WE TEACH SPENCERIAN SHORTHAND

The system has become famous throughout this country because of its achievements. It can be mastered with one-twentieth the study required for Pitman or Gregg. It can be written faster than either and read infinitely better. Study the system for yourself—verify our statements—study the following FIRST LESSON. The others are as simple. The alphabet and ten simple lessons—that's all.

Memorize the following alphabetic characters:

l m n s o p d d

VOWEL POSITION i e a o u

"N" placed in the "I" position is nigh. "NI". Placed in the "E" position is "NE". Placed in the "A" position is neigh. "NA". Placed in the "O" position is "NO". In the "U" position is new. "NU", etc.

ni ne na no nu

WRITE AND READ THE FOLLOWING WORDS.

lye knee fle days
li ne fi

my know nice face
mi no

neigh sigh nose lace
na si

If you knew the entire alphabet, you could now write at least 1000 words of the English language. To users of the old antiquated systems, this statement seems preposterous—they will tell you that it is not so—"it can't be done," they say. WE ARE DOING IT EACH DAY. Call and see our students write and read Spencerian.

Write for particulars regarding the other lessons. Send for catalogue that will tell you all about the great Spencer College, its teachers, its methods, and what it is doing for the young people who take advantage of the opportunity it offers.

A WOMAN'S WAY

By ANNA GREENLEAF.

"But, Jack, you wouldn't have me wear this gown to the convention, would you?" and his wife held up for his inspection the gown that had done duty for three seasons. "It is shabby and worn, besides being hopelessly out of date. I should think you would be ashamed of me," and she flung the gown from her with an angry gesture.

"Ashamed of you? Never! Why, little girl, you always look well in my eyes."
"You understand, of course," he added apologetically, carefully arranging his new top coat and light felt, "that a man is obliged to keep his clothes up to date, otherwise it might affect his business standing; besides, my golf dues must be paid today, and next week, as you know, my college chums arrive. There are six of them and the cost of their entertainment will be considerable. But cheer up, you will not suffer by comparison with those at the convention, take your husband's word for it."

Mrs. Potter brushed away hot, angry tears as the door closed upon her husband. Since their marriage five years ago, she had patiently and cheerfully repressed her longing for pretty clothes and dainty articles of adornment that women love, but now that her husband was well established in his law practice and the comfortable house paid for, she began to realize that she was making all the sacrifices while her husband was reaping the advantage of them, and she resolved to check his selfishness even at the cost of humiliation to them both.

After a week of rain the day of the convention dawned clear and unclouded. The sun shining upon the green sward was dazzling in its brightness, while the birds sang merrily from trees whose buds, full of bursting, pre-saged the crowning glory of spring-time.

Ruth Potter had hoped the day would be stormy so as to render her shabbiness less conspicuous, but as she opened the window and lingered in the warmth of the sun, the beauties of the morning awoke an answering chord in her heart and she was glad her wish was not granted.

"There is one consolation," she reflected, as she dressed for the convention, "my things all match—shabby gown, ditto hat, ditto gloves, ditto shoes," and she laughed in spite of herself as she turned from her mirror.

At the convention the program went off without a hitch until the business session, when a difference of opinion arose regarding a point of law.

At the suggestion that the matter be settled by consulting a near-by authority, Mrs. Potter grasped the coveted opportunity and volunteered to procure the required information.

She selected a committee to accompany her with great care, choosing those who were smartly and richly dressed as a foil to her own appearance.

In her husband's office Jack and his friends were having a merry time over their cigars when Bert Morrow brought his feet to the floor with a bang.

"By Jove!" he rudely interrupted, "what a group of stunning women! And, I say, will you look at the shabby little mouse—why, if they aren't turning in here," and throwing away his cigar, he began smoothing his mustache excitedly.

"The same old Bert," laughed Jack, when a timid tap arrested him.

Upon opening the door, Jack stared first with surprise, then with consternation that was almost alarm, at the picture which confronted him—a bevy of stylish but tastefully-dressed women forming a background for a shrinking little figure with a smiling but determined face and a shabby gown.

Ruth Potter chuckled inwardly as her husband, visibly embarrassed, stammered through the introductions.

Under the inspection of his fastidious friends, the contrast between his wife's apparel and that of her richly-dressed friends seemed to Jack nothing less than appalling. But to the wife it became ludicrous, and she was obliged to make use of her handkerchief to check her risibles as she noted down the words which her husband dictated in a strained, unnatural voice.

At dinner the next day Ruth gave her husband a full account of the convention.

"It was as you said, Jack, no one noticed my clothes. How foolish I was to care so much."

Later in the evening, as Jack was enjoying his cigar, he tossed a check-book into his wife's lap, remarking sheepishly, as he felt her grateful kiss upon his cheek: "Don't be afraid of overdrawing; I'm good for it."

Early English King Deposed.

The first English monarch to suffer the indignity of judicial proceedings against himself was King Edward II, who was formally deposed in 1327. He had been left the kingdom in 1307, and faced difficulties. He could not even control the royal family. His cousin, the earl of Lancaster, conspired against him; he lost his chief minister, Gaveston, and his army was crushed at the battle of Bannockburn. After a series of high-handed political intrigues, in which religion played a prominent part, parliament was finally persuaded to file charges against the monarch. He was deposed and the government turned over to his son, the prince, who was but fourteen years old.
