THE SHENANDOAH VALLEY ILLUSTRATED.

The Shenandoah Valley Railroad Company issue a finely illustrated circular descriptive of the Valley of Virginia, famed from the days of Spotswood and the Horsehoe Knights, and made historic by the deeds of Jackson, Sheridan and other great military chieftains of the late war. The book is a chronicle of a leisurely journey through the uplands of Virginia, with running descriptions of the caverns of Luray, the Natural Bridge and the Grottoes of the Shenandoah. Hardly a road of the famed valley is lacking in historic associations, and the map accompanying the publication will guide the visitor to the more famous spots. Certainly, no more interesting region worthy of the attention of the tourist is to be found than the Valley of Virginia.

This company also issues a pamphlet known as the "Shenandoah Valley," and treats entirely upon the great natural resources awaiting development in the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia.

WIND'S RAVAGES

A TORNADO STRIKES A CAST HOUSE AT CROCKER'S.

THREE MEN KILLED, FIVE INJURED

A cyclone from the West swooped down and carried death and destruction in its path. List of the killed and wounded.

KILLED.

HENRY CASEY, WILSON JOHNSON, FRED PHELPS.

WOUNDED.

JAMES TURNER, seriously hurt about the body and head and thigh broken.

JOHN HARSTON, hurt about the head.

FONTAINE STEWART, hand mashed.

DOC REED, hurt about the face.

JOHN ASPIN, hand broken.

BOB WATKINS, hurt about the head, shoulder and foot.

The weather yesterday morning was warm and gusty, and great clouds of dust swept over the business streets greatly to the discomfort of all exposed to the whirling wind.

As noon approached clouds began to gather and just before 2 o'clock the growing darkness indicated the coming of a storm. People everywhere began to seek shelter, and soon a fierce wind from the west, followed by great sheets of water, broke upon the city.

In the west end, while the wind went rushing eastward with the velocity of a gale, it was steadier than that which visited the eastern part of the city.

Near the corner of Commonwealth and Rutherford streets, a dark cloud with jagged edges hanging low, came rushing eastward, and striking the new two-story frame building of Mr. J. E. Sours it twisted it from its foundation and scattered the broken timbers thirty feet away.

Passing on then to the rolling mill, the storm king shook the beams and ratters and blew in window frames till all the men employed there rushed into the morass to the east for safety.

The American Bridge Works to the left were badly shaken, but no serious harm was done, the wind apparently husbanding its strength to strike with fatal force east house No. 2 at Crocker's furnace. The roof of this building was lifted bodily from the brick wall upon which it rested and carried clear of the fallen walls and columns to the eastern side.

A settled darkness preceded the advent of the storm a few seconds, and nothing but a few seeds and debris marked the course of the wind.

A stock car loaded with railroad ties a short distance away, was moved along the track, and a car loaded with pig-iron was moved up grades twenty-five yards with the brakes all down, and seemingly satisfied with its work, the storm passed on as quickly as it came.

The dust of the fallen building had hardly cleared away before willing hands were working to help the dust which remained of the building and searching for dead and wounded, where a short time before about fifty men had sought shelter and safety.

The first dead body found was that of Wilson Johnson. It was under the fallen bricks near the west side of the mill. The dead body of Henry Casey was next discovered not far distant, and only a few feet away lay the remains of William Johnson.

All three were colored laborers of the iron gas works. They were working outside when the storm came up and went into the cast house for shelter.

Any of the wounded were able to get out of the wrecked building except Jim Turner, a colored man, who was found and never used it and should be afflicted with a cough, cold or any Throat, Lung or Chest trouble, secure a bottle at once and give it a fair trial. It is guaranteed every time, or money refunded. Trial bottles free at Badwell & Christian's drug store.
