MORE FARMERS ARE NEEDED

It has been said that "he who causes two blades of wheat to sprout where only one grew before is a great benefactor of mankind" and so he is, and this being so, when we think in multiples of tens, hundreds and thousands, what a wonderful benefaction is the bringing of greater agricultural areas under cultivation, for the increased production of all kinds of food products?

In any section, increase in production is best accomplished when two farmers are encouraged to establishing where only one was before; in other words, if we can get two farmers to each work forty acres of any given eighty acre tract, or four farmers to work any given 160 acre tract and work these forties intensively, much more can be accomplished and everyone more greatly benefited than when one farmer works the 80 acre tract alone, or one or two farmers work the 160 acres.

The Union Pacific System, with the thought always uppermost of building up the territory or states through which it operates, has put forth far reaching efforts in colonization for many years, and at this time maintains at Union Pacific System headquarters, Omaha, Nebraska, a perfectly organized Colonization and Industrial Bureau, the purpose of which is to multiply agricultural and industrial units as rapidly and as effectively as possible. To best accomplish this purpose, it needs the wholehearted and general support of the public; of farmers already happily established in Union Pacific System territory, of dwellers in towns and cities, of travellers and anyone who has the well-being of the country and its citizens genuinely at heart, and who, with a modicum of common foresight could fail to have such interest?

Co-operation for the increased population of agricultural sections can be accomplished in many ways:

If you are established as an agriculturist in Oregon Short Line territory, and you personally know of good acreage in your vicinity available for purchase or settlement, write us and tell us all about it. If you have friends in the east who are agriculturists but who desire to change their locations, and you cannot exactly convince them of the advantages of making the change let us have their names and addresses; maybe we can help them to a favorable location. The same co-operation may be accomplished by city or town residents or any one.

One of the difficulties of the average farmer in seeking a location is to know exactly where he can secure the kind of a farm he wants, either for purchase or settlement. People on the ground know best about local opportunities.

Keep in mind the well-being of the Union Pacific System is the well-being of your territory, and the well-being of your territory is the well-being of yourself.

You are supremely interested in the welfare of the railroad, just as you are interested in the roads over which you drive, or in the good fences, good homes or well-kept farms by which you pass.—D. S. SPENCER, General Passenger Agent, Union Pacific System, Salt Lake City, Utah. adv 110
