SWEET POTATOES AND THEIR FOOD VALUE FOR HOGS

Sweet potatoes grow well in all portions of the State, and in all soils except occasional areas that are excessively rich in nitrogenous matter. Sandy soils in the alluvial lands are generally better suited to potatoes than stiff lands. In the hill lands, the loams and mixed sandy soils are the best. In some localities, distinctly clay soils produce the best potatoes. This crop requires only a moderate amount of moisture. Plants may be put out from early spring until August. When planted early in the spring, they do not produce large roots much in advance of planting made later. For this reason they are especially adapted for planting after spring crops have been harvested. Oats and clovers harvested in May and June may be followed by sweet potatoes to advantage. If early plantings are made in small areas, they will afford vines for planting in June for extensive areas. The large yams or some of the large white varieties are to be preferred. The Southern Queen produces large yields. A bushel of seed potatoes put in a hotbed early in the spring will give slips enough to plant sufficient acreage to afford vines for two acres of planting soon after oat harvest, or two or three times this area for late planting. Planted in June and early July, they will be ready for feeding about the middle of October. An acre of potatoes should feed eight to ten hogs, one-year-old, for sixty days, if one uses some supplemental food in the form of rice polish or rice bran. We have uniformly secured good results from feeding hogs in this way.

The writer considers sweet potatoes the best root crop for hogs for fall and early winter grazing. The cut-over pine hill lands will likely have their agricultural development as a hog raising country from the fact that these soils are pre-eminently suited to the production of sweet potatoes, peanuts and cow peas, and they produce fair winter growing.—W. ## GOV. BREWER THREATENS TO CUT RUSSELL THROAT

If He Repeated Charges That Governor Was Guilty Of Stealing

Gov. Brewer of Mississippi was asked for a statement of his encounter with Lee Russell at Wesson last week, and if it was true that he had threatened to cut his throat. "Yes," said Gov. Brewer, "I did," and I meant it. I had heard that in his speech at Greenwood the other day Russell had charged that I had stolen a bill during the legislative session and soon after he began to speak he said he had been accused of having charged his opponent, Bunyan Carter, with stealing a bill, when he never did anything of the kind.

"I am now going to tell you who did steal a bill," he said, and he turned his face towards me as I sat on the platform.

"I arose immediately, walked close up to him and said in a low tone of voice that none could hear except Russell, Dr. Little and Abe Cohen, who were also on the platform with us. I want to say, Senator, that I have taken a great deal off of you because I was Governor, and did not want to break the peace, but there are some things that I will not take off of you or any other man, and the people of Mississippi do not require that I as their Governor should take, and if you accuse me of stealing, as you evidently started to do, I'll cut your throat from ear to ear right here."

"Russell replied: 'you can try that whenever you get ready.'"

"I said, whenever you make the charge I'm ready and if you doubt it make the charge and I'll show you better than I can tell you."

"Thereupon I stepped back and sat down and he said to the people: 'The Governor has threatened to cut my throat.'"

"He then went on with his speech, but he said nothing about my stealing a bill or anything else."

I sat on the platform until Russell had finished and was presented to the audience by Mr. Cohen. I told them I was not going to engage in any joint debate with Lee Russell. You can observe that he has argued no principle, but has simply engaged in a lot of mud slinging of the lowest and crudest form. I could not maintain my self-respect or the dignity of the high office with which the people of Mississippi have honored me and engage in that kind of a discussion. I will content myself with making a respectful reply to his charges, all of which he has heard refuted over and over again, but he renews them in each speech he makes with just as much energy as if he thought they were true.

"In justification of my action in calling Mr. Russell down," continued Gov. Brewer. "I want to say I respect the laws of my country and revere the precepts of its holy religion. I will practice moderation and forbearance to avoid a calamity and shudder at the shedding of human blood, but may my right arm fall palsied from its socket if I fail to defend my own honor. I have never been accused of theft; no Governor of Mississippi has ever been accused of stealing to my knowledge, and I do not think the good people of Mississippi require at my hands, even though I am Governor of their state, that I sit upon the platform and allow any man to accuse me of stealing."

NEW PARCEL POST RULING INCREASE SIZE OF PACKAGES

The new ruling in the parcel post department on the size of packages increases it to 84 inches, which the sum of the length and girth of the packages must not exceed. It is believed by government officials that the amount of business will be much increased by the new ruling, because of allowing the shipment of larger packages.

It is provided that on payment of one cent the postmaster at the mailing office may give the sender of a parcel of fourth class mail a receipt A postage stamp to cover the charge for the receipt will be affixed to the parcel and the name and address of the addresses will be written in the receipt by the sender. Formerly the size of packages sent by parcel post was limited to 72 inches.

Precautions Against Hog Cholera.

As a matter of prevention of cholera, all hogs just brought on to the farm should be quarantined for at least thirty days before turning with the rest of the herd; neighbors or persons coming from cholera-infected premises should not be permitted on the place, and owners of healthy herds should not visit infected farms or premises.

Dogs should not be allowed to roam at large; and birds, especially buzzards, should be destroyed; hogs should not be kept near to contaminated streams, or public highways. It is better not to over-feed hogs with new corn. Pens and troughs should be disinfected with some reliable disinfecting agent; and quicklime should be used freely on feed lots. When hogs have been exposed to infection, they should be vaccinated by some experienced veterinarian, or agent, who understands the importance of cleanliness.

"Clean Up the Bowels and Keep Them Clean"

There are many remedies to be had for constipation, but the best is to procure one that does not produce violence. A remedy that does not produce violence should be used by force when it should be used by persuasion is Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets.

After using Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets, Mr. N. A. Wadley, 315 Washington St., Waco, Tex., says:

"Almost all my life I have been troubled with constipation, and have tried many remedies, all of which seemed to cause pain without producing much relief. I finally tried Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets and found them excellent. Their action is pleasant and mild, and their chocolate taste makes them easy to take. I am now glad to recommend them."

"Clean up the bowels and keep them clean," is the advice of physicians, because they realize the danger resulting from habitual constipation. Do not delay too long but begin proper curative measures.

Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets are a new remedy for this old complaint and a great improvement over cathartics you have been using the past. They taste like candy and work like a charm. A box will convince you.

Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets are sold by all druggists, at 25 cents a box containing 25 doses. If you found satisfactory after trial, turn the box to your druggist and he will return your money.
