Lewis Jones and Walter and Ernest Lemons and Rich Nash came out the first of the week from their home across the river with a couple of carloads of beef cattle which they sold to John Baer for shipment to Spokane. The cattle were a mixed bunch and brought five and six cents a pound on the local market.

The first snow of the season fell Monday morning and, while it did not amount to anything and later turned to rain, the cold weather proved very disagreeable for this early in the season and put a gloomy look on the faces of the citizens who were promoting the fair.

F. L. Leonard, general agent for Idaho county of the Western Union Life Insurance company of Spokane, was in the city last Friday from Grangeville in company with C. M. Carson, superintendent of agencies for the company. The gentlemen were here fixing up the papers for the policy held by Jesse Hockersmith and we understand the policy was paid to the father of the deceased this week. This is certainly quick action by the company.

Joseph Hatke and wife and Henry Luchtefeld and wife departed Tuesday morning for their homes at Effingham, Illinois, after spending several weeks here with relatives. Mr. Luchtefeld and Mrs. Hatke are brother and sister of Barney Luchtefeld, of Keuterville, and also have a number of other relatives and old friends in this locality. It was their first visit to the prairie and they were very favorably impressed with our country and agreeably surprised at the crops grown here. They were accompanied east by Mrs. Fiedler, mother of the Mesdames Ruhoff, who was returning home to St. Joe, Minn., after a visit of several months here with her daughters.

Peter Bieren, who has leased his mother's farm north of town for a period of years, joined the list of Chronicle readers this week.

Sidney Brown treated himself and family to some of the best pleasures of life this week by investing part of the profits of his fine grain crop in the new Page auto that has been displayed here for the past two or three weeks by the Cottonwood Hardware company. The car is a dandy and Sidney is in every way worthy of the pleasures it will provide.

Geo. Rustemeyer and Adolph Hinkelman returned Friday evening from their trip to the latter's farm near Tekoa, Wash., and George will return there later in the season and take charge of the place for a year at least. On the trip up they stopped over in Garfield for the night and struck that place just at the time of the annual fall Round-Up. As a consequence sleeping quarters were at a premium and the only place they could secure was a small bed in a narrow corner room. During the night George thought a chunk of real north pole weather had descended on them and dreamed that some one had tied a block of ice to his feet but on waking up found that his pedal extremities had worked out through the foot of the bed and were dangling from the second story window and being toyed with by the cool evening zephyrs. George says no more Garfield for him.
