Valuable Property at Public Auction

In the Lower Coast Gazette of Saturday, January 28th, we read the judicial advertisement, Wm. H. Norwood vs. Magnolia Sugar and R. R. Co., and August B. Wheeler vs. Magnolia Sugar and R. R. Co.

This presents to the investor a signal opportunity for a colonization plan whereby this vast tract may be sold out at a great profit to the vendor and at a reasonable price to the colonizers.

Only a few months ago one of the largest sugar plantations on the Southern Pacific Railroad, between New Iberia and Lafayette, was disposed of in small farms of from ten to twenty-five acres each.

We again read in the daily papers this week of another offer to extend the Grand Isle Railroad further to the Lower Coast and thence to the Grand Isle.

At the meeting of the Grand Lodge Benevolent Knights of America which met in Gretna last week, two of our prominent citizens, members of this Order, were honored in having been chosen to prominent offices of this organization.

Hon. M. S. Mahoney, who has always been foremost in lending his hand toward the upbuilding of Algiers and is in all things where good can be accomplished, was greatly honored by having been elected as Grand Counsellor-at-Law for the State of Louisiana for this organization.

Frisco Draws the Prize.

If the Senate sustains the action of the House and the President signs the bill, the Pacific Coast city will get Uncle Sam's backing for the great fair which proposes to celebrate the completion of the Panama Canal.

Hon. J. Sloat Fassett, the eloquent representative from New York, in his eagerness to justify this colossal hold-up of the American people by Wall Street and its railroads, connected Frisco with Panama in the following words: "The early years of the century will be known for two great events. One is the completion of the Panama Canal and the other the rebuilding of San Francisco.

Mr. Fassett has, so far at least, secured permission for the mulcting of the people for the rebuilding he so tactfully refers to, but he should not be given permission to accomplish this steal, through misquoting history the way he does. Mr. Fassett knows full well that there is another great event for which the early years of this century will be known—an event far greater moment than either of the two he mentions—the one, in fact, which made possible the building of the great Canal.

While Secretary Meyer is assuring us that the sea-channels of our river can be effectively protected from the attack of an enemy, from the Caribbean Sea, from which point the secretary also proposes to defend the Panama Canal, President Taft is vigorously urging the defense of the Canal itself. In a speech made in the city of Washington on the 17th inst., the President said: "Take this question of the Panama Canal. It will have cost that. It has been built not alone to further the cause of the world's commerce, but also to bring our Eastern and Western seaboard closer together and to secure for us military benefits enabling our naval fleet to pass quickly from one ocean to the other. Now the works of the canal are of such a character that a warship might easily put the canal out of commission.

"We are authorized to police the canal and protect it, and we have the treaty right to erect fortifications there. Fortifications are the best and most secure method of protecting that canal against the attack of some irresponsible nation or armed force."

The channel at the mouth of this river is also a canal, and fully as delicate as the one at Panama, although not so extensive or so costly. It needs the very same treatment that the Panama Canal needs, however, if its integrity is also to be maintained, as everyone who has given the subject a moment's thought must realize. That Secretary Meyer's scheme is theoretically a good one, in many respects, all will admit, but no one having special interests along the Mississippi river can be persuaded that this scheme can furnish our canal all the protection it needs, any more than President Taft can be convinced that the Panama canal "that one warship could easily put out of business" can be defended from that one warship by these ships of Secretary Meyer's while roving the wide expanse of the Caribbean Sea.

But while our local canal is in many respects similar to the one now arresting the attention of the world, in other and vital respects it is vastly different. One has the special backing of the government itself, augmented, if possible, by that of all the big seaports of the North Atlantic—interests already active and aggressive; while the other has as yet only the passive support of the people of the interior of the country, in addition to the support we can give it ourselves. Under these conditions it is safe to predict that the Panama Canal will be fortified itself, while it will also have the assistance of the fleet, whether the Caribbean station is established or not. It behooves us, therefore, to call the attention of our friends of the interior to the fact that this Oriental gateway is about to receive double protection, so that before they give their votes for this proposition, they may obtain for their own gateway the protection which it is entitled to, and which they can show the government can be given it for a trifle, as compared with the cost of that of its more powerful neighbor. After all, it is a question of votes, and if we can arouse the people of the great valley States to the importance of acting at the present time, thus committing the government to the installation of the necessary local protection for this river, there is no doubt but that this great fight can be easily won.
