

THE TWO HOMES.
A NEW POEM BY HARRIS TAYLOR.
My home was a high and airy hill
On a mountain side,
The day was long, bright, there
Beneath the woods were
Across the hill, extending
The river glided, the cotton
I saw the storm in the distance dim,
And the music of the southland thunder.
But weary grew the sharp, cold wind
Of winds that never kissed,
The changes grew, the fall pine,
The gray and silver mist,
Above the granite on bowers,
The soil gave low and restless flowers,
And the drone and din of the water-fall
Became a challenge, a taunting wail.
"This fair, this fair in the valley!"
Of all the homesteads and far
My fancy longed to roam,
Whose gable burned a mellow star,
Touched by the sinking sun,
Unseen around, but not unmissed,
The orchard made a leafy nest,
The heart before it was a "know,"
And been were busy the garden through,
And the windows a morning wall.
"The happier there, below," I sighed,
"The world is warm and near,
That cannot reach me here,
Who master it must be so blind,
To share with me his sheltered nest,
If down in the valley I should go,
Leaving the granite, the pine and snow,
And the winds that are keen as lance."
I wandered down, by ridge and dell;
The way was rough and long,
Though earlier shadows round me fell,
I cheered them with my song.
The world's great crowd of people grew,
Till heave and thicket hid the blue;
But over the orchards look at him,
The gable stone on the quiet lawn,
And far away the mountain.
Then came the master, mournful-eyed,
And asked of how was he,
"Oh, planted in such peace?" I cried,
"I share but the best of me."
"Who seeks, he said, this brooding haze,
The tenness of the mountain,
The highways, the glimmer and heat,
The woods that follow the mountain?
And hide the world and its beauty?"
He stretched his hand; he looked afar,
With eyes of old desire,
That held the sunset's fire,
"But you, my friend, how fair!"
"The chambers here, the hillside air,
I would have shared with you,
With the sweep of winds; the dash
Of streams,
And the pines that sound as an anthem!"
"So quiet, so serenely hush,
It is, when the clouds are furled,
I know the best of the sky,
The glory of the world!"
"The three must be to be so true,
He'll share with me his lofty crest,
If up the mountain I should go,
Leaving the granite and the pine below,
And the weary life of the valley!"

GRANT AND LEE.
A New Story of the Surrender of Lee.
From a London Review of Lieut. Col. Chesney's "Essays in the Military Biography."
Four of these essays relate to the great war in America, the events of which perhaps in themselves are interesting in a military sense as they are in any other world has seen, have not received the careful attention which they merit, owing to the distraction of the most recent continental campaigns. As Col. Chesney truly remarks: "There is a disposition to regard the American Generals and troops which led as together inferior to regular soldiers. This prejudice was born of the blunder and want of coherence exhibited by undisciplined volunteers at the outset—faults amply atoned for by the stubborn courage displayed on both sides throughout the rest of the conflict; while if a man claims to be regarded as a veteran, he is to be measured by the amount of actual fighting he has gone through, the seasoned soldiers of Europe are like conscripts compared with the survivors of that conflict."
The essays on Generals Grant and Lee are most valuable and exhaustive studies. His strictures on the reckless sacrifice of his troops in attempting the impossible by fighting the battle of Cold Harbor, after he should have learned by the experience of the long and butchering battles of the Wilderness and Spotsylvania, that the "continuous hammering in which he had himself so trustfully trusted might break his army while its work was yet unfinished, are both severe and well-founded. He calls the battle of Cold Harbor "the darkest spot in the career of Grant as a commander."
"It requires," he continues, "more excuse than has anywhere been offered for the sacrifice. It may be that Grant's usually imperturbable temper was ruffled by the continued readiness with which his adversary met him; or that he believed the Confederates already so worn down by their unsupplied necessities as to be unable to man their works; or that he judged that his new command was influenced more than all by the uneasy consciousness of the world upon his strategy by his famous despatch. I propose to fight it out on this line if it takes all summer, for had not this line been already abandoned, or no result won?" Col. Chesney accurately apportions between Grant and Sherman the merit of the final effort which forced Lee to surrender, of which merit Americans are becoming more and more prone to assign an undue share to the subordinate commander.
His sketch of Gen. Lee cannot be condensed. "Like Napoleon, his troops soon learnt to believe him equal to every emergency which war could bring. Like Hannibal, he could speak lightly and calmly at the gravest moments, being then himself left grave. Like Bagin, he preserved a sweetness of temper that no person or circumstances could ruffle. Like Caesar, he mixed with the crowd of soldiers freely, and never feared that his own command of inefficient officers; failed to enforce on the government the vital necessity of bringing the furnishing of supplies more directly under his own control, so that his army starved in Richmond while large supplies were available but unprocured every been used by the War Department, and lastly, how he so properly his cavalry of their legs, that in their last campaign the Confederates were left almost destitute of the most necessary arms. But these shortcomings, although the military critic must notice them, are but the inevitable specks on the bright surface of an illustrious military character; on Lee's personal character there lingers no breath of taint."

Old subscribers who will pay all arrearages to date and then pay $4.00 in advance, will be entitled to the same.

These pictures retail at $5.00, and are worth the money, but the arrangement we have entered into enables us to furnish the picture and the paper for $4.00.

By our arrangement with Mr. McCormac, we are enabled to offer to any sending us ten names and twenty dollars in money, either a porcelain picture, worth $5.00, or a whole-size Rembrandt, $5.00.

If ten names are sent with $4.00 each, each subscriber will be entitled to one of the whole-size Rembrandts, and the getter up of the club to the life-size India Ink Picture.

To any one sending us forty names and eighty dollars, we will give a life-size picture—India Ink—worth $35.00.

If forty names are sent with $4.00 each, each subscriber will be entitled to one of the whole-size Rembrandts, and the getter up of the club to the life-size India Ink Picture.

For fifty names and one hundred dollars, we will furnish a life-size picture, painted in colors—worth $50.00.

If fifty names are sent with $4.00 each, each subscriber will be entitled to one of the whole-size Rembrandts and the getter up of the club to the life-size picture painted in colors.

Those getting up clubs will get the same premiums as above by sending in lists composed of both $2.00 and $4.00 subscribers, those paying $4.00 receiving both paper and picture, those paying $2.00 receiving the paper only.

Parties entitled to these Premium Pictures can have their own likeness taken, or that of any member of their family.

All of the above mentioned pictures will be framed in elegant style and furnished complete.

This offer is open for all clubs gotten up any time between now and the 1st of January, 1875.

In order to get our subscription list paid up in advance, we will give those getting up clubs the privilege of sending the names of old subscribers when such subscribers will pay all arrearages to date, and then pay two dollars in advance.

We will continue to furnish the CHRONICLE and COURIER JOURNAL for $3.25 to all new subscribers, or to all old ones who pay all arrearages and then in advance. The drawing of the Couriers and Journals $10,000 in presents, and all who subscribe between now and Dec. 31, 1874, will be entitled to a ticket in the drawing.

MANHOOD; HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED.

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Carter's Celebrated Essay on the Cause and Cure of the various forms of Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Emission, Impotence, Menstrual Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Gonorrhoea, Syphilis, and all the diseases incident to the system. Price in a sealed envelope only six cents.

The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine, or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure, simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter how long he has continued, may be enabled to effect a permanent cure. This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land, who is afflicted with a plan of cure, in an address, post-paid, on receipt of six cents, or of two post stamps.
