

The quarterly report of the State Treasurer shows a balance in the treasury on the 1st of July of $271,210.42.

The Courier-Journal says a negro boy killed 1,049 rats in Clarksville in one day. That is a good sample of how many rats there are.

Another devastating storm swept down the Missouri river, about noon Friday the 13th. Hamburg, Iowa, Atchison and St. Jo suffered from its effects.

"What fools these mortals be," was the pointed exclamation of Puck. There is a great variety of fools among mortals but the biggest fool we know is the man who can be caught by the cheap demagoguery of a paper or politician that grind an axe by continually crying "I am on the side of the dear people."

All the officers of the navy would like to see Secretary Chandler elected to the Senate from New Hampshire. That is, they would like to see him elected to the United States Department.

Washington dispatches tell us that the President always appears in faultless attire; that recently he wore a crushed raspberry necktie which was just too exquisite, and a tailor said that out of twenty pair of pants made to his order he failed to find a pair to suit him.

Mr. Watterson still says that the sage of Graystone is not a candidate for the Presidency—that he would not leave his privacy to go to Washington to take the oath of office, much less accept the nomination of a party—but an "old and intimate friend" of Mr. Tilden's recently interviewed by the New York Times says the Democratic leader of 1876 will "tacitly abide" the revival of the old ticket.

The weekly essence of wisdom and saccharine that emanates from First street makes some ill-natured remark about the CHRONICLE striking at every thing it hears. We didn't begin this war, neighbor, as you well know, but we have taken a lively hand in the subsequent proceedings and we propose to be there at the ending.

The Chronicle editor is mad because somebody has more sense than he has. The editor of the Chronicle is mad because he would like to see the editor of the CHRONICLE humbly acknowledge that he would be perpetually vexed, but by the rate of inverse ratio he would have a most kindly regard for the editors of the Democrat.

The plank in the platform of the Pennsylvania Republicans which suggests the redistribution of surplus revenues among the States, illustrates the difference between the Republican and Democratic positions on the tariff question.

The accomplished editors of the Democrat have invented a new language which no one understands but them. Last week they used the phrase "raison d'être," the meaning of which is not known to them.

Communism is a frightful monster that all honest people dread. It was brought to life by the inequality of wealth that has long existed in Europe and is beginning to exist in this country.

There is a widespread idea, encouraged by certain vocal teachers, that children should not sing much until they have almost ceased to be children. The well-known fact that the greatest vocalists of both sexes have remarkable singers in childhood ought alone to be sufficient proof of the erroneousness of that idea.

A LETTER FROM BALTIMORE.

To the Chronicle:

Summer, that bashful maiden, so dilatory, so reluctant, so long resisting the entreaties of the summer-loving world, has come at last. She comes suddenly, gayly smiling at the discomfited, her unexpected appearance has caused the long warm days when all the sun's golden heat seems concentrated on the brick wall and pavement immediately surrounding one, are not very conducive to success in any undertaking, and especially in a literary effort, but it is not my intention to make an attempt even at correspondence.

Another devastating storm swept down the Missouri river, about noon Friday the 13th. Hamburg, Iowa, Atchison and St. Jo suffered from its effects. Floods and hail storms did considerable damage on the same day in Virginia, New Jersey, and Illinois.

THE DANGER OF OVER-EXERCISE

A correspondent of the American Register, writing from Charlottesville, says:

A court-day in Virginia is a sort of cross between a camp-meeting and a regimental muster. A little more whiskey than the former and not quite so much as the latter. The custom of making the day of attending court the day for selling all the surplus horses and mules is to the buyer a great convenience.

THE DANGER OF OVER-EXERCISE. In these days of rowing giants and athletic heroes fine physical development is more esteemed than ever before since the time of the Athenian games. A man who knows the elements of rowing is looked up to far more than in the days of our ancestors possibly because there are fewer specimens of well-developed men than there are of our ancestors possibly because there are fewer specimens of physical power a few days since in Waterloo. His muscles, which showed unusual development, were as hard as wood. At his request he was brought to the city in a carriage or on a horse, but he was fully made manifest.
