

Smart Modes in Millinery

Nothing gives a woman so much pleasure as making a shopping tour through our Millinery Salon—except it be the subsequent pleasure of wearing a hat purchased here. If you are bent on the purchase of a hat for morning and knockabout use, here you will find the goal of your desire in a Tailored Hat in the size and shape you prefer; or perchance you want a less severe shape—then choose from the variety of small and medium size shapes in soft draped and pleated effects; then sometime you'll surely want a stylish "Sunday-best bonnet," gay or sombre in color and tastily trimmed. Well, you can revel in finery to your heart's content. It may be that velvet is the material employed—in taupe, blue, gray, purple, beetroot and other fascinating shades. Many models are charmingly trimmed with burnt ostrich, others are smartened with jaunty velvet bows, while still others show bandeaux or brims of coquettish feathers. Sailors with soft rolling edges are finished with quills, fancy mounts or fur pom poms.

But how your heart will go out to a little fairy-like creation of gold metal lace, brocaded satin and soft furry trimming; or a darling little French bouquet will certainly attract you to the little black mushroom it so coyly adorns, while the facing of pink satin will give color to the wearer's cheeks. Then the heavenly blue of a velvet shape shirred all over will surely arouse envy for the owner!

WOMEN WEAVE STRAW HATS

All People of Island Depend Upon Earnings of Few Cents a Day Each for Their Living.

Next to the transshipment activities of Mount Pleasant, the weaving of straw hats is the chief source of income of the people, says Commerce Reports. The hats woven are of a cheap quality, the standard selling in 1910 for from $1.30 to $1.43 per dozen. The straw for these hats is at present imported from Venezuela and Colombia, but the Dutch government is attempting to raise it in Dutch Guiana.

The hats are woven by the women and children in their homes, and by moderate industry a woman can complete a hat in one day. All over the island from early morning until after sunset the weaving goes on. The Syrian purchasers, who collect the hats from house to house, pay about ten or eleven cents each. Although the straw for a hat costs the weaver from five to seven cents and the amount realized from a day's work is very small, many of the people depend entirely upon their meager earnings from this industry.

In the government school hat weaving is taught and some of the natives attain a high degree of skill, producing hats said to equal the best made in Colombia. The better grades do not enter into the export statistics of the colony, as they are bought by tourists; the quality of the standard hat does not improve.

FEW REAL BOOK STORES HERE

Count Tolstoy Struck by Lack of Opportunities for Obtaining Good Literature in United States.

In my country, as in the other parts of Europe, nobody need have any difficulty in finding book stores in small towns or in large cities. Count Ilya Tolstoy writes in the Century magazine. Here one can find a cigar store, a drug store, all kinds of shops where luxuries can be purchased, but the seeking of a bookshop is often a very hard quest. Even in New York it is hard to find a real book store, where the attendants know their authors and can help one select the books that one needs on any subject. There are some, but none too many. They can be counted on the fingers of one's hands.

In smaller cities the task of finding books is a hopeless one. There are a few stores where books are sold; but what books? Novels mostly, the average ephemeral romance; magazines with too many ill-conceived articles containing little upbuilding criticism of public life, much ill-digested information, and newspapers which afford little of intellectual value, being mostly mediums of advertising. American literature is yet poor. The good magazines are few compared with European reviews. The inheritance of mankind, the universal literature, is hardly known here. There are translations in sets, richly bound, but cheaply produced, and too often done by hack writers, who do not even understand what they translate. They are bad translations, as a rule, but costly. Poor people are not able to buy them. Even in Russia, in the country which Americans think uncivilized, we have translations of all the world's great writers. These editions are appropriate to the means of the people. They can be bought for prices from 1 to 5 cents. It is the same in England. The result here is that the people read only newspapers and magazines. In Russia for the same price we can build a library of great books. The best works of Pushkin, Dickens, Shakespeare, Dante, Cervantes, Goethe, Tolstoy, Heine, Victor Hugo and countless others are at the disposal of the poorest.

ECONOMY WITH GAS STOVE

Woman Tells How She Saved Money by Making Plans Ahead for Her Baking Day.

A woman has written in to the Woman's Home Companion about her gas stove and she says:
"The idea of telling other women how to economize time and money in the use of my gas stove came to me on hearing a young housekeeper tell about baking a pudding, or just one thing, in a gas oven as large as my own, which struck me as amazingly extravagant," writes a woman in the Woman's Home Companion.
"When planning to have a baking day with the oven, I sit down the day before and think out just what is needed for several meals ahead which must be cooked. For instance, I place a roast in a pan just barely large enough to hold it, thus economizing on space as well. Then, if possible, I cover the roast with a pan which can be made to sit quite level, into which I put several potatoes; or, if this arrangement isn't practicable, I put the potatoes on the grate. Beside the roast I place a small pudding dish containing a bread pudding, on a small asbestos mat beside the pudding dish a small pan of biscuits. A vegetable may sometimes be baked in a napkin with all these things as well.
"The following, all of which I have tested, will be found good combinations for any baking day:
"A meat loaf, covered, in a bread pan; escalloped tomatoes in a pudding dish; a pan of corn gems. Time about an hour. Baked potatoes may be crowded in almost always.
"Roast chicken in small cake tin; sweet potatoes peeled and sliced, seasoned and covered with milk in pudding dish; macaroni and cheese in a bread tin. Time about one and one-half hours, oven moderate."

If anyone can really tell what is going on in Germany this is the time for him to speak out.
The slacker's idea of the best protection against shrapnel is a distance of about 82 miles.
Somehow it's hard to be as enthusiastic about hoeing potatoes as we were about planting them.
