

THIRTY CENTS A DAY.

Young College Graduate's Experience in New York.

The Bowery—much has been written about it, much has been said of its seamy side. What of its good side? Is there any other portion of the city where a man could live on $12 for five weeks and still retain his self-respect? Is there any place other than the Bowery where a man can live free and unmolested by inquisitive friends and neighbors? These questions are answered by a most emphatic "No other place" by a young college graduate, who is now comfortably situated in a law office.

He came to New York from the country, like many other young men, with more ambition than money. His own version of his experience, told in his own language, will best tell the story of an educated man's life on that street made celebrated for its attraction for those who "want to see the town." In telling his experience he said:

"I came to New York fresh from college and with small capital. I believed that with my college education I could succeed. I felt sure that I would obtain a foothold in a short time. Accordingly, I went to a boarding house of the better class. My opportunity did not come as soon as I expected. I moved to a cheaper boarding house. Still there was none to give me the work that I desired. I began to hunt for other work. No work and a capital of only ten dollars made me realize that something had to be done. I did it, and did it at once. I had a fair idea of the gaudy attractions of the Bowery, and, incidentally, of its cheap places of living. I decided that the Bowery was the only place for me in my distress. A place to sleep was the first consideration. After a canvass of a number of the places, I found one which was cleaner than the others. I obtained the right to use one of the boxes at the rate of 15 cents a night. The next question to be settled was the food problem. I decided to limit myself to 30 cents a day for food and lodging, and I never went hungry. For breakfast I spent the sum of five cents. My purchase was either coffee and crullers, coffee and rolls, or a plate of that mystery called hash, without the coffee, but with an ample supply of bread.

"My lunch cost nothing except a few hard words. I made a systematic tour of the saloons that served 'Free Hot Lunch,' and usually got a plate of soup and some bread or crackers. "Dinner was the great meal of the day. For ten cents I had meat, potatoes, coffee and bread and butter; sometimes I invested five cents more and had pie. The next night I ate five-cent hash to even up. "At one time it became necessary for me to replenish my wardrobe. I needed some new linen. This, including shirt, collar and cuffs, cost me 18 cents. A pair of shoes became a necessity, and I visited one of the little underground shoe stores kept by an Italian. I explained my wants, and he handed me a pair of shoes. "How much?" I asked. "Putta on," was the reply. "I put them on, and the Italian made the price $1.50. "Fifty cents," said I. With a most agonizing look the Italian emphatically declared that he could not sell them at that price. "As I was about to take them off he offered a compromise, and the second-hand shoes became mine at a cost of 70 cents. "My total outlay for the five weeks on the Bowery was as follows: Lodging for 35 nights at 14 cents per night $5.25 Meals for 35 days at 15 cents per day 5.25 Shoes and linen 88 Total $11.38 "I had started out with ten dollars and a top coat worth $40 at the latter end of my life on the Bowery. I pawned the coat for two dollars. So after my five weeks' experience I still had 62 cents left as pocket money when I secured my present position. "Of course some can and do live cheaper on the Bowery than I did, but I paid my way and considering the money spent I lived in comparative luxury."

It was only a few years ago that the narrator of the above experience was living on the Bowery. Now he is a lawyer, comfortably located as an assistant in a large law office, and the 30 cents a day he spent while living on the Bowery would now barely supply him with coffee and rolls in the morning.—N. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cures Them—Two Letters from Women.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I write to tell you of the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me. I was sick in bed about five weeks. The right side of my abdomen pained me and was so swollen and sore that I could not walk. The doctor told my husband I would have to undergo an operation. This I refused to do until I had given your medicinal. Before I had taken one bottle the swelling began to disappear. I continued to use your medicine until the swelling was entirely gone. When the doctor came he was very much surprised to see me so much better."—MRS. MARY SMITH, Arlington, Iowa.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I was sick for two years with falling of the womb, and inflammation of the ovaries and bladder. I was bloated very badly. My left limb would swell so I could not step on my foot. I had such bearing down pains I could not straighten up or walk across the room and such shooting pains would go through me that I thought I could not stand it. My mother got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and told me to try it. I took six bottles and now, thanks to your wonderful medicine, I am a well woman."—MRS. ELLEN BRYAN, Otisville, Mich.

MURPHY WAS MUCH PUZZLED.

He Managed to Give Satisfactory Answers to the Questions, However.

One of the New York enumerators called on an old Irishman who had his name, Murphy, chalked upon his door. He was very much perplexed, although he had been in the country long enough to go through several censuses. "The census," he exclaimed suspiciously. "Phwat is it?" I told him that it was a record of the tribe of Murphys in the United States that was being prepared for the government, and that he was greatly flattered, and wanted to tell me his family history as far back as he knew it. His memory, however, was defective, especially as to dates. "The year of me burth," he repeated, scratching his head. "Sure an' I don't know at all, at all." Then, after reflecting awhile he brightened up and said: "Sure, an' it was the year the crops failed in Ireland. 'Was it in '37?" I suggested, at a venture. He looked to be about 60. "Faith an' it was that year," he replied, and I let it go at that. He had forgotten, too, the year of his arrival in America; but I remember that Horace Greeley was running for president at the time," he said.

One on the Summer Girl. One of these girls sat in a hammock on a Hollywood piazza when a summer boy in a gray suit came along. He looked unhappy. The girl looked at him frivolously, and spied a button of a pastel shade in his lapel. "A new kind?" she asked, inquiringly. "What is it? Have you sworn off or are you a son of something or other?" "No," he answered, shortly. "I've joined a Don't Worry club." "When did you join?" she asked. "The day after I met you," he rejoined, cleverly.—Chicago Times-Herald.

According to His Creed. She—Do you believe that every man gets the wife that Heaven intended for him? He—I dare not doubt it; otherwise my religious belief would be shattered. "What is your belief, pray?" "I believe that men are punished in this world for their sins."—Chicago Evening News.

Kind.—The neighbors were very kind to the widow. Some brought sympathy and good advice; others brought material cheer, food, raiment and the like. Still others, and these were the most considerate of all, came and told her how that she had aged ten years in the three weeks since her husband's death. "How good of them!" exclaimed the widow, and wept tears of gratitude.—Detroit Journal.

First Attorney.—"Did you furnish any material for the house?" Witness—"I sold him lime." Second Attorney (objecting)—"That's not material." First Attorney—"It is material." Second Attorney—"Not material." Judge—"I understand lime is a building material." Second Attorney—"Your honor, it's the question that's not material." Judge—"Oh!"—Indianapolis News.

"What is a furlough?" asked a teacher. "It means a horse," was the reply of Mary. "Oh, no," replied the teacher. "It doesn't mean a horse." "Indeed, it does," said Mary. "I have a book at home that says so." "Well," said the teacher, now thoroughly interested, "you may bring the book to school and we'll see about it. The next day Mary brought the book, and in some triumph opened to a page where there was a picture of a soldier riding a horse. Below the picture were the words: "Going home on his furlough."—Pearson's Weekly.

STORY OF MANDY HIGGINS' BABY.

"Have you heard how Mandy Higgins' baby is?" "Oh, she is better, and just as clean and sweet as any baby ever was." "Well, I'm mighty glad to hear it. It's about time the poor little critter had some rest. I tell you what it is, if Mandy had washed his head with CUTICURA SOAP first-off, and put on some CUTICURA Ointment when her baby's head began to get crusted, she'd have saved herself heaps of trouble, and the poor little kid would have been a different being. Think of the days and nights Mandy's walked the floor with that baby. I ain't got no kind of patience with people that has to be told about a thing a hundred times before they begin to believe in the virtue of it. "Now, I told Mandy more'n three weeks ago about CUTICURA SOAP, and she knew just as well as you do, Lis, that we'd use it here going on five years or more, and that none of our family ever had a pimple, or any kind of irritation of the skin since we first begun using it. She was that contrary that I could n't get her to try it on her baby, even though I offered to give her a cake of the soap and some of the ointment from our box. "But now she comes here about every day to thank me. Fact is, the youngster's head is as clean as a whistle, and her skin is just as pretty as you ever see on any baby."

MOTHERS: Mothers, to know last a warm bath with CUTICURA SOAP, and a single anointing with CUTICURA, the great skin cure and purifier of emollients, will afford instant relief, permit rest and sleep to both parent and child, and point to a speedy cure, in the most torturing, disgusting, itching, burning, bleeding, crusted and scaly humors, rashes, and irritations, with loss of hair, and not to use them is to fail in your duty. Think of the years of suffering entailed by such neglect. Cures made in childhood are speedy, permanent, and economical. Sold throughout the world.
