

LOVE UNEXPRESSED.

The sweetest notes among the human heart strings
Are still with rust;
The sweetest chords, adjusted by the angels,
Are clogged with dust.
We pipe and pipe again for dreary music
Upon the self same strains,
While sounds of crime and fear and desolation,
Come back again in sad refrains.

On through the world we go, an army marching,
With listening ears,
Each longing, sighing for the heavenly music
He never hears.
Each longing, sighing for a word of comfort,
A word of tender praise,
A word of love, to cheer the endless journey
Of earth's hard, busy days.

They love us, and we know it; this suffices
For reason's share,
Why should they pause to give that love expression
Which never fails?
Why should they pause? But still our hearts are aching
With all the gnawing pain
Of hungry love that longs to hear the music,
And longs and longs in vain.

We love them, and we know it; if we falter,
With fingers numb,
Among the unsoft strings of love's expression,
The notes are dumb.
We shrink within ourselves, in voiceless sorrow,
Leaving the words unsaid,
And, side by side with those we love the dearest,
In silence on we tread.

Thus on we tread, and thus cease in silence
To fate's fulfilment,
Waiting and hoping for the heavenly music
Beyond the distant hills.
The only difference of the love in heaven
From the love on earth,
Is: Here we love and know not how to tell it,
And there we all shall know.

—Constance F. Woolson.

GIANT JACK.

It was in the year 1860, while I was staying a few days in a Missouri village, that I first saw Giant Jack. I was seated on the piazza of the only hotel that the place could boast of, when I saw a large, handsome man, accompanied by a very pretty woman, passing down the street. He was over six feet in height, with broad shoulders, a deep, full chest, muscular and well formed limbs, glossy, chestnut hair, and a huge beard of the same color, which hung nearly to his waist. He was about 35 years of age, and his companion appeared to be about twenty years his junior. They were seated in a handsome carriage, drawn by a pair of beautiful, blooded horses; and it was evident that they belonged to a wealthy class of people.

"That ere big feller?" said mine host in reply to my inquiry. "W'y, that's John Norval. Me n' him has allus be'n chums ever since we wuz boys. We went ter California together. It wuz while he wuz thar that he got ther nickname uv Giant Jack—an' ther name jest fits him; John is er giant in size, and his better feller than John never stood in two shoes; an' I, who've known him ever since he wuz knee high ter er grass-hopper, ken swar ter it. He owns ther big grocery store thar erross ther street, an' ther dry goods store jest beyond this hotel; and ther big house yer passed jest before yer entered this village, is his'n."

"Me'n John didn't make our fortune diggin' California gold, ez some did, an' ez soon ez we got thar Giant Jack and Clara wuz married."

"And what became of ther father?" I asked.

"I don't know whatever become uv Horton. We never heard from him since that night we left him erlone in his cabin at ther California minin' camp. Yes, that woman yer see jest now with Giant Jack—ur John Norval, ez he is known erbout here—is his wife; an' he won her, not with er sword, nor exactly by courtship. In plain English, he won her at the old fashioned game uv 'chick, low, jack.'—J. H. Spencer in Chicago Ledger.

A Disgusted Cat.

In some manner a cat found its way into a cyclorama building several days ago. The man in charge attempted to chase the trespassing feline through the door, but the cat evidently thought there was a better way of escaping the rising temper of the irate man. It looked cautiously about, as if to avoid stepping on the prostrate forms of heroes slain in the battle. Finally its eyes caught sight of a tree. A projecting limb hung very low, and here the cat thought to find a place of safety. It gave one leap, and, no doubt, was the most disgusted cat in Portland when it learned by sad experience that the tree was on the canvas. It picked itself up and slowly slunk through the door, down the stairs and out of the building.—Portland Oregonian.

The First Lamp Chimney.

"Petroleum," says a correspondent in Notes and Queries, "was known, and even refined, long before it was used in lamps. A Frenchman is said to have spent years in vain endeavors to construct a lamp in which the new oil would burn without smoking. Accident helped him at last. Vexed by failure, he had drained his wine flask a long necked, thin bottle, like oil flasks—and set it down on the table so hard as to break the glass bottom. He then chanced to catch it up and hold it over the flame of his smoking lamp. The smoke ceased, and he saw that what he sought was found."

Spanking the Hay.

A little boy saw his grandfather threshing oats with a flail. It was a curious sight to him. He went into the house. His grandmother said to him: "Where is your grandfather?" "Johnny replied: 'Oh, he's out in the barn spanking hay.'—Syracuse Herald.
