The Horrors of Hell Pictured With Awful Realism.

A Hand to Hand Grapple With His Satanic Majesty Over the Possession of the Sinner.

The six big electric lights in the Gracey Warehouse sizzled and sputtered last night over the heads of the largest religious assembly that was ever witnessed in Clarksville. It was the sixth night of the San Jones meeting and by large odds the most important. Saint and sinner alike were swayed, as it were, by one great sympathetic impulse.

Mr. Jones took no text, affirming his purpose to talk informally—as if he were sitting in their homes looking his auditors in the face. "I ask you the plain, honest question, why will you continue in sin? I do not ask you why you were born or why you have lived in sin. That involves questions that are not pertinent to the point at issue. But why do you continue an impenitent sinner before God? What is sin? St. John says it is the transgression of the law. Man is a sinner; he deliberately and persistently disobeys God. Why do you continue to refuse to do things God imposes on you? In view of your past and your future I have a right to ask you the question." Holding up a Bible, the preacher said it contained truths that outweighed the world and all the stars. "If what is said in this book is true, man must die, and die he must, whether true or not. Wonderful book! In Genesis we read of our creation; one page is devoted to my origin and a thousand pages warn me of my death. In view of these solemn warnings of the final judgment to which we are all approaching, I look you in the face and ask you, why will you continue in sin? Is there a man who says he will go on because he does not know what sin is? Is there one here who has never read the ten commandments, or one not informed all along the moral lines of life? Every criticism that you pass upon the conduct of another denotes to God and the angels that you know what is right. My foot slips and instantly I am seized upon and mercilessly criticised. Then if you know what is wrong in others why plead your own ignorance.

At this point Mr. Jones took from his pocket a letter. Some lady had written him the information that a party of gentlemen proposed to start on a hunt on the Lord's day. Said he: "God have mercy on their souls; we be to that town and sentiment of a community when professing Christians load guns and call dogs to desecrate the Sabbath—an institution that we should hold as sacred as the honor of our wives and the purity of our daughters. The Lord will hold to stern account the Sabbath-breaker, the adulterer, the covetous. Is there a man before me who is so ignorant that he will plead that he doesn't know what sin is? Did a man ever look a criminal judge in the face and say he committed a crime because he didn't know it was wrong. There are men here who will say they are ignorant of the consequence of a sinful life; some men say there is no hell, no future punishment. Such men must fly into the pages of the bible. What of Noah and Pharaoh; the burning hail that destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah; the destruction of Sennacherib's army and his 185,000 sturdy soldiers. Look at the past with its drowned worlds and burnt up cities; Ananias and Sapphira. Look the facts in the face and say that the wicked shall go unpunished. Wicked men want no judgment; no future punishment. As certain as there is a heaven there is a hell, into which all men and nations who forget God shall be turned. Deny it and you are a braver man than I am, or ever expect to be. The only facts of the future are revealed in this book. Men of science have climbed to the stars and delved into the earth and yet they know no more of the hidden future than a ten-year-old child. Science never yet sent emissaries to or brought messages from that unknown world to which we are all tending. The man who takes issue with the great God will find at last that He meant what He said. The natural, inevitable legitimate home of the good man is in heaven, to which he gravitates as naturally as does the bad man to hell. No minister is loyal to God who doesn't preach this doctrine. Methan, Edwards, Spurgeon, Moody and a host of others believed that every sinner will be turned into hell.

The mistake of many a man's life has been that he did not prepare to meet his God. Just so certain as fire burns, as certain as effect follows cause; that the rising sun chases away the darkness, just so certain shall the wicked be turned into hell. Just as certain as that poor, bleary-eyed drunkard is within three months of a drunkard's grave, just so certain will he go to hell. Momentous issues hang about an inevitable eternity. Men lie down and die like an ox. Why will they not accept as true the solemn warnings of a future fate. If he does his salvation is assured; if false (I dare not but it that way) he will come out with the best of them. Oh! the stolid indifference of men. The sinner was compared to the daring Alpine hunter. Facts meet us and facts overtake us, Indifferent! Men drink themselves into hell indifferently. God pity the man who walks your streets indifferent of these great issues. Amid all the waywardness of my life I never was indifferent about spiritual matters. I never went to church in my life that I was not aroused by the sermon I heard. I preach to young people with all theunction of my soul, and they receive it with stolid indifference enough to make the world fall upon its knees. God, awake the young people and show them their danger.

Here the evangelist paused, and with much solemnity said: I have one request to make. I am informed that the German Club of Clarksville contemplates soon a grand calico ball. I want some one to record the names of the participants, and write me twelve months hence the individual history of each one. What a record will ten years hence reveal in the lives of these young men and women! They propose to trample under their feet the word of God, to mock and scoff Him, dance and whirl, and finally fall over the precipice and scream their way to hell. Stolid indifference!

You say: "No, sir, I am not ignorant of the effect of these things." Are you reckless as to consequences? Seventeen men in this town selling liquor, when God has said unto the man who putteth the bottle to his neighbor's lips, selling stuff to drench the world in damnation. Some men reach the point where they seem greedy for damnation. There are men in your cemeteries out there, and whose souls are in hell, who ought to be in this tabernacle to-night. They might have lived twenty years longer, but not content to sit quietly and die naturally, they ran, skipped and leaped into hell. By their stolid indifference men curse God to his face. A sight like that is enough to make the devil hide his black face under his wing. Will you tell me you are not reckless. The good spirit moved some here last night. Will you say that you will attend to this matter at a more convenient season—to-morrow, perhaps. Pharaoh said "to-morrow" and the last time we heard from him he was swallowed in the Red sea. There is not a soul in hell that didn't say "to-morrow." Rally your manhood and say "now." Men think of stocks and bonds and everything else but their duty and destiny. I am pushing the question on you. Fly from this apathy. I am preaching to men who will close their eyes and never wake up save in hell. Appealing to men to run up the white flag in token of surrender to God, assuring his hearers that he had not for twenty years preached a more earnest sermon, the evangelist extended an invitation to the unconverted to come forward and manifest a desire to quit sin by giving him their hand. To this a great many responded. Others were invited forward who had determined to unite with some church. Among them were several prominent business men. Subsequently he invited a similar expression from church members who had been living away from God, disobeying his commands in divers ways. Hundreds went forward with earnest faces and gave their hands to the preacher. To many it was a glorious occasion.

A tremendous crowd heard Mr. Jones preach this morning from the text: "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

American Cholera.

Daily Reveille, Whatcom, Wash.: "T. C. Burnett, the Democratic candidate for Sheriff, was taken violently ill at Clearbrook. He had all the symptoms of Asiatic cholera, and for an hour or two it was feared he would die. They finally gave him a dose of Chamberlain's Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which revived him until a physician arrived." That is precisely what the manufacturers of that medicine recommend for cholera. Send for a physician, but give their medicine until the physician arrives. If cholera becomes prevalent in this country next summer, this preparation will be in great demand because it can always be depended upon. For sale by Owen & Moore, druggists.

GOWNS FOR THE HOME

OLIVE HARPER DESCRIBES SOME SIMPLE BUT ATTRACTIVE DRESSES.

They May Be Readily Duplicated by Interested Readers—White Silk Stockings Are Again in Favor—Some Novelties in Lace—Dancing Dresses.

[Special Correspondence.] NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—In these days, when every kind of goods is so cheap and so pretty and dress are so plausibly made, there is no excuse for a young girl being carelessly dressed. All that is required now in dainty dressmaking suitable for young ladies is a plain skirt with very scant trimming, and with here and there a deft distinguishing touch on sleeves or bodice.

HOME GOWNS FOR YOUNG LADIES.

Two of the very prettiest dresses I have seen this year were made on a model that any one could follow. One was of hunter's green faille cut princess, with the upper part of the waist filled in, and the sleeves made of apple green crepe de chine. The corsage had two very narrow silver braids outlining the peasant's bodice, and straps of hunter's green velvet. A narrow belt and sash ends were made of apple green ribbon. This color can be worn only by a pure, peachy blood. In different shades, brown, blue or any other becoming color or material it would be quite as taking a dress.

The other was of cadet blue cashmere, with a pretty passermenterie of black and gold. The dress was cut entirely en princess. A very odd and graceful effect was obtained by draping a width of white crepe de chine from the bust to the hips, and then letting it fall to the bottom of the skirt on each side. It is very simple and yet gives quite an elaborate appearance. The sleeves are balloon, with the forearm covered with the passermenterie. This, however, is not necessary, and they could be plain or of other material if preferred.

Notice among the new evening and dancing dress materials a beautiful new silk tissue. It comes in all the evening colors, and among them pea green and apple green, two shades that light up beautifully. This tissue is plain and striped. The plain is lighter, but the striped gives a very fine effect, and much variety can be brought out by different ways of cutting the tissue. It is stiffer than chiffon and stronger than tulle, and makes the ideal dancing dress.

The prettiest slippers in the world are seen now for dancing. They are of white, pearl gray and black, as well as of some delicate tints, and are made of undressed kid, with rather high red or black heels, and the toes round up to the prettiest little point, as if they were just ready to twinkle off in a frolicsome dance and could hardly keep still. Some few have fine steel or pearl beads worked on them, but the most are plain. The plain ones look smaller on the feet.

White silk stockings are now the newest and prettiest. There are those of other colors, but white, with dainty mill skirts, with their plump ruffles, are quite too pretty for anything.

There is a strong leaning toward hand-crocheted lace for trimming all undergarments now. Hamburg edgings are made by machinery and have become too common, imitation laces do not wear well or look well after a washing, and real lace cannot bear many washings, and hand embroidery has not the lightness that seems to belong to the fineness of finish necessary to underwear. Crocheted trimming is strong, durable, pretty and has an unmistakable appearance of patient hand labor, so it is now the trimming. Yokes and sleeves to chemises are made of it, insertions and ruffles for drawers are crocheted, and it surely is the right thing in the right place for once. Dainty baby ribbons are run through the meshes and tied in bewitching little knots.

A very handsome carriage and walking costume for a young married lady so struck my taste that I reproduce it here. The camel cape was of black broadcloth, with the under-front of black velvet. The cape was richly beaded.

CARRIAGE AND WALKING COSTUME. It altogether a superb outfit, particularly with the addition of the four story hat, often trimmed with velvet, plumes and ribbons. OLIVE HARPER.

RAILROAD MAGNATES.

They Hold an Important Meeting With Regard to Southern Rates.

Special to the Leaf-Chronicle.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—At the request of Mr. W. F. Clyde, the owners and presidents of every railroad and steamship line east of the Mississippi and south of the Ohio river have been called to meet here to-day. The purpose is to talk over the rate situation in the South.

Another meeting of the traffic managers of these same lines has been called for the 15th inst., in this city, at which the plans to be agreed upon at the previous meeting will be carried into practical effect. This is part of a grand plan which the present managers of the Richmond Terminal system have conceived to help not only Richmond Terminal, but all other roads in the South. Mr. Clyde claims that an agreement on the part of these companies to advance rates will make a difference to Richmond Terminal of over $4,000,000 a year and a difference of $10,000,000 to Southern roads generally. The reduction of Southern rates was brought about partly by competition on east and west bound business with the central and northern routes and partly by water competition. Chairman Midgley, of the Western Freight Association, spent a long time trying to get the Southern roads to restore rates, but without success.

Blow Your Nose.

Alas, too often an admonition of a mother to her child. The poor innocent has probably inherited catarrh and is not responsible for its sore and filthy nostrils. Did you know that tender soft thin skin lining the nostrils, called the mucous membrane, extends all over the body. Every organ in the system and every orifice at the surface has this thin delicate lining as a protector. So you see what a fix the body is thrown into when the mucous membrane becomes irritated and inflamed by constant friction with poisonous matter in the blood. Catarrh, leucorrhoea and piles result frequently from this condition of affairs. These diseases are mere symptoms of impoverished blood. Now B. B. B. or Botanic Blood Balm, will by enriching the blood cause all such symptoms to disappear. Give it a trial.

Henry Reeves, Shellman, Ga., writes: "Any man or woman who is suffering from piles and will not use Botanic Blood Balm is a fool, and it takes me to tell them so, for I suffered two years with bleeding piles, and B. B. B. relieved me at once."

J. J. Hardy, Toccoa, Ga., writes: "B. B. B. is a quick cure for catarrh. Three bottles cured me. I had been troubled several years."

SAILED FOR EUROPE.

The Delegates to the Monetary Conference Depart for Brussels.

Special to the Leaf-Chronicle.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—All the American delegates to the International Monetary Conference, except ex-Comptroller H. W. Cannon and Prof. E. B. Andrews, who left last Wednesday, sailed to-day for Europe. The party includes Senator William B. Allison, of Iowa; Senator John B. Jones, of Nevada; Congressman McCreary, of Kentucky; Edward O. Leahy, of Philadelphia, and Dr. Roland B. Falkner, of the Wharton University of Pennsylvania. He has recently been appointed Secretary of the Conference, and will probably be the candidate of the American delegation for general secretary of the convention.

Specimen Cases.

T. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, his Stomach was disordered, his Liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him. Edward Shepherd, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, G., had five large Fever-sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle of Electric Bitters and one box of Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. MAN AGAINST MONEY.

Dr. Wright Reviews the Result of the Election.

It Was Grover Cleveland Fitted Against the Entire Money Power of the Republican Party.

Special to the Leaf-Chronicle.]

Signal as has been the success of the Democratic principles in the election just consummated, it cannot be fully appreciated without considering the stupendous obstacles which have been surmounted in achieving it.

Since the election of 1888 the Republican party has been engaged in rendering impregnable, as it hoped, the strong position it then obtained. The managers of the party knew well that its success had been purchased by the most reckless and unblushing bribery; they felt that that bribery had been very costly; that it was unreliable; that bribery fosters the appetite which it feeds, and that it was doubtful whether the increased demands could be satisfied by the assessments of the present year. The manufacturers had got what they wanted in the McKinley bill, and were not likely to furnish blocks of five to the Quays and Dudleyes for 1892, and that anything they could extort from the office-holders would be but as a drop in the bucket for the exigencies of this year, and yet additional supplies for the corruption fund must be found, or all they had gained four years ago must now be lost.

Assessment now being palpably insufficient for the present demands, legislation must be substituted; the people must be taxed for the purpose of riveting the chains upon their own liberties. They had secured possession of all the departments of government, and these must be utilized to make their domination permanent.

THE TARIFF.

The manufacturers had already been bribed by the promise of crushing burdens on importations, of which, as Mr. Quay unblushingly told them they were the sole beneficiaries; that promise had to be now fulfilled by imposing such taxes on imports as would and indeed have excited the opposition of the whole nation except the beneficiaries, who were thus convinced that they must continue and increase their material support of the party or lose their protection. And so the manufacturers were bribed and compelled to bribe everybody else.

PENSIONS.

The support of the discharged soldiers had been for over twenty years relied upon for support of the party; but even this was found to be not in all cases reliable. The blue and gray had mixed on decoration days and too much sympathy was growing up between the veterans of the two armies and it was seen to be necessary to bind the men to the party by the trust-worthy ties of money interest; so pension bills and dependent bills were forced upon legislators, and unscrupulous men were made pension commissioners, and not only every man who had ever been in the army, but many who had never seen it were made pensioners for life, as well as their wives and children, and made to feel that this subsidy must depend for its permanence on that of the Republican party; in short, the Grand Army of the Republic was made the Grand Army of the Republican party. And so the old soldiers were bribed.

THE MARINE SUBSIDY BILL.

The sailors and ship owners were next taken in hand. Ships of vast burden were subsidized to carry mails to all the South American ports empty except the mail matter assigned to them and doubtless large assessments exacted of their owners for election purposes. And so the sailors and their employers were bribed.

NEW PARTIES.

Lastly, adroit and unscrupulous demagogues were employed to organize new parties in the South with the hope of disrupting the trusted Democratic party in that section—men like the Kolbs and McDowells—and this was their cheapest bargain only had it been successful; but they could not deliver the goods.

Such was the tremendous array of money-purchased support with which the Democratic party found itself confronted. And what had it to oppose to this apparently irresistible force? Nothing save the name of one great statesman. But that was a name great indeed—a name to conjure with—a name which throughout a long career had been identified with inflexible opposition to corruption, with spotless purity and integrity in political affairs—a name fortified with the confidence of a great people—and it has been found Cleveland against all the combined forces which corruption could bring against it. D. F. W.
