NEW APPROACH NECESSARY.

During the past few days in the absence of rain the dust along the ramp leading from Delaronde Street to the Canal Street ferry has been so objectionable as to call forth numerous complaints, especially from the ladies, who find it more convenient to use this approach than the one from Morgan Street. Ninety-five per cent of our inhabitants cross on the Canal Street ferry, and almost all of this number use Delaronde Street to go up to the landing.

The sidewalk which was furnished some time ago, leading from the end of Delaronde Street along side of the wagon road, permits the walking of only two persons together, while a considerable amount of space is given to the wagon road and a flower garden by the engine house. While we believe in beautifying all city properties, and especially do we believe that this garden should be left in tact, other provisions should be made for the accommodation of these patrons who are compelled daily to go to the city, regardless of weather conditions.

The levee from the ferry house to the head of Delaronde Street is from ten to twelve feet wide, solidly paved with cinders, and always furnishes a dustless path. We suggest that the City Administration arrange some way that this path could be used for a road to Delaronde Street. A wide stairway from twenty to thirty feet leading to the top of this levee would be a splendid solution for this improvement, then the ladies would at least be able to go to the ferry without soiling their hosiery and shoes in the dust, which is from two to three inches thick along this road. There would be no great expense incurred in the construction of these steps, and they would be of vast benefit and be greatly appreciated by the patrons of the ferry company.

The brick sidewalk is entirely too small to accommodate the patrons. If the steps cannot be built, the ramp at least should be wet so as to give some relief from the dust. Another inconvenience regarding the width of the sidewalk is that when patrons are going to the ferry they usually meet a crowd coming from the ferry, which always makes it necessary for either those going or those coming to step off onto the dusty road to let the others pass by or stand and form single file while the exchange of places is made.

We trust that the city authorities will look into this matter and give such relief as the situation demands.

LEGISLATURE IN SESSION.

The Legislature of Louisiana has convened for its biennial session, and from the present outlook it appears that its efforts will be devoted more to real legislation for the good of the State than, as formerly, in a mass of useless bills. Governor Hall sent in his message, which has been read. While the Governor has offered some suggestions for the consideration of the legislators toward reform in tax assessments, he has outlined no general plan, and it will therefore be up to the Legislature itself to find ways and means. This subject of the equalization of tax assessments throughout the State is one of great importance, and deserves the most careful consideration of our legislators. It is to be hoped that some tangible solution of the problem shall be found.

Senator Leon Smith, of Caddo, shot off the first firecracker, which may develop into a good-sized bomb, when he introduced a resolution in the Senate for a legislative probe into the Tensas Delta land case compromise, and also into the recent sale of our State bonds by the State Board of Liquidation at a price far below their real value. According to the resolutions a thorough investigation would be made into the land case from its inception; the charges of fraud and collusion in the original sale of the lands to the land company, and the $100,000 compromise while the case was still pending in the courts. There has been much scandal connected with this celebrated case, and it is sincerely hoped that the present Legislature will bring out all the facts, so that the people will finally know the truth.

In regard to the sale of the bonds, the preamble to Senator Smith's resolutions does not mince words, but goes plainly into the history of the bonds, cites the Constitutional Convention which was called last year to devise ways for liquidating the maturing State debt and the results of that meeting. It is alleged in the preamble that the bonds were sold to a syndicate at 96.142, against the solemn protest of a minority of the Board of Liquidation, and that the bonds were selling at a premium before actual delivery to the purchasers. Also that the bonds have since sold at as high as 109, all of which resulted in a large profit to the buyers of the bonds, and served to increase the tax burden on the people of the State.

The resolutions call for the appointment of a committee of five, three from the House and two from the Senate, which committee shall be appointed immediately upon the adoption of the resolution and begin an immediate investigation so that they can make a report before the adjournment of this Legislature. These resolutions of Senator Smith should, without doubt, be adopted, and the investigations started at once. Both of these incidents have caused widespread comment, and the opportunity for thorough investigation now offered should be grasped without quibbling.

One of the amusing incidents of the session thus far is the notice given by Representative Reinhardt, of the city delegation, to introduce a bill for the revival of racehorse gambling. No chance, dear friend; the Legislature dares not restore this rotten game in this city—the people will not have it! There is a good deal of prospective legislation in view, but it is too early as yet to comment on it.

AN UPRIGHT JUDGE ATTACKED.

The attack which has been made on Hon. Emory Speer, United States District Judge, at Macon, Ga., is likely to fail. We feel like endorsing every word of a recent editorial published in the "Lawyer and Banker" of New Orleans. The editor says:

"A careful study of the evidence taken by the Judiciary Committee of Congress in re charges filed against Hon. Emory Speer of Macon, Ga., leads to the conclusion that a most dastardly attack has been made on the professional life of a thoroughly honest and incorruptible jurist. He is a man who deserves and commands confidence and respect. His disposition of cases before him is the strongest evidence of his fairness and impartiality. Good lawyer, as shown by his judicial decrees, efficient as the record of cases disposed of will show, his predominant characteristic is his unflinching sympathy and student tastes. His record, despite the charges made, will be when made up one of honorable toil, of duty well performed, of public trust honorably discharged. Judge Speer is one of the finest characters of a scholarly Southern judiciary. He seems to feel in the occupancy of his lofty station a full measure of his responsibilities to men and governmental affairs. He carries a dignity of demeanor, a forbearance of manner and a firmness of purpose to live and act the part of judge untroubled by the storms that rage about him. We believe he will be completely exonerated and vindicated. He should be."

If a judge is to be attacked, as is Judge Speer, as the result of an arbitrary and secret espionage or investigation, made by examiners who are generally conceded to be men without moral standing, spies, detectives, etc., with all of the odious reputations generally attaching such an office, then we may well say such an ordeal on the part of an upright and righteous judge is intolerable. The method is un-American, and the great fabric which Marshall builded will crumble into nothingness, amid the cursings of the mob, the jeers of the hoodlum, and the mouthings of the demagogue investigators.

The dignity of the profession of law has been defiled by the cowardly attempt to degrade and enthrall Judge Speer.

HOLY NAME GYMNASIUM CLUB SLAUGHTERS DOWNTOWN CATHOLIC ATHLETIC CLUB—17-2.

The C. A. A.'s were beaten by the Holy Names at McDonoghville Park on Sunday afternoon, by the score of 17 to 2. Eleven men were used by the Downtown Club in their attempt to triumph, but their ragged support, combined with their inability to hit, caused their defeat. The Algiers boys played like major leaguers, batting the ball to all corners of the field, and putting up a great defense in the field.

The pitching of Sutherland for the H. N. G. C. proved a feature of the game, holding the Catholics to one run and three well-scattered hits in the last seven innings of play. The Holy Names will clash with the team from the National Athletic Club next Sunday afternoon at McDonoghville Park at 3 o'clock sharp, the game scheduled with the Leblanc team from Algiers being postponed until a later date.

Summary: Struck out: By Sutherland 7, by Martinez 8. Base on balls: Off Sutherland 3, off Martinez 1. Hit by pitched ball: Sutherland (Jackson), Martinez (Sullivan). Sacrifice hits: Labit, Schroder. They have started to work in earnest and promise to make this entertainment the most successful of any ever given before. Fancy dancing will be a feature of the night.

McDONOUGH NO. 4.

The teachers of McDonogh No. 4 wish to express their deep appreciation and heartfelt gratitude to all the friends and parents, who so generously contributed cash and other donations for the benefit of the Teachers' Pension League and the Teachers' Retirement Fund.

It is indeed gratifying to know that there are still some who appreciate not only the work of the teachers of the present day, but that of the past teachers. It is due to their public-spiritedness and generosity, in a great measure, that the entertainment was such a success and that McDonogh No. 4

WOMEN IN THE MIDDLE AGES.

They Held Office and Could More Than Hold Their Own in Trade.

Women in England have always shared in the industrial life of the nation. Curiously enough, writes Mr. A. Abram in "English Life and Manners in the Later Middle Ages," a statute of 1363 that ordered men to keep to one trade left women free to practice as many as she chose.

In a few instances, at least, women in the later middle ages discharged duties and held offices that do not fall to their lot nowadays. There are allusions to women burghesses in the records of London and other towns, and if women married aliens they could naturalize them.

Women did not shrink from engaging in foreign commerce. They exported goods to France, Spain and other countries. A widow, Margery Russell of Coventry, is mentioned in no less than three different existing documents. Her business must have been on a fairly large scale, for she was robbed of merchandise worth £800 by some men of Santander, in Spain. In order to recoup herself for her losses she obtained letters of marque that empowered her to seize the goods belonging to countrymen of the offenders.

Margery apparently took more than was due her, for two Spanish merchants lodged complaints against her. She was ordered to restore both ships, but one of the Spaniards declared that she had refused to do so, although he had a commission directed to the exchequer. If Dame Margery Russell was a type, women traders of the middle ages were well able to look after themselves.

ORIGIN OF PERFUMES.

Used at First to Kill the Odors of Burning Flesh.

In the good old times the use of perfumes was originated to counteract the offensive odors arising from burning flesh which was being offered as a sacrifice. For this reason incense was always burned in the temples, and from that burning comes the literal significance of the word incense, which means "through the smoke."

Arabia has always been the land of perfume, the "scents of Arabia" being classic. Lady Macbeth refers to "all the perfumes of Arabia" in her sleep walking agony when she fancies she cannot wash the smell of Duncan's blood from her hand.

While Arabia has most of the fame, it is undoubtedly a fact that to Egypt belongs most of the credit, for the art of perfuming was practiced there to its fullest extent. Even the embalmed dead were saturated with spices and scents which have retained their delightful aroma after thousands of years. It was from old Egypt that the Greeks and Romans learned the use of the still for extracting perfumes from plants and flowers. To this Roman love for perfumes no doubt as much as to her own habits was due the fact that Cleopatra's barge was so overwhelmingly scented. Shakespeare describes it with:

Purple the sails and so perfumed that
The winds were love-sick with them.
—Philadelphia Record.

Consolation.

A victim to hysterical grief over the death of her husband after forty years of an exceptionally happy wedded life grandma sat in her rocking chair moaning and weeping.

Little Robert (escaping from the usual watchful care of his nurse, "Aunt Mandy Sanderson," nergress of 300 pounds or more, black as anything human could be, and a complete antidote to the refined, gracious and delicate grandma of sixty, whose grief her grandson would try to assuage—"Please don't cry so, grandma," he pleaded, as he passed his little hand over her gray locks and with boundless sympathy in his tones. "I'm sure you can get another husband very soon. Why, even Aunt Mandy Sanderson had seven of them!"—New York Sun.

Took It Like a Philosopher.

One day Mrs. Jones rushed into the library to her husband with hasty steps and a wild look of excitement. "Oh, John, oh, John!" she exclaimed, with a lot of emotional thrills. "Norah made a mistake and tried to light the kitchen fire with gasoline!" "Gasoline, eh?" calmly responded John. "Did she get it started?" "Did she get it started?" cried the amazed Mrs. Jones. "It blew her out the kitchen window!" "That's all right, my dear," returned the philosophical Jones. "It was her afternoon out, anyway."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Not Very Funny.

"I did my best to be entertaining," said the young man in a voice of sorrow. "Did you succeed?" "I'm afraid not. I recited Hamlet's soliloquy. She looked at me reproachfully for several seconds and then exclaimed, 'I don't think that's very funny!'"—London Telegraph.

HE POSES IN THE ALPS.

The "Dear Old Shepherd" Who Does It For a Consideration.

Nearly every adventurer upon the Alps nowadays carries a camera. It is a sign of the times. People have become obsessed with the importance of realities, and the camera is the only possible agent to enable you to show realities to your friends. It is not of much use to tell them about some strange sight or of some curious conformation of nature you may have met in your climb. You must show it to them.

A feature of the Alps today is the number of worthies who earn their bread by means of the camera. There is an old man at Grindelwald, for instance, who makes quite a comfortable competency by standing in front of his chalet when visitors laden with cameras are coming up the side of the mountain and blowing upon a tremendous horn.

"How very quaint!" exclaims the unsuspecting tourist. "The dear old shepherd is calling home the cows." The dear old shepherd, however, is a man of sound business principles. He doesn't drag his antiquated instrument about his house for the fun of the thing. Neither does he perform upon it for the benefit of his flocks and herds, for he owns none. But he will tell you frankly, when you ask him to stand "quite still," that he will very willingly pose in whatever manner you like, but you must first pay him a couple of francs for his trouble. That old man is probably the best known character in the Grisons and the hero of many local tales.—Wide World Magazine.

BUTT AND HIS BANKNOTES.

Isaac Was a Great Orator, but Was Careless With Money.

Some amusing anecdotes are told of Isaac Butt, the famous Irish orator, in "The Life of Old Dublin," by Mr. James Collins. The author recalls the fact that Butt was very careless in regard to money and repeats a reminiscence which he heard from the late Judge Adams:

"Poor Isaac Butt was a man of splendid genius, but, as all the world knew, careless to the last degree in money matters. I was in Youghal when the election petition was tried there, and Butt was counsel for Mr. Weguelin. At the close of the trial Mr. Butt was handed his check, running to several hundred pounds. The moment he got it he went over to one of the banks and cashed it.

"Butt was staying at the house of a Youghal gentleman, and in the morning he put his hand in his pocket and found the money was gone. I shall never forget the hullabaloo that followed. Consternation, suspicion, bedlam swept through the house. And in the middle of it all, just as the police were being summoned, the young son of the house turned up with the missing banknotes.

"It had been a windy night, the window shook in the loose frame, and Butt, annoyed by the noise, got up, stuffed the first wad of paper he could find between the frame and the casement, went to bed again and forgot all about it."

Not What Was Meant.

A certain doctor, who is, on his own frank admission, "the ugliest man in four counties," has a keen sense of humor which enables him to enjoy many real and unconscious reflections upon his facial deficiencies.

Once, after he had arrived too late to succor a poor woman who had been killed in a factory, the local newspaper published an ambiguous account of the case, which the doctor, with grim appreciation, preserved.

Having first described how the woman had come by her injuries, the paragraph went on to say: "Strong hopes were entertained of saving her life until Dr. P.—arrived, but these hopes unfortunately proved ill founded, for the moment the doctor showed his face within the door the poor woman fell back with a gasp and expired."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Trick of the Orator.

Disraeli, whose eloquence Lord Curzon ranks below that of Gladstone, tried hard to give his hearers the impression that he was not in the habit of preparing his speeches. Discussing Plunket's oratory with Disraeli, Lord Granville remarked that the Irish statesman hesitated so long for a word that he seemed to be on the point of breaking down. "Lord bless you!" Disraeli exclaimed. "Did that take you in? Why, that is part of the trick. I have often done it to make it appear that my speech has not been prepared."—London Chronicle.

What They Needed.

"Now, my friends," said the candidate, making another effort to arouse enthusiasm in his hearers, "what do we need in order to carry this constituency by the biggest majority in its history?" The response was immediate and enthusiastic. "Another candidate!" yelled the audience.—Toronto World.

Methodist Church Notes
On Tuesday evening, May 12, the regular monthly and business meeting of "The Gleaners" was held at the home of Mrs. Wells, 626 Seguin street.

Despite the warm weather, a large number of the class was present and no one thought of the warm night when the spirited contests opened. A letter from Mrs. J. M. Henry, who is visiting in Brookhaven, was read and very much enjoyed.

The business session was brief but fine reports were handed in by the various committees, all of whom are doing excellent work.

Before the games, Mrs. Wells assisted by Miss Rhodes and Miss Daniels, served the most delicious ice cream and cake, which seemed to sharpen the wits of The Gleaners so that the hardest question asked in the contests seemed simple (excepting, of course, a few).

Mrs. Wells proved herself a charming hostess and we will long remember the delightful evening spent in her home. The next meeting will be held June 9 at the home of Mrs. J. Garland, 210 Pelican avenue.

The following program was rendered at the Mothers' day service Sunday at 11 a. m.:
