KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DONALD KENNEDY, OF ROXBURY, MASS., Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that removes that kind of Humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor). He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston.

Benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the right quantity is taken.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them, the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first. No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bedtime. Read the Label. Send for Book.

SOME GREAT EVENTS.

Transpiring at the Columbian Exposition Daily.

The New Liberty Bell Proclaims Freedom for All—Religious Leaders in Congress—State Celebrations.

(Special Chicago Correspondence.)

THE Columbian fair draws nearer to its close the fun grows fast and furious. That is to say the bustle and excitement grows apace. Day in and day out the programme of events is carried out, and so numerous and varied are its features that several of the greater events are often crowded into one day. For instance, last Saturday, September 9, the Grand Army of the Republic held a grand meeting in the fair grounds at the same time the Californians were holding high carnival at their state building.

Another momentous event occurred on the same day, namely, the dedication of the new Liberty bell, which had just arrived from its birthplace at Troy, N. Y., where it was made to the order of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The grand army men and the Californians took an active part in the dedication of the new bell and the three events were combined, making of the day one of the most memorable periods of the world's fair season.

The bell is one of the finest castings ever made. Not a flaw is in the metal. It is composed of a curious compound of precious and base metals. More than ten thousand dollars worth of old gold and silver ornaments, coins and jewelry were contributed by the patriotic members of the order. An old cent which was worth one hundred dollars from its historical association was contributed. The tone is very sweet because of the quality of the casting and the metal. It weighs six and a half tons—thirteen thousand pounds. Although it is one of the largest bells of the world, it does not approach in size that of the enormous bell at Moscow, which weighs twenty-five thousand pounds.

The bell is six feet high and eight feet in circumference at the mouth. It has a bright luster of a brassy nature. There are three inscriptions on it, one at the top ridge, another in the center and one at the lower edge. The upper one reads: "Glory to God in the highest; on earth good will toward men."

The central inscription is: "A new command I give unto you, that ye love one another." The lower is: "Proclaim liberty throughout the land and unto the inhabitants thereof."

This Columbian Liberty and peace bell is attracting world-wide notice, and it is indeed a worthy successor of the old claron of independence; but it is not nor never will be regarded with the same reverence that is lavished on the decrepit veteran that rings defiance to the forces of Great Britain, when this great nation was but a puny commonwealth taking its first lessons in self-government on the shores of the Atlantic.

The dedication ceremonies of the new bell were very impressive and inspiring, many noted people taking part and delivering eloquent addresses. The bell is suspended from a huge framework immediately in front of the eastern entrance of the Administration building, from which great positions the tones are ringing through the grand Court of Honor and out upon the blue waters of old Lake Michigan.

At the present writing there is in session at the fair the greatest assemblage of religious leaders the world has ever seen, representative exponents of every religious creed under the sun. This meeting is certainly a most extraordinary affair, and it is undoubtedly of great import among the religions of the world. During the sessions of this most remarkable congress the different leaders of moral and religious teachings ventilate their respective views and compare notes on the means of bringing the people of all lands to a higher state of morality and intellectuality.

To behold the fraternization of teachers of men so widely divergent in their tenets and how they have met in a marvel for the age to contemplate with the most earnest commendation.

The celebrations among the various state buildings are still attracting immense crowds. During the last few days New York, Kansas and Maryland were well represented, and have left open house to the world, and in fact, in the affair has been a great success. The state of Indiana has fixed upon September 27 as Indiana day at the fair, on which occasion the Hoosiers will doubtless create a big stir.

"The live cows and horses in that had their day at the fair, and they are to be followed by the smaller stock animals in their turn. The live stock show has been an unqualified success thus far, and the management is to be congratulated upon the eminently successful manner in which it has conducted the very different and diverse affair throughout. Hundreds of prizes have been awarded in the various classes and the whole thing has been without any jarring or ill feeling that was apparent.

PEOPLE WHO EAT.

Outdoor Dinner Parties Popular Among World's Fair Visitors.

Dining in the open air is one of the enjoyments of the fair. Never before has anyone seen so many people eating in open nooks and corners as may be seen almost any day, except Sunday, at the great exposition.

The weather just now is peculiarly agreeable for this sort of gastronomic entertainment. There is usually a cool, refreshing breeze from the lake which flows to rest on the system as tonic and "appetizer," like a cocktail or a glass of sherry before dinner.

The visitors who bring their lunches are legion, and they seem to be eating at all hours and in every imaginable spot where seats can be found. They are nearly always in family groups, oblivious to their surroundings, and fully bent on taking solid comfort.

They carry their lunch, as a rule, in boxes or cheap wooden baskets, which can be discarded when the contents have been swallowed.

The live stock pavilion, with its great amphitheater of shady seats, now that it is not occupied, furnishes a most desirable luncheon spot for visitors from the country. Over along the lake shore, wherever benches or boxes are found to sit upon, many lunch parties are always to be seen. The corners at the tops of buildings, the porches and verandas of state buildings, the shady corners under the pergola, and above all the green spots on the wooded island, offer special attractions to the picnic parties.

The scenes at these places between twelve and two o'clock are most diverting and sometimes quite amusing. The impromptu tables are filled with all sorts and conditions of people. A party of four, two pretty women and a couple of men in summer attire, will be seen next to a group of students in queer costumes, with flowing cravats. Near by a couple who have no time to observe their surroundings will be busily engaged with each other. But most of those who are eating engage in animated conversation about the marvels of the fair all around them, making gestures, pointing out certain buildings which they want to inspect more completely, and sometimes laughing aloud at a witticism offered by some vivacious member of the party.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

WORLD'S FAIR VISITORS.

They Are as Much of a Sight as the Exhibition Itself.

The best catalogues would not have included in their lists all the sights of the fair. One of the most interesting sights of all, for example, is the sight-seers themselves—quite as amusing and as instructive, too, for the curious observer of humanity, its foibles and its virtues as anything in Prof. Putnam's department of anthropology. The crowd is not exactly of the kind that flocked to the Centennial exposition in 1876, and decidedly not of that sort that thronged the Champ de Mars in Paris in 1889. It is more sophisticated, more refined and less joyous and at the same time less truly appreciative of its opportunity than the latter. The Americans have grown perceptibly in culture and grace since the Centennial brought them together to exhibit themselves and their crudeness to commiserating foreigners, and the growth is strongly in evidence upon the observer. Along with the linen duster, which was the distinguishing outward mark of the American citizen at Philadelphia in 1876, we seem to have discarded a good deal else that was biologic in mental attitude as well as in physical appearance. The people now here impress you as a rule as being people who are well-read in contemporary human history, and accustomed to seeing something of life. They know how to carry themselves with a fair degree of dignity and grace, and are well-informed of what has been going on in the world in recent years.—Providence (R. I.) Journal.

Quite Likely.

"Did I understand ye to read that there was upwards of two hundred an' forty thousand folks at that Chicago show in one day, Ezra?" inquired Uncle Tobias Stouckert of his son.

"Them was the figgers!" responded Ezra, solemnly.

"An' there wasn't so crowd, even then?" asked Uncle Tobias, after a pause.

"To crowd anywhere," said Ezra.

There was long silence, broken only by the fluttering of the newspaper in Ezra's hand, as the breeze blew in at the window.

"Well," said Uncle Tobias, at last, drawing a long breath, "I ain't prepared to doubt the papers, an' I know they've got a powerful lot of folks apart for that show, but it do seem to me that if I'd ben on hand along with them two hundred and forty thousand folks, I sh'd have calculated that there'd be here an' there a mon!"—Youth's Companion.

TOMMY AND HIS FATHER.

An Inquiring Mind Causes Examination of a Parent's Faith.

"Say, pa, I want to see that building where that boy lived who never told a lie," said a boy at the world's fair.

"Oh, you mean the Virginia building, George Washington's home. Well, I guess we'll have to take him there," said his father to his mother.

"That's the room," said the father, after they had entered the building.

"Who's Martha, pa—the cook?" "No, she was George Washington's wife."

"Well, our cook's named Martha. She's pa's girl, is she?" "No, no, no, you mustn't speak so familiarly of the father of your country."

"Was he my father, too?" "Yes, in a way."

"Then my name's Washington, ain't it?" "No, my son; don't ask so many fool questions."

"Was he your father, too?" "Yes, yes."

"Was he mamma—"

"Shut up. He was the father of the whole country, you know."

"Was he the father of his wife?" "Am I your mother's father?"

"No, you said George was."

"Now keep still and don't ask any more questions."

"Say, pa, George had lots of children, didn't he?" "No, he didn't have any. Now if you ask another question I'll take you right home."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

A BANQUET TO BE A CLIMAX.

To Be Given by World's Fair Directors to the Staffed Company.

A committee of the board of directors of the world's fair has been appointed to take charge of a great exposition banquet to be given to the foreign commissioners, President Cleveland and cabinet, the governors of the states and great dignitaries of the world, October 10, at the Waldorf-Astoria.

The banquet will be a most magnificent affair, and the plans are upon a scale in keeping with the country, the fair and Chicago. Expenses are not to be thought of until after the event is over. The guests are to number five or six hundred. For a banquet hall the present intention is to use the Auditorium, Central Music hall, or some large theater. A great floor is to be constructed and the decorations are to be unlimited. Sweet music is to come from hidden minstrels while the wines of the Orient are used to pledge the future of the world. The banquet oratory is to flow along with the rarest of champagne as the greatness of the fair and the good will of all nations to Chicago is told in song and story. At present artists are working on the elaborate invitation cards. If Chicago men are exporting great quantities of the banquet will be greater than any other yet attempted.—Chicago Tribune.

A Model Manager.

A more graceful, gracious and able presiding officer than Mrs. Potter Palmer can hardly be imagined. Beautiful and always faultlessly dressed in pretty summer gowns which fit her charming little figure to perfection, Mrs. Palmer stands at the long table in the grand room of the lady managers of the world's fair, wielding her little mallet with judgment and tact. All sorts of unpleasant elements are to be met in the little company. One state thinks itself slighted in the general distribution of jurors of award; another complains that her schemes are not followed; a third asserts that she has been maliciously treated, and a fourth wishes passes for her family to the third and fourth generation. But Mrs. Palmer's mental endowment is fully equal to her physical gifts, and she keenly foresees and averts controversy. She calmly and gently rebuffs, who lately insisted on examining the secretary's minutes, that "no business will be transacted until members are seated," and thus she ingeniously guides her troubled bark away from shoals and quicksands. It is a fine lesson in public body law to spend an hour in studying her methods. The man who sits by, and who is said to have been her teacher in these matters, is rarely consulted now.

From the World's Four Corners.

A little of something from all the world's four corners seems to be gathered into the world's fair corners, and with so many strange people, new buildings, strange customs and curiosities, it would be a wonder if unusual events did not succeed each other with great rapidity. The three quaint carrels, the Santa Maria, the Pinta and Nina, exact reproductions so far as possible of the veritable ships in which Columbus brought his crew to America four hundred years ago, have sailed up to Chicago from Spain, the gift of the government to our own; thousands of singers from the musical societies of the large western cities have gathered in Chicago for a festival week and sung some of the choice works of the masters of music; France has celebrated the taking of the Bastille in the great way, as is its annual custom; Machinery has tower has been struck by lightning, but escaped further injury; the Viking ship and its Danish crew have been welcomed with great firing of guns and waving of banners; and so the busy days go on, each with its special incident or excitement.

"The $10,000 Beauty."

The first Columbian half dollar, for which Myceloff, Seaman & Benedict paid the exposition $10,000, is on exhibition in the Remington booth, section "E," block "2," northeast corner, main balcony, Manufacturers building. A special Columbian guard keeps watch over the coin constantly from nine until five o'clock, and it is locked up in one of the Cary screw door fire and burglar-proof safes, with time-lock attachment. The coin is inclosed in a heavy case of cast brass and plate glass, and with it are displayed the certificate from the mint and other documents testifying to its identity.—Daily Columbian.

A Notable Event.

Odd Fellows' day at the exposition has been officially fixed for September 25. A great programme has been outlined for this triennial celebration of the order. September 25 there will be a splendid parade of all branches of the order including the Sovereign grand lodge of the city, and the uniform rank. The celebration by the brethren will be supplemented by one given by the Daughters of Rebekah, with exercises in Recital hall.

"Wasn't it awful about Helen swallowing her new engagement ring?" "Oh no, it wasn't half so hard to swallow as the story Ezra told her about his wealth."—Inter Ocean.

NOTES OF THE MODES.

Feminine Fashions in the Department of Dress.

It is one of the greatest mistakes of people of moderate means to make their little girls up into young ladies before they are half grown. Childhood and girlhood are too desirable to fritter away in a medley of clothes, fussiness, ceremony and worry about personal appearance. The time spent on such things is much better used if given to study, the improvement of the mind and the care of the body with exercise and amusement to keep them in healthy condition.

There is a time in the life of every girl and boy when they seem to be all white and rosy, and are as sprawling and ungraceful as one could imagine. At this time much may be done by judicious dressing to modify their short-comings, and it is well to bring them through this period of embarrassment as early as possible.

Girls of fifteen when of medium height and figure have the dresses just above the instep. When they are very tall and mature-looking they are worn longer; but when they are small and rather childish, the dresses need not be so long. This is, however, often a matter of taste with those who have charge of their wardrobes.

A very stylish hat for a girl is of chip. The brim is rather wider than that of the average sailor and is rolled up at the back and slightly pinched in at the sides. The trimming is of loops of white ribbon with a few black and black-eyed susans of plain soft bird wings.

A comfortable and appropriate dress for a child is a striped gingham with narrow ruffles at the hem, full sleeves with narrow cuffs, a full waist with a row of buttons down the front, and a jacket with some pointed trimming or with gimp edged with little drops.

A pretty English dress for a girl of fourteen is of cashmere in the color of most becoming. It is made with straight skirt and round waist with white ribbons with a few black and black-eyed susans of plain soft bird wings.

The new colors in duck and pique make very desirable dresses for girls of all ages. The come in tan, blue and white and various shades. White is among the favorites, but is usually reserved for more dressy wear.

The people who are able to buy the best goods, those of them at least who are considered as entitled to the designation of leaders of society, dress their girls in the latest fashion.

There is nothing more becoming to a growing girl, who may be somewhat angular and possibly a trifle awkward in her movements, than the soft blouse and jacket.

Girls of twelve and thirteen years wear chamois, gingham and similar cotton goods, and for traveling or mountain wear, flannel, serge or medium-weight camels-hair.

Skirts of medium-weight wool material with shirred waists of chevot or blouses of sarah or any of the pretty cambrics are much liked. The dresses of young girls are picturesque and fluffy-looking, but it is much better for growing girls to be dressed in the simplest fashion.

Girls wear hair-ribbons matching the leading color in the dress. It is also well to have the ribbon on the hat to match.

Growing girls, quite as much as their grown-up sisters, need have special attention paid to harmony in color.

Quill-feathers, wings and small birds are among the most popular hat and bonnet trimmings.

Blouses of all shades of blue and green in the darker hues are preferred for street wear for girls.—N. Y. Ledger.

World's Fair.

Parties contemplating visiting the World's Fair should take the Washburn Line, making direct connection with the Erie and with the electric street railway, landing passengers at the Sixtieth street entrance of the World's Fair grounds. From the entrance (Administration Building) 15 minutes to one hour in advance of all other boats, and right in the vicinity of all the hotels near the World's Fair grounds. The Columbian Banner train leaves St. Louis Union Depot daily at 9 a. m., arriving at Englewood 7:45 p. m. Chicago. The Columbian Banner limited leaves St. Louis at 8:30 p. m. daily, arriving at Englewood 7:45 p. m. Chicago. Baggage checked to Englewood and delivered by special transfer.
