LAW'S "DOUBTFUL REMEDY."

(Salt Lake Tribune) The most curious portion of the curious decision of the Idaho supreme court in the notorious contempt case was its discussion of the possible remedy that might be sought by the court other than punishment for contempt.

Here is a most extraordinary admission to make. The supreme court of the state of Idaho considers that an action at law for the redress against contumely and insult is "a doubtful remedy."

The very statement of the case ought to show that the court is decidedly wrong; but if the court is determined not to submit tamely to contumely and insult, does not wish to resent the same by force, and considers that a remedy at law is of too doubtful a character to be entertained, the court thereby gives away its own case in pretending that its course was legal.

The more the procedure of the Idaho court is considered, the worse it appears; and of all the arraignment made of that court, this arraignment made by itself is about the worst.

But its victims have served their term in jail, and their fines are being paid by cent subscriptions all over the country.

BUT ONE CHANGE TODAY IN THE BALLOTING FOR SENATOR

Ailshie Gains One From Beale, While All Others Remain the Same as on the First Ballot

The result of the second ballot for short term senator taken this afternoon by the joint session of the legislature leaves the senatorship still in doubt. Ailshie gained one vote from Beale, but the rest of the candidates are in the same positions occupied yesterday at the close of the first ballot.

With the one exception of the defection of Representative Sargent of Kootenai from the ranks of the Beale followers to Ailshie, the balloting was without incident. The certification by the lieutenant governor of the election of Borah and the reading of a telegram from the senator however, furnished an excuse for the legislators and visitors to applaud vigorously.

In a telegram expressing his best wishes for a successful session, Senator Borah conveyed his thanks to the legislators and the people of Idaho for his re-election. He also took occasion to laud the recent message to the legislature of Governor Haines.

PROMOTION OF NEW RAILROAD TAKEN OUT OF HANDS OF COMMERCIAL CLUB

The fact that Oregon Short Line officials and their friends directed the affairs of a railroad meeting at the Commercial club caused a secession of the boosters for the Wells, Nev., line, and a meeting in the city hall last night that started something unknown to the members of the club.

Charles J. Sinsel, chief fruit inspector of the Oregon Short Line, and incidentally president of the Boise Commercial club, seems to have been the chief cause of the split. The fact that he presided at the meeting in the club rooms and that an apparent effort was made by some of those present to steer the talk to other proposed lines aroused the friends of the Nevada road and made them hold a session meeting of their own without inviting any of those who were prominent in the other session to be present.

The boosters of the new company seemed to think, when seen today, that the "Short Line bunch" were trying to head off the other road, although they talked loudly in favor of it. The fact that no definite steps have been taken, as a result of that meeting, forced the boosters to hold one of their own, a fact that was decidedly a surprise to some of the members of the club today.

The boosters plan to go ahead on their own lines of operation and to leave the officials and friends of the Short Line out of consideration altogether in future meetings and programs that will be had.

"As I look back over the last 20 years it seems to me my debt to the people of Idaho is far greater than I shall ever be able to pay but I shall certainly never cease in my effort to serve and honor them according to my ability. I know to whom I owe all that I have in the way of place and honor and to them I will give my services unto the end.

Protest Against Lobbying. An incipient mutiny on the part of Senator Defenbach of Bonner which was quickly quelled in the making by the mailed fist of the lieutenant governor also set the crowd on edge, although many were unaware of the importance of the action.

Just as the balloting was to begin Senator Defenbach interrupted the president and asked that a resolution he had presented be read. After glancing over the contents of the paper, Lieutenant Governor Taylor promptly notified the senator from Bonner that his request was out of order and the matter ended.

Senator Defenbach's resolution called for the reading by the clerk of the first sentence of section 6416 of the revised codes relating to lobbying. The senator from Bonner objected to the apparent efforts on the part of lobbyists to influence the votes of the members in behalf of their candidates for the senatorship and believed that by calling the attention of the joint session to the section of the codes prohibiting lobbying, that some action would be taken to prevent it.

After adjournment, Senator Defenbach declared that the efforts of the lobbyists for a certain candidate were so "brazen and obvious" that he felt impelled to call the matter to the attention of the members. He said that in spite of the steam roller he believed that the section of the statutes had been called sufficiently to the attention of the legislature.

Among the speakers were Governor Gooding, Moses Alexander and J. G. Gravelly, although nearly all of the persons present had something to say favorable to the plan.

Gooding Very Enthusiastic. Governor Gooding was enthusiastic in his declaration that a grand opportunity is just now presented to Boise and that the city should at once take steps toward the construction of a railroad which would give it east and west connections with transcontinental lines, and particularly to reap its proportionate share of benefit to be secured by the west through the completion of the Panama canal.

Although he prescribed no particular route he spoke in favor of a line from Boise to Twin Falls, from which point the object sought could be readily and easily obtained. He asserted that the completion of the canal meant the building of several large cities on the coast and increase in the population and business of the present cities, and declared that Boise should not pass by the opportunity to expand with her neighbors.

The fact that there are more than 15,000,000 acres of arid land in the Snake river valley will attract attention to this part of the west and Idaho, the former governor said. He closed his remarks with an earnest appeal to the citizens to take advantage of the opportunity presented, and promised to support the project to the end.
