

Methodist Church

Rev. C. C. Wier, Pastor; Residence 258 Vallette Street; Phone, Algiers 138.

Last Sunday morning the congregation was better than it has been, but was not what it should be. The subject was "Joy in Doing the Will of God," with the text taken from John 13:17: "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." The text sounded paradoxical, but it was literally true that the happiest experiences we have are those in which we are doing the known will of God. This is not only true to the experience of men and women under the Christian dispensation, but was true to the experiences of men before that as voiced by the Psalmist 40:8: "I delight to do thy will, O my God: Yea Thy law is written within my heart." If you are not happy, try doing the perfect will of God as a happiness producer. If everyone did the perfect will of God we would all rejoice to do His will in concert.

The Junior Choir did some special work. Miss Thelma Kennedy played a violin solo for the Voluntary. The anthem was "The Way of Love Leads Heavenward," offertory, "Cross, Crown and Thorns."

The night service was well attended and the choir had good music. The pastor's subject was "The First Preacher," with the text from Gen. 4:24: "And Enoch walked with God; and he was not for God took him." We had only a glimpse of the man as found in a few verses in Gen. 5th chapter, and in Jude 14-16 and Heb. 11:5-6. Withal it was so brief, we learned that even in a thus wicked period of the world God sent a preacher to tell them the truth. We have only a brief mention of His message, but it is enough to give us an idea of the hope he held out to sinful men. A Savior who was to come to the children of men. Jude, 14th and 15th verses, and Enoch also the 7th from Adries, prophesied of these, saying: "Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousand of His saints to execute judgment upon all and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against Him."

ing meeting with Mr. Claude Entwistle Tuesday night. This is a most important branch of the church service that every pastor appreciates.

Many letters have come to various members of the congregation from the soldier boys. The only complaint is from those who have not "gone over there." They are so anxious to get into the big event that will make great history to be read by coming ages. "A safe place to live in freedom of conscience and person for all people."

Mrs. Wier and Joseph will leave for Franklin, La., to-morrow, to be the guests of Mrs. Mary Cross, while the pastor goes to Houston, Tex., to perform the marriage of his brother, Mr. T. P. Wier, and Miss Elinor Jones, both of Houston. The marriage will be performed in the First Presbyterian Church, corner of McKinney and Main.

Perfect Artificial Eyes.

Artificial eyes are much more commonly worn than most people imagine. The average user does not make advertisement of the fact, which may be known only to a few intimate friends, for such eyes nowadays, a product of the glassblower's highest skill, are of a workmanship so artistic as to be perfectly deceptive. When, as is usually the case, the eye is set upon the "root" of the natural organ it moves exactly like a real one.

Naturally Felt Important.

"Who was the lady who just now complained to the manager that a clerk had not shown her the proper respect?" "That was Mrs. Slashby." "She looked important." "She has a right to feel important. She's owed this firm over $1,000 for the past six months."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

to be the case, for on last Sunday the people of the parish had the unusual pleasure and honor of having one of their own young men ascend the altar and offer the sacrifice of the mass in a solemn manner for himself and for them. The young priest was assisted by Rev. Father Cassagne. It was for Father Cassagne a case of a return of past favors, for a few years ago the young priest was an altar boy of the Holy Name of Mary Church and in this capacity assisted the present acting pastor of the parish in saying mass many times. Rev. Butin, S. M., D. D., who taught Father Howe Scripture at Marist College, Washington, D. C., was deacon, and Rev. Father M. J. Larkin, S. M., a classmate of his, was subdeacon. A classmate of his, Willie Judge, were acolytes, Harold Healy was censor bearer, Lawrence Gerretts was cross bearer and Ignatius Stenger was assistant master of ceremonies. These are all old-time friends of Father Howe. Very Rev. T. J. Larkin, S. M., preached the sermon. He extolled the dignity of the priesthood, from the idea that he is the ambassador of Christ. He explained the qualities and requirements necessary to become a good, active and God-fearing priest, and then he gave credit and praise to the young priest who had labored and studied and prayed for so many years to prepare himself for the great work that is now ahead of him. He assured the people that, judging from the record that the young priest had made during his long years of studies, for piety and learning and activity, there was no doubt but that he would make a name for himself; that he would be a source of pride and consolation to mother and family, a credit to his friends, and a most useful member of the Society of Mary.

The church was filled to overflowing, thereby showing the appreciation of the parish for the great honor conferred upon it on this occasion.

In the evening a surprise was given Father Howe, when he was called out on the porch for a few moments and presented with a beautiful gold chalice, the gift of his friends and admirers. His Honor, Mayor Behrman, made the presentation speech. He expressed himself very happily and wished the young priest success and happiness in his new field of labor. Father Cassagne also made a speech in his usual strong and witty style. He accepted the token of love offered him by his friends and thanked them from the bottom of his heart for the pleasure given him on this great day in his life by his friends of the Holy Name of Mary parish.

It was a great day, one long to be remembered, and one that should encourage more of our young men to prepare themselves for a life that is given up to such a noble purpose and doing good to men.

PECULIARITY OF LOST HAND

That He Should Be Able to Feel It Alternately Open and Close Puzzle Soldier.

A British soldier writes: Most people, I think, know that when a person has lost a limb, that person still retains the "sense," or feeling, of the missing limb. As a case in point, I might mention that a friend of mine, who had lost a leg in the war, in an unthinking moment took a step on the missing leg and came to grief. I myself had the misfortune to lose my left hand on the Messines ridge last June, and all the pain I have suffered from the wound has been in the hand which I no longer possess. Now, the peculiar part of it all is that on alternate days the fingers of the missing hand open and close; that is to say, yesterday they were closed; today they are open. Tomorrow they will be closed again. Can this be explained? This change takes place during sleep, and once or twice, on restless nights, I have actually felt the change taking place. I was left-handed, and during the attack I carried my revolver in the missing hand. When the fingers are closed they are exactly in the same position as if they were still grasping the revolver. That I can understand, but why should they open on alternate days? The only explanation I can offer is that what remains of the hand after I was wounded was amputated exactly twenty-four hours later. Also, I was wounded somewhere about 4 o'clock in the morning, and was operated on about the same time the following morning, and the opening and closing of the fingers takes place about this time.

WHERE SOLDIERS ARE BETTER

Army Officer Explains the Benefits of Development of Physiological Resistance.

In an interview with Surgeon General Gorgas for the American Magazine, about the chances your boy has to come back alive, the author says, referring to another army officer for the moment:

"Major Crile said another thing which every mother and father ought to learn by heart. He said: 'The thing which affects a wounded man's chances more than almost anything else is physiological resistance. That is where the soldier puts it all over the civilian every time. When a man goes out from the worries, responsibilities, anxieties, and irritations of civil life to the peaceful pursuit of war—'

"He stopped and laughed. Then he went on seriously: 'I mean that! I've seen these tall, pasty young clerks get out and turn into men! I've seen young chaps who were little more than flabby human jellyfish transformed by their life in the trenches into husky fellows that were grit clean through. They laughed at things which would have finished them completely before they went into the army. They had developed the biggest factor in a wounded man's chances—physiological resistance. And it was their life as soldiers that gave them this new possession.'

Raising Goats in Honolulu.

The island of Kahoolawe is to be devoted to lowering the cost of living—if production of 10,000 goats for marketing will do it. The board of agriculture and forestry has authorized Chairman Arthur H. Rice to confer with the governor and land commissioner on a plan to withdraw the island from the forest reserve and offer it for lease. This has been done and Chairman Rice has placed in the hands of Deputy Attorney General Smith the duty of drawing up the necessary papers. Kahoolawe now produces goats and sand. It is believed that thousands of goats of marketable quality can be exported from the island and a chance is to be given for some enterprising rancher to become the goat king of the territory.—Honolulu Star-Bulletin.

New Name for 'Em.

The head of an East end household had no sooner arrived at home the other evening than he was sent forthwith to see "what in the world" was the matter with the furnace. His derby hat encountered the top of the door leading into the basement, with the result that the hat received a good-sized "stove" in the front.

As he emerged from the basement after a tussle with the offending heating plant he was met with a shout of laughter by the six-year-old heir to the family fortune.

"Gee, mother!" exclaimed the boy. "Look! Dad's got a dimple in his hat."

How to Make a Service Flag.

Perhaps it is due to the familiar picture of Betsey Ross with the first American flag spread out upon her lap and George Washington and two of his friends looking on that gives us such a bias to the hand-made flag, but nevertheless, a sentiment attaches to it that belongs to no machine-made production. Very properly, we should feel about our service flag in this way. An 12x12-inch service flag may be made from one and a third yards of four-inch wide red ribbon, ten inches of white ribbon and enough blue to form the stars to which you are entitled. Cut the red ribbon into four pieces, two of 18 inches length and the other two so that they finish off four and a half inches, allowing for seams. Sew these strips together, inserting the white piece for the field. Then applique a blue star, or embroider it, according to desire. The white field will be varied in size in accordance with the number of stars used.

Evidently He Was Not.

James and John were twins and inseparable. James, who was rather sticky, was especially dependent upon his stronger brother and cried whenever the latter was out of his sight. One day John woke early from their daily nap and came downstairs. Later, alone, he cried lustily. John heard him and, stepping to the stairway, he called in the most sympathetic elder brother tone: "What's the matter, James? Ain't I up there?"

Valuable Australian Wood.

Figured blackwood is mentioned in a consular report as perhaps the most beautiful of Australia's many ornamental hardwoods. The "blackbird" and "mottled" grains are most sought after, the former being not unlike that of the North American maple. The color, however, is different, being a rich golden brown. The panel effects are obtained by combining the figure with the plain black wood.

Chesterfield and Voltaire.

The fourth earl of Chesterfield was on one occasion at a grand assembly in France where Voltaire was one of the guests. Suddenly the French writer accosted his lordship with the words: "My lord, I know you are a judge. Which are the more beautiful, the English or the French ladies?" "Upon my word," replied Chesterfield, with his usual presence of mind, "I am no judge of paintings."—Argosy.

Mr. H. L. Hebert, President Louisiana Printing Co., 624 Carondelet Street, City,

My Dear Mr. Hebert;—

We have received so many compliments during the past week on our first sixteen page paper that we feel it would be an injustice to you not to let you share in part of the credit.

We feel that it is no more than right that we should let you know that we are very much pleased with the work on THE HERALD but as this month marks our EIGHTH ANNIVERSARY of doing business with the LOUISIANA PRINTING COMPANY, that fact alone is enough evidence to warrant our satisfaction.

Assuring you again that we do not care to take all credit for the make-up and looks of our publication, we therefore ask you to accept fifty per cent, at least, of this credit.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) THE HERALD,
