

HER SUMMER BOARDERS

Goat! Yes; they be. I'm glad enough. I never thought they would. Gled right on 'n' that I'd see the last of 'em for good.

A SPLENDID SENSATION

Story of a Trunk Mystery and What Came of It. The Owner of the Ghostly Box Neatly Nabbed and Compelled to Reveal Its Contents—It Was the Sheriff's Treat.

A number of years ago, when railroads were but few in this country, traveling was a very slow and tedious undertaking; fifteen or twenty miles an hour was considered a rapid and by some people a dangerous speed.

When they arrived at the platform, which was elevated about three feet from the ground by the side of the track, and used for a depot, a wagon drove briskly up, containing the baggage of the company. The men who had charge of the luggage quickly hustled it into the baggage car, while the minstrel boys sprang into the one appropriated to passengers, and took possession of the best seats they could find.

The steam whistle now gave forth a loud and shrilling sound, and with a jerk which temporarily frightened the passengers, the train commenced to move with an ox-like speed over the flat rails of the road.

Finally there appeared to be something of a mysterious nature going on among those who had been listening as one by one they cast a look of glaring wildness upon Horn and his companion, and stealthily left the car.

For once the great jester was taken by surprise. "What's up? What in thunder is the matter with those gillies?" he asked, as with a look of wonder and amazement, he gazed around among the deserted seats.

"I can't say," replied one of his companions. "All I know is I saw a man enter that door with the conductor, point toward us with his cane, then whisper something in the other's ear. The conductor shook his head and disappeared, and very soon after the passengers got up and left the car, casting their eyes over toward our party, and looking very much frightened."

IN FASHION'S CIRCLE

A Few New Notes on What Is Being Worn. Colored undergarments are the mode. However, when white ones are preferred they are trimmed in colors.

Plaid materials are in great favor. The stripes are large and in strong colors cut over diagonally by smaller stripes in negative hues.

Already the day of light dress goods is waning. They preserved none of the elements of permanent popularity. They were not generally becoming, were soon soiled and are now fast becoming passé.

Brocades are more elegant and, if possible, richer than ever. Gigantic flowers are thrown in wide stripes over the satin. Great snow-balls are brocaded on a light gray ground, huge white, yellow or pink chrysanthemums are thrown up on maize, pale green or gray grounds.

EARLY RISING. How to Enjoy Nature in Her Brightest Aspect. Every circumstance contributes to render early rising advisable to those who are in the enjoyment of health.

COAXING THE APPETITE. The Importance of Cheerfulness at the Table. In almost every family there is some member who has always a delicate appetite that requires much coaxing.

BRIDEGROOMS IN TROUBLE. Brought About by Forgetting the Wedding Ring. Forgetful bridegrooms have been reduced to great straits. In one instance a leather ring had, on the spur of the moment, to be cut from a piece of kid of the bride's glove.

Nine Hundred Lace Schools. At Brussels the government supports nine hundred lace schools for making the lace to which the city gives name. Children begin to learn the art when very young, sometimes not over five years.

Dr. Jonathan Hutchinson, the great surgeon, is a stoop-shouldered man of quiet manners, with a full fur-colored chin beard, and has devoted the whole of his three and sixty years to the methods of observation and experiment with the result that he has never read a paper on any subject before any society without opening the eyes of his hearers. He is singularly sensitive, and treats his patients with quite fatherly care.

IN THE ELECTRICAL WORLD

The price of platinum has advanced fully 100 per cent, owing to the increased use for electrical purposes. An incandescent lamp without a filament is the next event in an electrical way which the public may expect to see.

The valuable copper wires used in outside electrical work is a great temptation to thieves, and accounts of arrests for stealing of this kind appear in papers all over the country. Twelve telegraph poles standing in consecutive order, on Cemetery Hill road, near Coatesville, Pa., were struck by lightning during a recent thunderstorm. Some were rent in twain, and others splintered.

Not many years ago the first portable electric-light plant was put into operation for lighting a circus exhibition, and now almost every show of this kind is illuminated from a plant of more or less elaborate character, mounted on a moveable vehicle, forming an entirely independent unit. Similar plants are now in use on many railroads to assist in removing wrecks and clearing up after accidents.

It is the intention of the management to make the World's fair site and the building one grand exemplification of the progress that has been made in electricity. The electrical exhibits will not be confined to a few of the buildings, but on every hand there will be a display of electricity. The grounds, including the waterways; the wooded island, the streets and avenues, and boulevards approaching the World's fair site, will all be lighted by electricity, and in harmony with the general effect which it is desired to produce.

A Genuine Harvest Excursion Will be run from Chicago, Milwaukee and other points on the lines of the Chicago, and St. Paul, Duluth, and Northern Pacific, and the Chicago, North Western, Iowa, South and North Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, Utah, Wyoming and Montana. For further particulars apply to the nearest agent, or address Geo. H. Harford, Gen'l Pass. Ag't, Chicago, Ill.

FASHION'S FROLICHTIES. A LATE freak is the black handkerchief exquisitely embroidered in delicate tints. Upon the instep of the most elegant silk hosiery appear discs and flowers of black lace. Powder blue, golden, russet and blush rose are among the newest shades to be found in the embroidered bengalines.

JEWELLED veils are just at present in high favor. A fine black net, thickly powdered with amethysts, turquoise, silver gilt and here and there with colored stones and pearls. The pretty fancies are used for holding earrings, glasses, fans and other feminine knick-knacks. THE BEGINNING OF RICHES. THOMAS A. EDISON began as a telegraph operator. JAY GOULD was a surveyor and school-teacher in his youth.
