DELUDED.

Happy to be who bears, with brow elate,
Above the tumult of the unheeding throng,
The plaudits of the Future, clear and strong,
Down the long centuries reverberate.
Though unremembered be his common fate;
Content to leave a heritage of song
To after ages who do no wrong;
Content, though never gained, Fame's crown to walk.
Dups of his dreams, what matter if not his,
Dim in the crimson pool and purple gloom.
Of some enthrall'd vast, that hoarded tomb
Whose stones the pilgrim nations kneeling kiss?
Chambers b. not less sound though overheard
On a foggy stein mound the grasses spread.

A Death at Sea.

"Do invalids usually dread making a sea voyage, doctor?"
"They have no fear of the voyage, but the dread which surrounds the thought of a possible death at sea completely unnerves them. Suggest a trip abroad and they will gladly attempt it, for they have the satisfaction of knowing that in case they die the remains will be returned to their friends for decent burial. A burial at sea, however, hampers them from the time a voyage is suggested until it is over. Now that the matter of speed and comfort is the question of the hour with steamship companies, they should give some thought to the subject of burials at sea. It is an important question. Originating when the only means of transatlantic travel were sailing vessels, there is no doubt but that it was necessary to consign a corpse to the deep, but in these days of rapid transit and floating palaces it would be an easy matter to preserve a body for several days. In the olden time lack of facilities for properly caring for and promptly disposing of the sailors, rendered it necessary to leave it over the rail, but now these reasons do not exist. Every steamer should have a surgeon capable of embalming a corpse and a refrigerating compartment to preserve a body for an entire trip. The terrible dread of being buried at sea has deterred many from seeking relief in a warmer clime than this, and they have remained and died rather than risk such a deed. What we need are facilities and apparatus which will tend to dispel this dread, and which will tend to add to the peace of mind of persons taking a sea voyage in the hope of restoring health."

The Trade With Greenland.

But the days of the noble old clippers are gone, and I went to see this veteran of the sea about the ships that trade with Greenland. He and a business associate own seven vessels engaged in this strange trade. No other American commercial vessels go to the far off land of Kane, Sir John Franklin and so many other gallant men who have braved the rigors of its highest latitudes. The vessels go out in ballast, for although Greenland imports wheat, brandy, coffee, sugar, tobacco and firewood, it is not from this country. They bring back a metal termed cryolite, which they obtain at a port called Ivigtut, on the southwest coast of Greenland. It is a bleak country, even in the short summer, during two months of which, in June and July, the sun is always above the horizon. Mosses, stunted shrubs, dwarfish trees and huckleberry bushes are about the only vegetation, and the bare mountains, in the grip of great glaciers, and the generally dead and desolate aspect of the country make it appear as strange and unreal as that gray corpse of a world, the moon. Cryolite looks like ice, and hence the name signifies ice stone. It is all taken to Philadelphia, and is used in manufacturing soda, alum, lye, porcelain, piano keys, door knobs, clock dials and other articles. The seven barks in the trade each carry about 800 tons of this strange mineral, and make fourteen voyages in a year. Last year they brought 8,400 tons to this country.—Oscar Wiloughby Riggs.

A German Brigadier's Idea.

Our German troops did yeoman's service during the war, but it was hard for some of them to adopt American ideas, especially in military matters, and they occasionally had strange views of the war and the best means of bringing it to an end. At the battle of Chancellorsville the Eleventh corps, largely composed of Germans, was broken by Jackson, and retreated in considerable disorder, to put it very mildly. After the retrograde movement that followed that battle officers of various corps were in the habit of discussing the cause of the giving away of the Eleventh and of the failure of the operations. I was present when a number of officers, high in rank, were talking about the matter, some assigning one reason and some another. At length a German brigadier arose, and with an air which implied that no contradiction was possible, said: "I will tell you what de trouble is, gentlemen; dere is too much de American element in dis army." This oracular announcement set the company in a roar, but is no unfair example of the feeling which was entertained by too many of our foreign officers. Col. R. L. Converse in Globe-Democrat.

Inks and Inkstands.

The evolution of script after printing was invented, or for a little time before, can only be understood by a comparative study of manuscripts as collated at great European libraries. The inks formerly used were rather paints than writing fluids, since it was not desirable that they should flow too freely from the stylus. The use of such as are popular now would in ancient times have been impossible. An inkstand in any of the ingenious modern forms was for this reason unnecessary. The Arabs have used from time immemorial the combined brass or silver pen and ink case, the long part for his sharpened reeds, and a sort of box with tight cover at one end for his semi-fluid ink. These admit of a high degree of ornament. The inkhorn of the clerk of the middle ages is often alluded to by old English writers. It was the first parent of the elegant thing in cut glass which may be overturned with impunity.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Wise Florida Buzzards.

On the coldest morning of our late disagreeable spell of weather the fishermen built a large fire on a point projecting into the river from East Palatka, and, after warming themselves, went on with their fishing and left the fire burning. Returning after a time they were surprised to see a group of some fifty or sixty buzzards standing about the fire, kicking up all sorts of antics. Not understanding such proceedings the boats were rowed up pretty close, and the occupants watched the birds for some time. It was a very cold morning, and the birds would stand with one side to the fire until it was warm, and then they would deliberately turn around and warm the other side. Those on the outside of the group would get so eager to get within the warmth of the fire that they frequently crowded the birds on the inside nearly into the flames, and the struggle was waged fierce and bitter for advantageous positions.—Palatka News.

The First Sign

Of falling health, whether in the form of Night Sweats and Nervousness, or in a sense of General Weariness and Loss of Appetite, should suggest the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This preparation is most effective for giving tone and strength to the enfeebled system, promoting the digestion and assimilation of food, restoring the nervous forces to their normal condition, and for purifying, enriching, and vitalizing the blood.

Failing Health.

Ten years ago my health began to fail. I was troubled with a distressing Cough, Night Sweats, Weakness, and Nervousness. I tried various remedies prescribed by different physicians, but became so weak that I could not go up stairs without stopping to rest. My friends recommended me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which I did, and I am now as healthy and strong as ever.—Mrs. E. L. Williams, Alexandria, Minn.

I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla in my family, for Scrofula, and know, if it is taken faithfully, that it will thoroughly eradicate this terrible disease. I have also prescribed it as a tonic, as well as an alternative, and must say that I honestly believe it to be the best blood medicine ever compounded.—W. F. Fowler, D. D. S., M. D., Greenville, Tenn.

Dyspepsia Cured.

It would be impossible for me to describe what I suffered from Indigestion and Headache up to the time I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was under the care of various physicians and tried a great many kinds of medicines, but never obtained more than temporary relief. After taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla for a short time, my headache disappeared, and my stomach performed its duties more perfectly. To-day my health is completely restored.—Mary Harley, Springfield, Mass.

I have been greatly benefited by the prompt use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It tones and invigorates the system, regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, and vitalizes the blood. It is, without doubt, the most reliable blood purifier yet discovered.—H. D. Johnson, 383 Atlantic ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.
