

SE PLANE N. C. 4 BELIEVED LOST IN GULF MEXICO

Famous Navy Flying Boat Leaves Galveston for Mobile, Ala., Yesterday Morning—Missing Early Today.

BULLETIN. Washington, Dec. 20.—No word of the missing N. C. 4, had been received by the navy department at 2 o'clock this morning. The famous boat is now more than nine hours overdue, according to officials here. Meager reports indicated all available naval craft in the vicinity are searching for the plane. The navy department had received no word of the landing of the N. C. 4, at Morgan City, La.

Mobile, Ala., Dec. 20.—The N. C. 4, the navy's famous flying boat, which was the first to cross the Atlantic, was still missing in the Gulf of Mexico shortly after midnight tonight. Another naval plane, the H-26, on a flight from Galveston to Pensacola, is down with a broken propeller near Morgan City, La., according to reports received here.

Both of the navy planes left Galveston shortly after 9 o'clock yesterday morning and the N. C. 4 was due yesterday afternoon. The gulf is generally calm and the fact that the N. C. 4 has weathered the rough seas of the Atlantic strengthens the belief that it is safe but was forced to land with engine trouble. A heavy fog may delay the rescue.

Naval wireless is broadcasting word to all vessels in the gulf to be on the lookout for the famous plane and flying boats and submarine chasers are rushing out from naval stations along the coast in the hunt.

Commander A. C. Read, who successfully took the big boat across the Atlantic, was piloting the N. C. 4. His wife is waiting for him here but feels confident he is safe. The belief is that the craft is near the Louisiana coast. General orders were for it to follow the coast line.

The N. C. 4 was on recruiting duty in cities along the gulf. After being brought back from Plymouth, England, the terminus of its trans-Atlantic flight, it left Washington about six weeks ago on a flight down the Atlantic and gulf coast line.

After its work of stimulating navy aviation recruiting was completed, the N. C. 4 was to have a permanent place in the national museum in Washington.

Chicago, Dec. 20.—Music will say Chicago's farewell to Cleofonte Campanini, hero of the city's grand opera. Campanini died Friday as the opera season was reaching its climax.

The Auditorium dark and silent since his death, will be thrown open Sunday afternoon for a memorial service in which no word will be spoken. Singers Campanini raised from obscurity to stardom will chant simple Requiem and the orchestra in which he took the greatest pride will express the sorrow of the musicians and their prayers for the dead.

Campanini's body will be taken to Italy next spring.

THE CUMMINS BILL Washington, Dec. 20.—Outstanding provisions of the Cummins railroad bill, passed by the senate today, are: Return of the roads to private ownership. Compulsory consolidation of all the railroads of the country into not less than 20 nor more than 35 main systems. Control of the roads exercised by a new transportation board with greater powers than those of the interstate commerce commission with technical details left to the commission. For rate making purposes, the country is divided into seven regions. The roads are to be allowed rates that will guarantee them 5 1/2 per cent on the aggregate property value in each region above the rate fixed to be divided between the government and the roads. Absolute prohibition of strikes and lockouts, with heavy penalties for violation of this provision. Labor disputes to be referred to a board of five members with appeal to the supreme court.

BOISE CIVIC CHORUS WILL PRESENT 'THE MESSIAH' NEXT WEEK

Prominent Soloists Coming Here From Salt Lake to Take Part in Presentation Which Will Be Dec. 29-30.

"The Messiah" will be presented at the First Methodist church Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 29 and 30, with Eugene Farnar as conductor. The same soloists who will sing "The Messiah" in Salt Lake, will appear in the local presentation. These are: Miss Margaret Summerhays, soprano; Miss Evelyn Beuhler, contralto; Fred Graham, tenor; Melvin Peterson, basso.

These soloists are being brought to Boise through the efforts of C. E. Rose, city school superintendent, and Lewis Emig. It is the purpose of the Boise civic chorus, which is promoting the presentation of "The Messiah," to give a concert shortly after "The Messiah" to defray the expenses incident to "The Messiah" production. Included in the evening's program will be "The Peace Pipe," by Converse, a leading American composer. Also his "Answer of the Stars," "The Eulogy of the Banner of St. George," and "It Came from the Misty Aes," by the leading English choral composer, Elgar, will also be given. In the spring "Music Week" will be observed again, with many new features.
