Marguerite Clark in "Seven Sisters" Opera House, Tues. Nov. 16

SUPPOSE THERE WERE FOUR MARRIAGABLE DAUGHTERS IN YOUR FAMILY, AND THE YOUNGEST INSISTED ON SNATCHING AWAY HER ELDER SISTER'S MATRIMONIAL OPPORTUNITIES?

Opera House, Tues. November 16.

That is the situation exactly in "Seven Sisters", the Famous Players Film Company's comedy film adaptation of the famous stage success, originally produced by Daniel Frohman at the Lyceum Theatre in New York, and the film version of which is now starring Marguerite Clark at the opera house on the Paramount Program.

The play tells the story of the widow of an army officer in a small garrison town in Hungary, who has seven daughters, ranging from twenty-two down to seven. According to the Hungarian system of marriage, they must be married in the order of their age, and the younger ones must be kept in the background until the elder ones are disposed of. In this particular family the fourth daughter, Miel, has proved rather unrestrainable to the system, and, due to a girlish prank, is sent to the convent. One evening she leaves the nunnery by means of a rope ladder, and goes to a masked ball, where she meets a fascinating lieutenant of the reserves, Count Feri Horkey, and dances with him frequently. When she comes up the rope ladder she finds all the girls crowded at the window waiting for her, and is promptly expelled. So she goes home, having borrowed money from the lieutenant to do so. Great to the consternation of her mother, however, when she appears in fine clothes and dressed like a lady, none of the older sisters are married and Miel is the best looking one of them all. So she is forced to put on short dresses and instructed to act as though she were fourteen years old. Promptly appears the lieutenant, to whom the surprising situation is explained, and who wagers three kisses with Miel that he will have the three older sisters speedily married. True to his promise, the three sisters, as well as Miel, are promptly wed, but not until after a series of humorous complications that are irresistibly illustrated on the screen.

WILD ONION

Fall Measures for Eradicating This Weed—Deep Plowing is the Most Effective Method.

The wild onion is the worst pest in a large part of the territory in the Atlantic coast region from Massachusetts to Georgia, and as far inland as Missouri. It gives milk a disagreeable odor and flavor, and when the bulbs get in wheat the flour made from it has a pronounced garlicky odor and taste. Moreover, wheat infested with garlic bulbs ranges from 20 to 50 per cent lower in price than No. 2 Red.

To kill wild onion the work must be started in the fall so as to destroy the plants from the soft-shelled bulbs before they produce new bulbs.

The best time for preventive operations is when the new plants are 12 to 15 inches high, or during October and November in the South and November and December in the North. At this stage the land should be plowed fairly deep, turning under all the onion tops. The tops should be completely buried by the plowing, and for this reason a plow with a jointer attached to the beam will often be a great help. Disking the land previous to plowing will also aid in burying the tops.

LATE PLOWING FOR SMALL GRAINS

It has been found that if plowing is delayed until a late date in the fall and the land is planted to small grain, only a few onion plants will ripen their aerial bulbs by harvest time the following summer. As the plowing should be done at such a late date as to prevent the best development of fall-sown grains, it is preferable to plant spring grains. Where the sowing of fall grain is necessary, it should be done with full knowledge that the late planting will probably reduce the yield. Seeding a fall grain crop after late plowing has the least harmful effect on yield in the southern part of the onion belt, where wheat may be planted as late as November or December. Every effort should be made to keep seed free from bulbs. This can be accomplished by thorough drying before cleaning, but the best way is to get seed from an outside source where no onion exists, or to produce seed grain on a separate patch kept absolutely free from the onion.

PASTURES AND LAWNS

If grass lands are quite full of the onion, the easiest way of disposing of them is the cultivation method. In fields where there are only a few plants, the most feasible method is to dig the plants or clumps with a mattock. Four thumbfuls of coal-tar creosote oil put on a plant will kill the ungerminated bulbs. Still, the mattock method is best, as one well-directed stroke when the soil is moist and soft will take out the entire clump by the roots. These should be carried off where they can give no further trouble. It is then a good plan to fill the hole with soil and sprinkle a little grass seed on the surface. Sheep eat the tops of the onion, and grazing for a few years is reported as an efficient remedy for the pest. Sheep

Often I couldn't straighten up. The first few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills relieved the pain in my back, and after I had taken two boxes, my back felt as strong as ever and my kidneys acted properly. When my kidneys are the least bit disordered now, I take Doan's Kidney Pills and soon get relief."

PROTECT YOUR EYES FROM THESE MOVIES

The progress made in the character of subjects presented in the movies today, makes it desirable for all enquiring people to at least attend occasionally. Annoying after-effects on the eyes of many prevent them from enjoying the social diversion and often the educational advantages thus derived. The great majority of those who suffer from eye strain after watching moving pictures can find much, if not complete relief, in perfectly fitted glasses. The picture may not be quite so sharp, but this is more than compensated for by the increased comfort. For those with very sensitive eyes, a colored glass, either amber, yellowish green or amethyst, may be necessary to give complete relief. There have been put on the market recently several varieties of colored glasses, each of which has some advantages, so that some suitable color can usually be secured. A subdued light in the theater is much less irritating than when the only light visible comes from the screen. It is also advisable to avoid sitting in a place where it is necessary to look upward, as the additional strain becomes very tiresome and frequently leaves a headache.
