

SLOT MACHINES WILL BE ORDERED FROM ALL STORES

Councilman Woodcock Se- cures Opinion From City Attorney on What Consti- tutes Gambling.

Slot machines of all types and other gambling devices of all kinds must come down from the counters and every form of gambling in the city must stop, is the word given out today by Councilman Woodcock, who, acting upon advice of a written opinion from the city attorney as to what constitutes gambling, proposes to enforce the law to the letter.

Since the stir over gambling in Boise began, Councilman Woodcock has been keeping in close touch with conditions and in order to be perfectly clear before issuing general orders, Mr. Woodcock yesterday secured an opinion from the city attorney, which is as follows:

Boise, Ida., Jan. 13, 1913.
Hon. Thomas P. Woodcock,
Supt. Department Public Safety,
City.

In compliance with your request as to what constitutes gambling and to what extent the police officers are justified and required by law to prohibit certain games and devices, I will say that in my judgment the ordinances of Boise City, prohibit slot machines and games in cigar stores and saloons.

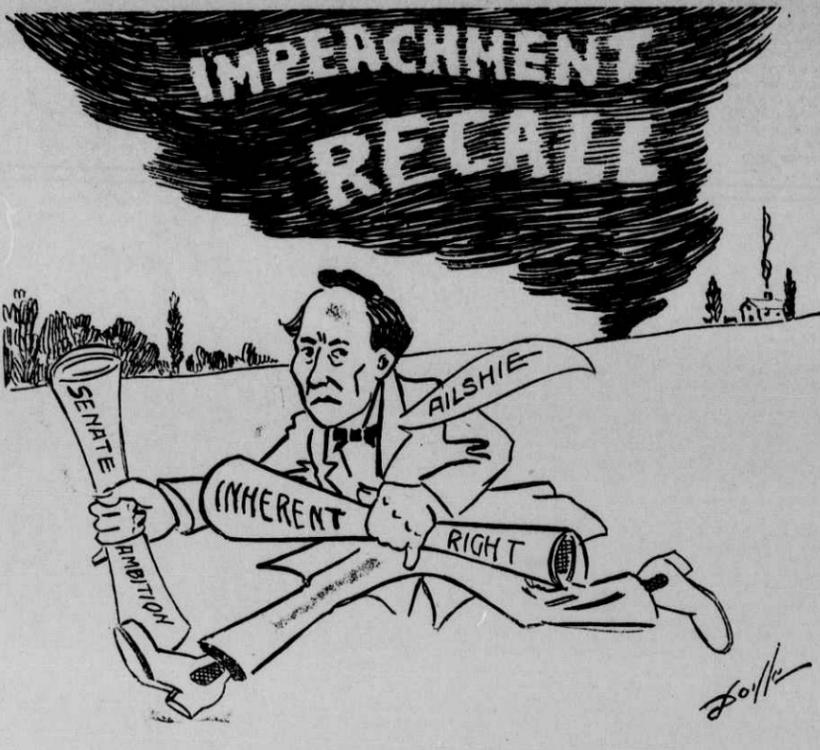

I think under the ordinances of this city a game in a saloon for checks or drinks is gambling within the law and this also applies to cigar stores and other places where checks, credit or any other representation of value is given or received as the result of a game.

A slot machine in my judgment is a gambling device within the ordinances of Boise City, and is just as much prohibited as any other device, contrivance, or game in which there is an element of chance, in which one is winner and the other loser.

Gambling is commonly defined to be a contract between two or more persons by which they agree to play by certain rules at cards, dice or other contrivance, and that one shall be the loser and the other winner, and this contract does not have to be an express agreement, but may be implied by the acts or conduct of either one or both of the parties.

Respectfully submitted,
CHARLES F. REDDOCK,
City Attorney.

COUNTY HEALTH OFFICER REPORTS

Quarantine Is Established at Star on Account of the Smallpox.

"Let's see your certificate."

At the door of every church in Star stands a guard who demands from every worshipper, as he enters, a vaccination certificate from the county health officer before the building is thrown open to him.

The town of Star is quarantined. The churches that have not followed this regulation are closed. The skating rink is shut down. Every place of meeting stands with the brand of the county health department against it until the smallpox scare has passed away, and the people of that community are once more relieved of the danger of the spreading of the plague.

Dr. M. H. Tallman, county health officer, has been on the job night and day fighting against the spreading of the disease. Already seven out of eight members of one family have been taken by the plague, and are in bed, while the baby alone has thus far escaped its ravages. Other families have been affected, and still others have been exposed. Until every person who has been exposed to the dangers of the disease has been vaccinated, and the plague once for all stamped out from the community, the county doctor will maintain a rigid quarantine, and will see that the disease is stopped before it gathers in any more victims in the town and surrounding country.

In a report which Dr. Tallman has made to the board of county commissioners for the work done during the time that he has been in charge of the health department, he mentions 102 surgical dressings, 185 prescriptions and examinations, three visits to the poor farm, 14 visits to the jail, 42 visits to hospitals, and 19 calls on the poor of the county.

He also reports 57 cases of contagious diseases investigated, quarantined and released. Of the quarantined cases, four were scarlet fever, 23 chickenpox, 14 smallpox, and one typhoid fever. In the column for operations, he reports, among other things, an amputation of the toes, a leg amputation, an operation for appendicitis on a jail prisoner, reduction of the dislocation of the shoulder, operation for decompression on the brain, four plaster casts applied, and rendered assistance at the birth of a pair of twins in a county case.

Government Aid for Air Navigation

Charles D. Walcott and Secretary Von L. Meyer (at the top) and Dr. R. S. Woodward.

Dr. R. S. Woodward, president of the National Academy of Science, and a representative of the National Academy of Science, to head the commission means that an expert will guide the deliberations of the board.

Washington, Jan. 14.—When President Taft last week appointed a commission to report on the form and organization of a national aerodynamic laboratory a long step was taken in the direction of securing more scientific information for use in the construction of air craft. The selection of Dr. R. S. Woodward, president of the Carnegie Institute of Washington and a representative of the National Academy of Science, to head the commission means that an expert will guide the deliberations of the board.

The object of the commission, which was created on the recommendation of Secretary of the Navy Meyer, will be to consider and report to the president for recommendation to congress on the necessity or desirability for the establishment of a national aerodynamic laboratory, its scope, organization, the most suitable location for it and the cost of its installation.

In addition to Dr. Woodward, the following were appointed members of the commission: Charles D. Walcott, secretary Smithsonian Institute; S. W. Stratton, director United States bureau of standards; Professor William J. Humphreys, consulting physicist, United States weather bureau; Brigadier General James Allen, U. S. A., chief signal officer; Major Samuel Reber, chief signal officer, eastern district; Captain W. I. Chambers, U. S. N. aviation corps; Naval Constructor David W. Taylor; M. D. Sellers, technical committee, Aeronautical society, New York; Henry A. Wise Wood, scientific engineer, vice president Aero club of America; Dion J. Arnold, scientific engineer Aero club, Chicago; Professor W. F. Durand, scientific engineer, Leland Stanford university, California; Professor Richard MacLaurens, Boston, president Massachusetts Institute Technology; Charles M. Manley, New York; Harold M. Sewall, Bath, Me.; Herbert Parsons, New York; Colonel Frederick H. Smith, Peoria, Ill.; Frank West Holling, New Hampshire, and Dr. A. F. Zahn, secretary Aero club of Washington.

In his letter to the president recommending the appointment of the committee, Secretary Meyer said:

"The construction of aircraft among the leading powers of Europe is now based largely on scientific information obtained at their notable aerodynamic laboratories, and the installation of such a plant in this country is regarded as a necessity to our commercial interests and to the production of safety and efficiency in our air crafts."

In his annual report, Rear Admiral Philip Andrews, chief of the bureau of navigation of the navy department, pointed out that, through the delay in establishing an aerodynamic laboratory in the United States, there had resulted a waste of time and money and a decline of prestige and unnecessary sacrifice of human life among aviators.
