When We Went To School

They taught us that there were 2,000 pounds to a ton. Since we have been in the coal business we haven't forgotten it either.

But 2,000 pounds don't always mean a ton of coal on the scales. Dirt, rubbish, clinkers and slate will increase the weight of a load of coal without giving you a 2,000 pound ton of pure, screened, heat-producing--

C O A L

Every pound of matter that is in your coal means the loss of a pound of real coal.
"Full Value" coal is what we sell just as honestly as if the government made us stamp it as they do pure food.
