Sowing Grass With Oats And Other Small Grain.

Why do we sow grass with oats and other small grain? Because our forefathers did the same thing. Our forefathers planted corn in February and March and plowed their corn so deep that more harm than good was done in breaking corn roots.

Most of us have learned that we should wait until the ground is warm to plant corn and that it is better to cultivate shallow. Why not go a step farther and sow grass and clover in a well prepared, clean seed bed without another crop to interfere with and retard the growth of the grass. It is true that we very often get stands of grass with small grain, but this is where the ground is strong enough to bring grass in spite of the retarding influence of the so called "Nurse Crop." When ever we get a stand of grass with small grain we would have gotten a better one without the small grain.

Wheat, oats, millet, rye, etc., in no way benefit the grass that is sown with them. They take much plant food and moisture from the ground that the grass would get if sown without a "Nurse Crop." Some of our farmer friends tell us that the oats, etc., shade the grass and protect it. Does the young grass need to be shaded? Isn't the sunshine the life of the grass? Did you ever notice that the young grass is tall and spindly when the oats are cut off? This is because the grass plants are trying to get the sunshine that has been cut off from them.

All plants act as channels through which the moisture travels from the ground to the air, so oats and other small grain conduct the moisture from the soil, where it is needed by the young grass, to the atmosphere much faster than if the small grain plants were not present. The only point in favor of seeding grass in the old way is that we get the crop of small grain and the extra expense of discing and harrowing the land is saved. But if we get a poorer stand of grass and the grass plants are stunted and later in developing. Does it pay?

Let's all follow the lead of good farmers and prepare our land well and seed grass so that it can grow off without a handicap. We will find that it pays. Disc and harrow after small grain comes off and sow your grass in late July and August. J. C. STILES.

We understand that the Virginia and Southwestern Railway Company is seriously considering the matter of taking off the Bristol to Louisville Pullman. The Big Stone Gap and Bristol Board of Trades have lodged a protest, and it is hoped that the railroad company will not discontinue this sleeper, as it would be a bad advertisement not only for Bristol and Big Stone Gap but this entire section, and would prove a great inconvenience to the traveling public generally. The fact that it may not be a paying proposition at the present time does not justify the Railroad Company in discontinuing the service, and we hope it will not do so.

Dickenson County.

Vast Resources Untouched Because of Lack of Transportation.

There are some counties in Virginia that may be regarded as untouched, and are today as rich in hidden and undeveloped wealth as they were when John Smith landed at Jamestown. Take Dickenson county, for instance. There the vast forests of mountainside and valley have been cut into but slightly, the iron and the coal beneath the ground, which are believed to be inexhaustible, have never been worked into, and the vast farming lands, intensely rich from the valleys all the way to the mountain tops on the borders, have scarcely been reached, it may be said.

This condition of affairs is due to the fact that Dickenson county has heretofore had no railway lines passing through its territory. Now, one great line skirts along the eastern border from the Kentucky line into Russell county, and on to the southward, a branch line of the Norfolk and Western that now stops at Toms Creek, in Wise county, near the southwest border of Dickenson, will ere long be extended through the center of the county, and other lines are almost certain to be built from the Kentucky regions southward through Dickenson, and the time is not far distant when there will be great development in this part of Virginia and Dickenson will loom up as one of the very richest of the 100 subdivisions of the Old Dominion.

Dickenson is the youngest county in the State, and has the distinction of being the only one to have been established since the war. It was formed in 1880 from the counties of Wise, Buchanan and Russell. It is situated in the extreme western section; is bounded on the north by Kentucky, the dividing line being on the top of the Cumberland Mountains; on the east by Buchanan; on the south by Russell, and on the west by Wise county. The area is 324 square miles, or 313,597 acres. Perhaps there are as many as 800 farms, most of them on the small order, none having under cultivation any large acreage.

The products are corn, wheat, rye, oats, millet, potatoes, sorghum, buckwheat and some tobacco. The lands both in the valleys and along the mountainsides are well adapted to all of the grasses, and there is no county in the State in which there might be better grazing or bigger profits in cattle and stock raising. The people well know this, but without transportation facilities they have never gone extensively into the business, except since the completion of the Carolina, Clinchfield and Ohio Railway along the eastern border, considerable attention has been given to it there, and it has been demonstrated that no region excels Dickenson for cattle and stock raising. All of the vegetable and fruits grow to perfection, but because of the inability to get products to the outside markets, fruit growing heretofore has been simply for home consumption.

The principal streams of Dickenson are Pound, Crane's Nest and Russell Fork Rivers, and McClure's Creek, which flow northward, through breaks in the Cumberland Mountains, and their waters finally find their way into the Ohio River. A very large portion of the county, probably from half to three-fourths of its area, as above indicated, is in original forest of oak, hickory, poplar, walnut, elm, ash, maple, wild cherry, cucumber, pine and hemlock. There are a few saw-mills in the southern part of the county that cut up this timber to be hauled to the Norfolk and Western Railway by teams over the good roads of Dickenson and Wise, and some logging down the streams into the Ohio, on to Cincinnati, has been done at times. In the eastern section, since the coming of the Carolina, Clinchfield and Ohio, many mills have sprung up along that line, but to all intents and purposes it may be said that the sound of the woodman's ax is as yet but little known.

The streams, mentioned above, afford magnificent water power at many points, which, when the railroads come, will surely be utilized for timber working, for iron working, and for all kinds of manufacturing purposes. The raw material in abundance and the power in abundance are in juxtaposition, and the transportation facilities to and from the outside world are all that is needed to make Dickenson a great mining, manufacturing and agricultural territory. The developments on the east-rn border are sufficient to prove that. The capital for all of this will come in as soon as the railroads are ready to afford the shipping facilities. The developments on the eastern border within the past two years are sufficient to prove that statement.

The bituminous coal deposits in Dickenson are known to be as rich and come as near being "inexhaustible" as any in Virginia, West Virginia or Kentucky.

Being without railroads, the people have given much attention to their highways, and considering the small population—it is perhaps not as much as 9,000—they have done well in the way of road building. There are good macadam roads running from several points to the outside railway lines, and from the county seat to Coeburn, in Wise county, on the Norfolk and Western, there is one of the best twenty mile highways in the State.

Clinchwood, the county seat, is the largest town in the county, and that is not saying much for its size, as it has perhaps not as many as 400 population, but a splendid village it is, supplied with churches and schools, and inhabited by a splendid and hospitable people. The county seat is located in the western part of the county in a beautiful and fertile valley, and there are some fine mineral springs around the town. The town, when laid off for county seat purposes, was named in honor of the Hon. Clinton Wood, familiarly known as Clint Wood, who was a noted and prominent member of the Senate of Virginia in the late seventies and early eighties.

Considering the vast coal and iron deposits, the immense forests of untouched timbers, the magnificent farming and grazing lands, and the much water power, it is a safe prediction that Dickenson is some day to be one of the show counties of Virginia, and one of the richest and most widely known. The building of more railroads will surely bring these things to pass—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Inactive Kidneys Cause Disease

"I shall not soon forget the benefits I derived from the use of Foley Kidney Pills."—Al A. Godfrey, Forest Grove, Oregon. Too much work and too little work seem to have about the same effect on persons past middle age. Proper action of the kidneys is necessary to good health. They act as a filter and remove from the blood poisonous waste matter which if permitted to remain in the system leads to many complications. Many nervous, tired, run-down men and women suffer from pains in the back and sides, dizzy spells, bladder weakness, sore muscles and stiff joints and fail to realize that rheumatism, diabetes or even Bright's disease may result. If you have cause to believe that your kidneys are weak, disordered or inactive you should act immediately. Foley Kidney Pills have been used by young, middle aged and old with complete satisfaction. They act quickly and surely and have given relief in cases of ten and standing. Mutual Drug Company Big Stone Gap, Va.
