BASIN THAT FIRES BULLETS

New and Frightful Weapon of War is Operated Without the Aid of Any Explosive.

Can you imagine a gun which makes neither noise nor smoke, uses no explosive, is worked entirely by a petrol engine, and can shoot 1,200 rounds a minute at ranges up to 2,000 yards?

Such a weapon is being tested by the British military authorities. It works on the principle of centrifugal force—the same force that flings mud onto your back when you are cycling on a wet day, or causes giant fly wheels in factories to burst suddenly into hundreds of fragments. Anything that is placed upon a revolving wheel is carried to its edge and then hurled off.

The new gun consists of a metal basin in which are placed a quantity of round steel bullets. As the basin is whirled at enormous speed by a petrol motor the bullets are allowed to escape from an opening in the disk. Shutters are provided which prevent the bullets from being thrown out except at one point.

One feature of the gun is that it can be regulated to meet the requirements of the occasion. Spin the magazine rapidly and its missiles will crash through an oaken plank a mile away. But let it revolve at a low speed and it will pour out a stream of bullets which stun, but do not kill, at even such a short range as 20 yards.

NOT 'FINGER-PRINT' INVENTOR

Dr. Jacques Bertillon Has Been Given Credit Which Properly Should Belong to Englishman.

Coupled with the announcement of the death of Dr. Jacques Bertillon in Paris was the erroneous statement that he was the inventor of the "Bertillon system for finger-printing." In collaboration with his elder brother. The facts are that the system was invented by his younger brother, and that it had nothing whatever to do with finger-printing, which was introduced as a rival system of identification by the late Sir Francis Galton, the cousin of Charles Darwin, who also invented composite photography and the now familiar term "eugenics." Alphonse Bertillon, born in 1855 and died in 1914, for many years the head of the criminal investigation bureau of the city of Paris police department, was the inventor of the so-called "Bertillon system" of anthropometry for the identification of criminals. It had nothing to do with finger-prints, but consisted of an elaborate series of measurements of parts of the body with instruments of precision.

The making of these measurements required delicate and costly instruments and the work of skilled men, and it was, moreover, found that changes in even adult bodies made the system far from infallible. For these reasons the system, though still employed in France, has in America, Great Britain and elsewhere largely been supplanted by Galton's system of finger-printing or thumb-printing.

WAS BORN "IN THE PURPLE"

Known Now That John Wesley Was of the Same Descent as the Duke of Wellington.

A movement to restore the tomb of John Wesley, which is in an advanced stage of decay, and the renovation of his chapel on the thoroughfare known as City road, London, is already under way in England, and an effort is being made to interest American Methodists.

The tomb, the chapel and Wesley's house occupy a site given to him in 1775 by the city of London, not far from the old cannon foundry on Finsbury square, the first home of Methodism in London. Wesley's death occurred in 1791 in the house granted him by the city.

Notwithstanding the popular belief that Wesley was of humble origin it has been established that he was related to one Guy of Weiswe, who was created an earl by King Athelstane in the Tenth century, Wesley is descended, according to these findings, from the same ancestor as the duke of Wellington.

In 1735 John Wesley came to America and settled in Georgia, and started the "Second Rise of Methodism," the movement having been founded at Oxford from which Wesley was a graduate, ten years before.

Waitress' Name on Card.

The old "Is that our waitress?" problem has been solved by the management of a tea, sandwich and ice cream room in one of the midtown hotels popular with theatrical folk. The patron is never at a loss to know how to address his servitor, or servitress, for under the glass of each table is slipped a neatly lettered card giving the name of the waitress assigned to it. Thus:

"Your waitress' name is Mary," or "Your waitress' name is Lillian."

"Yes, it is a great improvement," mused one patron the other evening as he lingered over a beverage blasphemously listed as mint julep. "But remember in the old days in this same place they didn't have to have a card on the mirror saying: 'The bartender's name is Duve.'"—New York Sun.

Bands on His Cigars.

Mr. Blake hesitated at the entrance of the cigar store for a few minutes looked up and down the street carefully and then cautiously went inside and shook hands with the proprietor. "Well, Jim, old man, what'll it be today? Same old brand?" "That's just it," whispered Blake. "That's why I came to see you today. You see, this is my birthday and the wife is on the way here to buy me a box of cigars. Would it be too much trouble for you to put some of those pretty cigar bands on my favorite brand?"—New York Mail.

A Contradiction.

President Ethel Enders Ellison of the Housewives' league, said in an address in Denver:

"Oh, these egg profiteers! Dra't 'em!"

"They tell me the Chicago Egg exchange sells more eggs every hour than all the hens of America could lay in a year. And every time an egg is sold its price, of course, goes up a little, while its real value goes down. Eggs, in short, keep dear, but how liable you are at breakfast, to meet with one that turns out to be a little cheaper!"

Saving Our Gas.

It is reckoned by the bureau of mines that 50,000,000 gallons of gasoline were recovered at refineries in 1921 from uncondensed still vapors. Such an economy has a strong appeal for motorists, inasmuch as it has a bearing upon the price of the indispensable liquid fuel. But it is further estimated that if a like system were adopted by all refineries more than twice as much in addition might be saved, say 120,000,000 gallons altogether, which would thus be added yearly to the country's total output.

Where Did You Get That Suit and Overcoat?

I got them from Richard & Son our home tailors.

How much did you pay for them?

Oh! just a little more than ready made prices. They surely fit well.

I'm going right over and get measured for a suit and overcoat.

Their cleaning and pressing is A-1 and reasonable in price, everyone says we are glad we have a tailor shop in our town. Listen John we must patronize them so they can stay with us.
