W. L. BROWN.

Cottonwood, Idaho.

E. E. Travis, general manager of the Idaho, California and Nevada Stage Line, was in the city from Grangeville last Monday on business connected with the Cottonwood-Lewiston route.

Messrs. Patterson and Bartman brought up the longest string of wagons from Stuart the other day that was ever hauled to the prairie by twelve good horses. The string comprised fifteen heavy wagons and six hacks, a total weight of 22,000 pounds. They are the property of H. H. Nuxoll.

The board of village trustees met twice since our last issue, once on Saturday and again on Wednesday night, transacting considerable business. Among other things recently done was the appointment of Wm. Bash as marshal of the village. He took the oath of office last Wednesday evening and is now prepared to take care of all people who need it. Look out for Billy.

J. H. Hunt, a pioneer of Camas Prairie, a man who knew all our fathers well and who years ago taught school here, was in the city on business and shaking hands with his old acquaintances several days this week. Mr. Hunt was one of the first men now living to view the present townsite of Cottonwood and can recognize many old timers in the faces of the younger generation by the resemblance they bear their fathers who have gone to the great beyond.

SCHOOL REPORT.

The following is the roll of honor of the scholars who have been neither absent nor tardy at our public schools during the past school month:

Grammar dept. Prof. Steinger principal. Number enrolled, 18.

Harriet Nelson, Clara Deardorf, Mattie Howell and Eva Robertson.

Intermediate, Miss May Hayden teacher. Number enrolled, 53.

John Rooke, Eugene Maxey, Cassie Odell, Nona Libbey, Walter Odell, Bertha Tefft, Harry Deardorf and Mary Howell.

Primary, Miss Ople Swank teacher. Number enrolled, 57.

Leland Bartlett, Lloyd Turner, Art Rhodes, Okie Kinkade, Esther Nelson, Robert Patterson, Josie Crawford, Ora Robbins, Nute Robbins, Lewis Ingle, Christina Ingle and Inez Brownlee.

It seems to us that the number of those neither absent nor tardy is very small in comparison to the large number of scholars enrolled and should be more strictly attended to by the parents. It is not reasonable to suppose that a child who is continually absent or tardy can make as good progress in school work as one who is always present.

The different departments of the school have been receiving new scholars this month and are now so crowded that it is almost impossible to do the students justice.

A literary society has been organized in the grammar department and is doing nicely. Chas. Blackburn is president and Miss Eva Robertson secretary. The society will open its doors to the public in the near future.

Prof. Steinger tells us that he has ordered the first books toward starting a magnificent school library.

The school this week received a number of government books from Senator Shoup, for which they are duly thankful.
