How To Raise Hogs.

Diek Allen, writing in the Welsh (L.) Crescent, gives the following useful advice in regard to raising pork for home consumption. It would be well for every farmer in this parish to heed and act upon:

Our merchants are constantly shipping pork in here from New Orleans. Why not stop this and in time ship to New Orleans? But if we do not find it profitable to ship let us at least raise enough for home consumption when it can be done so easily. Possibly some one may inquire, "What are you going to feed your porkers on—corn is too expensive to feed." We answer, sweet potatoes. There is no better flavored pork in the market than that fattened on sweet potatoes. Bit as sweet potatoes do not last in good condition but five or six months in the year, we will give our way of raising pork at a moderate cost. Commencing in the spring with good Poland China or Berkshire sows with pigs we feed them on rice bran mixed with water—two pails full of water to one of bran—allowing to stand from six to twelve hours before feeding. This we consider one of the best feeds for sows and growing pigs. The bran can be bought at New Orleans or any rice mill at from $10 to $15 per ton, and a ton fed in that above manner will keep fifteen pigs in good growing condition for three months. When October comes they are in prime order to commence feeding on sweet potatoes, and by the first or middle of January, March and April, pigs can be made to weigh from 150 to 235 live weight. Now when sweet potatoes will yield from 85 to 150 bushels per acre on new unfertilized land, can we not afford to raise our own pork?

District Court.

His honor Judge A. V. Coco was on hand to ascend the bench at the hour appointed for opening court. The term seems to have been of less interest than any for a long time. Judge H. L. Daigre, M. F. Machen and Henry Bernstein were the only visiting attorneys present. In the case of Daigre and Mosely vs. Lee Hunter, judgment of dismissal was rendered. It the case of Mrs. M. C. Collier vs. heirs of Susana Curlee, judgment was rendered for plaintiff.

Several succession matters were disposed of, and the balance of the docket continued. Court adjourned on the afternoon of Tuesday, Jan. 27th.

The Cat.

On Sunday, Nov. 6, 1887, Hon. James G. Maguire, Justice of the Supreme Court of San Francisco, addressed two great meetings at the Academy of Music and Steinway Hall, New York, in behalf of the single tax, and in the course of speech used an illustration that has made the cat the emblem of that movement. Judge Maguire said: "Did you ever see what we call a concealed picture? It is one of these pictures of trees, animals, birds, grass and plants, which at first glance don't appear to amount to much. But, if you look at the bottom of the picture, you may see the words, 'Where is the Cat?' You examine the picture, but don't see any cat. By and by somebody comes along who has seen the picture before, or who has had the cat pointed out to him. He asks, 'Don't you see that twig?' 'Yes.' 'Don't you see that white strip between the twig and the trunk of the tree?' 'Yes.' 'Well that is one leg of the cat.' Still you don't see any cat, and you may be ready to swear that there is no cat there. Then he shows you the little dove-tailed arrangement of grass and weeds down near the bottom, and tells you that is the claws of the cat. Finally he points out another branch that represents the ear. Instantly you behold the cat. If you do not see that picture again in twenty years, the very minute you glance at it the first thing you see is the cat. So it is with a simple natural truth. So it is with the great truths that are involved in the single tax idea. People may look at the proposition, see nothing in it, and have parts and details explained to them, and still see nothing in it. But the very minute they take in the whole situation, they become enthusiasts, and point out the cat to everybody else. After awhile they forget how hard it was for them to see the cat and actually think a man who can't see it in an instant must be a fool because it is so clear to them.

Ever since the speech was delivered when one Single Tax man wishes to indicate that another has come to fully understand all that is involved in the transfer of taxation to land values, he says that such a person "has seen the cat."

When We Were Boys.

An exchange, on the above subject says: "The writer began plowing with a wooden mold-board and harrowing with wooden teeth, cutting grain with a sickle, followed by the cradle, and grass with a hand-scythe; threshing with a flail or animals' feet; winnowing with natural wind currents; lighting fire with flint and steel; shooting noxious animals with flintlock guns, churn with a dasher; riding all distances on horseback or on springless wagons; singing to tunes started with the pitch pipe; eating food cooked over or before the old fire place (no stoves then); dressed in linen and woolen gowns manufactured on the farm; wore hats and caps plaited from the oat or rye field, or made up from home-woven cloth; wrote only with quills from our own geese, with ink made at home with coppers and bark juice; sat in school on the flat side of an elevated, backless slab, always in terror of the constantly carried sceptre of the master's kingly power (a large beech twig or a ferule); read and studied by the light of a tallow-dip—and these are not half we did not have, which boys now possess."
