Congressional. In this issue will be found the announcement of Col. Sam. M. Robertson for re-election to Congress.

Col. Robertson has served the Sixth District for twelve years, and if he is returned this time, he will have been in Congress as long as Judge N. C. Blanchard, who holds the distinction of serving his State in Congress for the longest period.

As the Clarion said when commenting on the Colonel's visit here, it is decidedly of the opinion that the best thing St. Landry can do is to send a delegation to the Congressional Nominating Convention unimpeded by instructions (that is if a convention should be ordered, which, to a man up a tree, looks rather doubtful.)

At this moment, when the country seems to be plunging headlong into the dangerous and threatening waters of imperialism and trusts, the choosing of Representatives to Congress is a duty grave and of the utmost importance, and in the fight in this District all frivolities and prejudices, must be cast aside—we, must look higher than that and choose the man who can do more for our degenerating republic.

A Minister's Good Work. "I had a severe attack of bilious colic, got a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, took two doses and was entirely cured," says Rev. A. A. Power, of Emporia, Kan.

"My neighbor across the street was sick for over a week, had two or three bottles of medicine from the doctor. He used them for three or four days without relief, then called in another doctor who treated him for some days and gave him no relief, so discharged him. I went over to see him the next morning. He said his bowels were in a terrible fix, that they had been running off so long that it was almost bloody flux. I asked him if he had tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and he said, 'No.' I went home and brought him my bottle and gave him one dose; told him to take another dose in fifteen or twenty minutes if he did not find relief, but he took no more and was entirely cured. I think it the best medicine I have ever tried." For sale at McBride's Drug Store.

EVERY-DAY PERILS. Careless Mothers Sometimes Responsible for Accidents. We are not altogether unconscious of the perils of every day; we pause amid its hurry and noise, sometimes long enough to wonder that we live, when there are so many ways to die.

Modern invention, while it devises a way to save us time and labor, multiplies at the same time these perils, fills the hospitals with its victims and puts a new weapon in the hands of death.

A workman who safely threads his way through a maze of whirling machinery a thousand times is caught at last in a moment of carelessness; the mill girl's hair or dress touches a buzzing wheel, and we shudder at thought of the result; the business man who has stepped from the morning trolley car more times than he could count is hurled into the gutter unconscious and dying, or may step too late, trip and fall before it some day, to be crushed in an instant.

Even though a reasonable amount of caution be always observed, the conditions of industry would still expose the worker to constant risk. The sailor slips from the rigging, the carpenter and the painter fall from their insecure positions, the trainman jumps too late, a falling mass of coal buries the miner and a quarryman is smashed under descending rock.

Such cases might be recounted by thousands. Few people can look back without recalling some narrow escape from death; danger lurks in whatever path we may choose; yet the fact cannot shape our feeling of security.

If every person by thoughtfully considering his own peculiar dangers would more fully realize the perils that some each day may might be avoided. In the kitchen a careless movement may bring woeful consequences.

Any doctor could give a score of instances—a face disfigured by painful burns, a hand badly cut, a helpless cripple, moaning over the careless step on the stairs, and a strained back and useless body because the heavy weight was lifted once too often.

Careless mothers are many times responsible for accidents that befall helpless children. Most amusements have their accompanying perils, and we can afford to do nothing heedlessly.

The wide-awake individual whose mind instead of wandering into the past or exploring the future is fixed upon the work he attempts to perform is far safer than the careless one who invites accident by inattention and thoughtlessness.—Everywhere.

FROM HIS POINT OF VIEW. John Henry's Little Scheme to Get the Evening Paper.

She was the one who had the newspaper; he was the one who wanted it. "Faced two wives in court," she read from the headlines.

"What's that?" he demanded. "Oh, it's an account of a man who faced two wives in court," she explained. "His own wives?" he asked.

"Of course. He was a bigamist, stupid, and he faced his wives in the courtroom." "Lucky man!"

"She looked at him sharply and was on the point of putting the paper down to argue the question with him, but she caught his covetous glance in time and changed her mind so far as putting down the paper was concerned.

"Do you mean that as a compliment for women or as an insult to her?" she inquired. "My dear, I really have not gone so far as to analyze the remark," was his cautious reply.

"Am I to infer that you consider a man with two wives luckier than a man with one?" "Not for a minute," he answered. Then he added with equal haste: "That would be a practical recognition of polygamy."

"Then you must mean that a man who has deceived two confiding women is lucky when he has an opportunity to cheat over both—"

"Well, I should say not," he interrupted. "What I meant was that, if he had to meet them, it was mighty lucky for him that the meeting took place in court under the eye of the law and the restraining influence of the officers. An ordinarily brave and courageous man will meet one wife without hesitation almost anywhere, but when it comes to meeting two it seems like a special dispensation of Providence that it happened."

"John Henry!" She made motion toward him; he dodged. The paper slipped to the floor; he got it.

"My dear," he said, as he settled back in his chair and glanced over the headlines, "I apologize for anything I may have said that sounded in the least like a reflection upon women."

Still, somehow she was not satisfied. It seemed to her that, perhaps, she had been bamboozled or something—Chicago Post.

Old Virginia Oyster Soup. Wash two quarts of good oysters and wash them through two waters. Strain the liquor and add to it four blades of mace, some celery chopped fine, a teaspoonful of black pepper, a little cayenne pepper and salt if necessary. Let it simmer over the fire five minutes, then add a quarter of a pound of butter rubbed smooth with two tablespoonfuls of flour and three pints of rich cream and new milk, half and half. Let it come to a good boil, stirring all the time, then put in the oysters and let them boil up once; no more, or they will shrivel up and be tough. Remove the oysters, put them in a tureen and pour the soup over them.—Good Housekeeping.

Oatmeal with Apple. Cold oatmeal which has been left over may be made into an appetizing dish by molding in alternate layers with nicely steamed tart apples, sprinkled lightly with sugar. Other cooked fruits, such as cherries, evaporated peaches and apricots, may be used in the same way.—Good Health.
