

Sufficient Unto the Day
The Saturday Evening Post.

Whenever we hear of the culture clubs and thought circles and reading rings that make the winter less tedious for the more highly educated in our small cities and towns, they are busy with some such things as Ibsen's plays, or Maeterlinck's philosophy, or dramatic dialogues, or the obscure parts of Browning, or the attempts of Swinburne or Stephen Phillips to prove that they can't write so well about classic Greek subjects as Homer and Euripides could. All this indicates mental activity and aspiration, too. But are not the activity and the aspiration, perhaps, misguided?

There is a certain satisfaction for a certain sort of person in dabbling in that which does not interest the ordinary run of minds. But when that sort of intellectual snob succeeds in convincing, largely by intellectual browbeating, a large number of intelligent persons in his town that such vanities constitute "culture," ought there not to be a revolt, a declaration of intellectual independence? They may be people who have time for such "culture," but have we time for it? Searching Ibsen for queer psychological states to puzzle one's husband or sweetheart or parents with—is there nothing more useful to think about? The reason the Greeks once knew Homer by heart and packed the theatres to hear Euripides' tragedies was that Homer and Euripides discoursed of things of the most intimate personal concern to the Greeks of those days. Why should not we dispense with crude modern attempts to distract our attention from the things that personally concern us as twentieth century Americans with the responsibilities of our time and environment upon us.

H. A. VanderCruyssen. To the Master Workman and Members of the Ancient Order of United Workmen:—Once more we are called upon to mourn the loss of one of our esteemed brothers, H. A. VanderCruyssen, died Nov. 7, 1903, at Lafayette, La., at Breauz Bridge, La., Nov. 8, 1903, and the occasion of the vacant chair in our meeting hall makes it doubly sad, as it was once occupied by our valiant, genial, warm-hearted brother, H. A. VanderCruyssen, one who was ever zealous and earnest in the noble work of our grand order along the line of our charity and sincere fraternity; therefore, our lodge, feeling a sense of great sorrow and regret over the untimely loss of our friend and brother, adopts the following:

Resolved, that by the death of H. A. VanderCruyssen, we deplore the loss of a faithful brother, that we recognize also the loss to our community of an exemplary citizen of promise, and that we recognize and feel most particularly how great and sad the loss is to his devoted wife and children, who looked upon him with such tender love and pride.

Resolved further, that we extend to the family of the deceased our sincere sympathy in this way of their bereavement, and that a copy of this memorial be furnished them.

Resolved further, that this memorial be spread upon the minutes of this lodge, and that The Lafayette Gazette and Lafayette Advertiser be requested to publish same.

Respectfully submitted,

A. V. LABBE,
S. KAHN,
GUS SCHMULLEN,
