. He remembered the woods grim and deep where many a time he had gone 'coon hunting only to have the following dogs, possums which they would kill after the men had chopped down some forest-king, an oak, a chestnut or great tulip. Acutely and heart smotheringly he recalled also the places in those wilds where the broken escarpments of conglomerate, pebbly cliffs were piled so as to make caves, one of which was called the "Devil's Den." He remembered too, that when he first visited that weird region he heard a peasant drumming on a rotten log, and never having heard such, he thought it was really the devil working at his forge. He could again feel the sensations of his rising hair and his anxious desire to get back home. Now, the forests with their ginseng and May apples are all gone. The woodman's ax had been there. In some places there had been gone so long there was not even a decaying stump left to testify. He roamed across some briary fields that 40 years ago had belonged to his father; here he had hoed corn, cut briars, dug potatoes, and in the long July days when the sun "come down the high way," had cradled wheat. He knew the sites of the slopes and the hollows, for with the clearing of the timber the ancient fences had been reset so as to form new fields. He did not inquire who owned them now nor did he care to know lest he might have met the owner and felt resentful toward him for having disturbed his aforetime holy of holies. The house in which he was born was replaced; it had been a cabin of one room made from logs taken from the frowning wilderness. He did not look at the one that took its place. He slowly picked his way over the plowed area where once was a fence lined with persistent trees and along whose short shadows ran the path in the sacred long-ago when his father led him by the hand to the country Sunday school, and in which he scamped with the other children to the same school house on the knoll. He visited this old school building only to find it was transformed into a church. He walked in dreadful, memory-raising silence about where he and the boys used to play "marvels," town-hall, sock-ball, London "loo" and every other known thing in the line of daylight sports; where also at the spellings and the singing schools, the healthy rustic boys and girls played "hot supper," "snanghail," Jim Hawk, etc., etc., and what not?

The white-haired man became very lonesome. He stood by the fence at the front of the old building where were apparently the same old rails in the staggering worm-fence; it was the same fence over which the racers would vault free of pole or other assistance as they ended their barefoot race cheek by cheek. The ancient became young again and forgot he was a grandfather. He looked about and everywhere for the boys of almost half a century before. He called out: "O boys! Where have you hidden? We are not playing hide-and-seek today; see, I have come back through all these years to visit you. Come, boys, let's climb over the fence in the graveyard here and sit down under the trees and talk just like we used to do. The race has been a long one, fellows, and I am tired. Come, John, Billy, Sammy and others!"

Suiting his action to the word, the old man who for many years had been far out west, climbed over the fence by the now enlarged cemetery where in the rotunda of the capitol. He was 81 years of age. Andrew Jackson—He died on June 8, 1845, 78 years old. He suffered from consumption and finally dropsy, which made its appearance about six months before his death. Martin Van Buren—He died on July 24, 1862, from a violent attack of asthma. He was 80. William Henry Harrison—The result of a cold caught on the day of his inauguration. His death occurred on April 4, 1841, a month after. He was 68 years of age. John Tyler—He died on Jan. 27, 1862, at the age of 72. James K. Polk—In the spring of 1840 he was stricken with a slight attack of cholera while on a boat going up the Mississippi river. Though temporarily relieved, he had a relapse on his return home, and died on June 15, 1849, aged 54 years. Zachary Taylor—The second president to die in office, is said to have partaken immoderately of ice water and iced milk, and then later a large quantity of cherries. The result was an attack of cholera morbus. He was 66 years old. Millard Fillmore—He died from a stroke of paralysis on March 8, 1874, in his 74th year. Franklin Pierce—His death was due to abdominal dropsy, and occurred on Oct. 8, 1869, in the 65th year of his life. James Buchanan—His death occurred on June 1, 1868, and was caused by rheumatic gout. He was 77 years of age. Abraham Lincoln—He was shot by J. Wilkes Booth at Ford's theater, Washington, D. C., on April 14, 1865, and died the following day, aged 56. Andrew Johnson—He died from a stroke of paralysis, July 31, 1875, aged 67. U. S. Grant—He died of cancer of the tongue, at Mt. McGregor, N. Y., July 23, 1885. James A. Garfield—Was shot by Charles J. Gitau on July 2, 1881. He died Sept. 19, 1881. Rutherford B. Hayes—Died Jan. 17, 1893, at Fremont, O., of paralysis of the heart. Chester A. Arthur—Died Nov. 17, 1886, at Long Branch, N. J., of Bright's disease. Grover Cleveland—Died June 24, 1908, at Princeton, N. J., of debility. Benjamin Harrison—Died March 13, 1901, at Indianapolis, Ind., of pneumonia. William McKinley—Died Sept. 14, 1901, at Buffalo, N. Y., assassinated.

George Washington—His death was the result of a severe cold, which brought on acute laryngitis. His death occurred on Dec. 14, 1799. He was 68 years of age. John Adams—He died from old age. He passed away without pain on July 4, 1826, aged 91 years. Thomas Jefferson—He died at the age of 83, a few hours before Adams, diarrhoea. James Madison—He, too, died of old age, and peacefully, on June 28, 1836. He was 85. James Monroe—Died in the 73d year of his age, on July 4, 1831. Death was assigned to no other cause than entailed health. John Quincy Adams—He was stricken with paralysis on Feb. 21, 1848, while addressing the speaker of the house of representatives, being at the time a member of congress. He died among the graves they had eaten the little wild strawberries and read the moss-filled dates on the leaning old headstones, all the while speaking in whispers lest they might disturb the sleepers. He began to look about him and forgot to sit down. Sure enough, some of the boys were there playing hide-and-seek. He found them among the evergreen and the flowers. There by that juniper was the cold, marble monolith carrying John's short history. He and the old man had been rivals for headmarks in the unique spelling classes. So well mixed with the six, they were the ones who seated the six, rail fence at flying-leap, at the long

DEDICATION OF NEW CHURCH AT WEISER

(Capital News Special Service.) Weiser, Nov. 16.—An event of great importance in local church circles will occur here on Thanksgiving day when the handsome new Catholic church will be dedicated with appropriate services, and for which an elaborate program will begin at 10 o'clock will be conducted by Rt. Rev. A. J. Ghorieux of Boise, and the dedicatory sermon will be delivered by Father Keyzer of Boise. Announcements of the event have been sent out and it is expected a large crowd will be present from surrounding towns. The new church is a handsome brick and stone structure, completed at a cost of over $10,000, and is one of the finest of its kind in the northwest. Its final completion reflects great credit upon Father Gotschalx, in charge of the local work, and his co-workers.
