16,000 ACRES OF PINE LAND SOLD AT PURVIS

Northern Capital Will Make 40 Acre Tracts And Sell Farms

Purvis, Miss., Aug. 9.—Deeds involving the expressed consideration of $240,000 have been filed in the office of the chancery clerk here, thus completing a deal wherein James Hand, W. H. Magee and F. H. Jordan, of Purvis, and Mrs. Mary Griffin, of Hattiesburg, convey to the Purvis Company, whose office is 220 Broadway, New York, about sixteen thousand acres of cut-over pine land lying in and contiguous to this place, which the purchasers are planning to develop and colonize.

The purchase of this land by Northern capitalist and land colonizers, it is believed, means much for Purvis and the surrounding section. The new owners announce their intention of beginning immediately to clear 1200 acres of land just outside of this town and to subdivide the entire tract into forty-acre farms on which will be buildings, fences, wells, pecan and fruit trees and not less than five acres in strawberries. Among the local enterprises promised as a result of this new deal, are a canning and preserving factory, a dairy and a well appointed clubhouse with golf links.

ANIMAL LAUGHS AT HUNTERS

For Fifteen Years White Stag Has Eluded All Pursuers in the Minnesota Woods.

For fifteen years hunters in the swamps near White Pine, Minn., have tried to send a fatal bullet into a great white buck that has headed the deer herds of that section, says a St. Paul dispatch. The mammoth stag plunges into the dense tamarack swamps at the opening of each hunting season and only occasionally do hunters get a glimpse of the animal, which seems immune to hunters' bullets.

William Lancette, sergeant of police at Ducas station, while hunting in the vicinity of White Pine last week with others from St. Paul, caught sight of the white stag, seeing it rise from a thicket at the crest of a hill and fade into nothingness while he was bringing his rifle to bear on the spot. Others of the party caught a glimpse of the animal as it plunged into the thick tamarack, and although they scoured the swamp, they saw no more of it.

SAN BENITO

A Poem Received for Benefit of Bogalusa Troops

A ballad description of the San Benito, 1916, has been revived for the Rookie Soldiers now getting their first taste of a soldier life. The author was a farmer's son whose name seems to have been forgotten. The ballad was widely quoted by a Private at the time it was printed, and in the main it appears to Rookies encamped at a glance from the irrigated districts to hold good today. The original title is, "H— In San Benito." The ballad follows: The Devil we're told in Hell was chained

And a thousand years he there remained. He never complained nor did he groan, But determined to start a Hell of his own. Where he could torment the souls of men, Without being chained in a prison pen.

So he asked the Lord if he had on hand Anything left when he made the land. The Lord said: "Yes I had plenty on hand, But I left it down by the Rio Grande. The fact is, old boy, the stuff is so poor I don't think you could use it in Hell anymore."

But the Devil went down to look at the truck, And said if it came as a gift he was stuck; For after examining it carefully and well, He concluded the place was too wet for Hell.

So in order to get it off his hands, The Lord promised the Devil to dry the lands; He then had the soldier boys begin their ditching.

A regular cathartic that smells like bad eggs. Hence the deal was closed, and the deed was given, And the Lord went back to His home in Heaven; And the Devil then said, I have all that is needed. To make a good Hell, and hence he succeeded.

He began to put thorns on all of the trees, And he mixed the sand with millions of stinging lizards He scattered tarantulas along all the roads;

Put thorns on the cacti, and horns on the toads; He lengthened the horns of the Texas steer, Put an addition on the jackrabbits ears:

And he put a little devil in the broncho steed, And he poisoned the feet of the centipede. The rattlesnakes bite you, the scorpion stings, The mosquito delights you with buzzing wings

The mud sticks to your shoes, and the ants bite And those who sit down need half-soles on their pants. The Devil then said, That throughout the land He'd manage to keep up the Devil's own brand.

The heat in the summer is a hundred and ten, Too hot for the Devil, and too hot for men. The wild boar roams through the black chaparral— "It's a hell of a place he has for Hell."

SHIP LOADS OF BOOZE INTO DRY TERRITORY

New Orleans Officials Find Several Schooners Ready To Leave Port

Wholesale shipments of beer and wine from local brewers and wine merchants, consigned to dry territory in Mississippi, came to light yesterday with the report of Special Agent Pendleton of the Department of Justice. With the aid of Assistant A. V. Devlin, Mr. Pendleton has been busy securing evidence of these shippers whose operations are in conflict with Section 240 of the Federal criminal code.

The steamers M. Garibaldi and Annie Molini, seized last week by the Federal authorities at Bay St. Louis and Waveland, respectively, were found to carry a cargo of beer and wine for the consumption of dry Mississippians, and the entire cargo was confiscated. The activity of the authorities then directed itself toward the alleged "blind tigers" in the neighborhood and four of these "joints" were found in Bay St. Louis alone.

It is believed by the authorities that some five or six schooners loaded with liquor have been shipped from this port for Bay St. Louis in the past few months and their chain of evidence is fast closing about the guilty parties.—New Orleans American.

GEO. SMITH KILLED IN FALL FROM BUILDING

Well Known In Bogalusa Where He Was A Frequent Visitor

George K. Smith, one of the best known lumber men in the South and for many year secretary of the Yellow Pine Manufacturers Association fell or jumped from a 9 story window in St. Louis Tuesday and met instant death. Mr. Smith was well known to almost every department head in the Great Southern office as well as a large number of other citizens. He visited Bogalusa frequently.

Whether Smith committed suicide or accidentally fell from the window is not known. His body was found on the roof of a one story building directly under the window of his office building. He is said to have complained of dizziness and his friends believe that he went to the lavatory where he fell from the window.
