THE STORY HOUR.

The parents of young boys will find it to the advantage of boys and parents to send them every Saturday to our local library, where interesting stories are told the children. The little folks are always much amused and from these stories, which all have a moral, may be had lessons that the youngsters will never forget.

The boys were not as much in evidence Saturday as they should have been, considering that the "Story Hour" was for their benefit. One hundred and eleven children were in attendance, however, and enjoyed Miss Payne's list very much, particularly "Beowulf." Miss E. Pearson will be on hand Saturday at 2 p. m. All are invited.

Miss Zuleme Bostick and Dr. G. W. Taylor were awarded prizes for piercing the largest number of hearts. Valentine Fortune was also played and was provocative of much merriment. Dancing was also a feature of the evening. Dainty heart-shaped ices and confections were served.

Those present were Misses Ruth Phillips, Zuleme Bostick, Louise Davis, May Morales, Gladys Adams, Eugenia Herbert, Katie Rhodes, Irma Daniels, Halcyon Rhodes, Shirley Fetherling and Evelyn Barbour, of Vicksburg, Miss.; Messrs. Louis Adams, Raymond Nelson, Frederick Lozes, James Adams, Peter Rupp, Sydney Guillot, James Colomb, George Mahe, Harry Oertling, Thomas Rhodes and Dr. G. W. Taylor.

VALENTINE LUNCHEON.

Mrs. J. Creighton Mathewes gave a lovely Valentine luncheon in the afternoon, Wednesday, for Mrs. Burrows Johnson, the Carnival guest of Mrs. J. Polk Ford. In the center of the table was a large bowl filled with rose-colored carnations and white hyacinths. The chandelier above was draped with garlands of little pink hearts and they were also scattered over the board between the pretty table settings. The place cards were heart-shaped and there were corsage bouquets of carnations given as souvenirs. The guests included Mrs. Burrows Johnson, Mrs. J. Polk Ford, Mrs. Walter Curry of Shreveport, Mrs. Edward Wisner, Mrs. George Koppel, Mrs. Royden Douglas, Mrs. Victor Hebert, Mrs. J. L. Follette, Miss Coleman of Brookhaven, Miss. Mrs. William S. Slack and Mrs. Geo. H. Smith.

TO FORTIFY MOUTH OF RIVER.

Assuming that Secretary Meyer will not dare tell the whole country that his scheme for defending the Mississippi Valley in the event of war is to blockade the passes to the Mississippi, Gen. Estopinal Thursday offered a joint resolution authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Navy to prepare a scheme of effective defense for the important channels of commerce, the South and Southwest Passes and "report on same to Congress."

In a preamble to the resolution, the General sets forth that whereas Congress, at great cost of money and the highest engineering skill, has provided two outlets through the delta of the Mississippi, and whereas it is recognized generally that land fortifications are impossible and that defense can be made only from floating batteries or ships, therefore the resolution calls on the Secretary of the Navy to prepare and report on an effective and adequate defense. He also recites the controlling influence that the river has upon the stability of freight rates as one reason why there should be some scheme of defense by the navy.

When the General comes to argue the matter to his colleagues of the Naval Affairs Committee, to which the resolution was referred, he will dwell upon the fact that New Orleans is the second port of the country, a fact not generally appreciated by the ordinary run of people, the ones who pay the bills for the naval establishment which revolves around a scheme for the protection of New York, the first port. He will point out that New York can be and is protected adequately by land fortifications. In addition, there is a navy yard within the corporate limits of the larger city, and three other big yards are near.

As to the Gulf ports, New Orleans being second and Galveston third, the proposal is to protect them with a naval base on foreign soil and at least three and one-half or four days' steaming distance away, and with not a single gun to defend the passes to the mouth of the Mississippi. Forts Jackson and St. Philip might keep a fleet away from New Orleans, but a fleet outside the Passes would stop commerce up and down the Mississippi Valley.

Such a showing, it is believed, will drive the Secretary from a position that never was tenable, except by a violent stretch of imagination and compel him either to tell Congress to go to or confess that, if there is any reason for a navy yard anywhere, there is reason for one at New Orleans to serve as a repair plant for ships that should be stationed permanently either in the river or just outside the Passes.

LITTLE MURIEL URSULA OERTLING.

When Rex arrived in front of the City Hall grand stand he received the keys of the city from Mayor Behrman through winsome little Muriel Oertling, the gifted 4-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Oertling.

Little Miss Oertling was lifted with handsome gold keys on a velvet cushion and spoke in audible tones as follows: "We welcome your majesty to New Orleans. I deliver to your majesty the keys of the city as one of your loyal subjects and esteem it a great honor to greet my sovereign. Long live the king to reign over a happy and contented people."

When the sweet little girl had finished her speech she handed the keys to the king, who received them graciously. Miss Oertling received a handsome souvenir from his majesty in the shape of a gold diamond-set locket.

Little Miss Oertling was attired in a beautiful white dress with a large sash composed of the royal colors. She has recited several times on public occasions, and has achieved a reputation among the little folks as an elocutionist. She is as pretty as she is gifted, and vied Monday with the honors conferred upon the king.
