YOU WANT TO READ "ACADIA REMINISCENCES" The True Story of Evangeline

2nd Edition just off the Press.
The New Orleans Times-Democrat says of the book:

The Times-Democrat has received from the Jacobs News Depot Company of Opelousas, a copy of "Acadia Reminiscences," an attractively bound and delightfully written little volume by Felix Voorhies, a Louisianan, with an introduction by Andrew Throne. As its title indicates, the work deals with the early Acadia settlers in the Teche country. It purports to be the narrative of an Acadian grandmother, who describes as a part of her own experience, the life and customs of the Acadian French in their Nova Scotian homes. She tells of the coming of the English, the refusal of the village folk to "become traitors to their faith and to their King," of their ruthless exile, the destruction of their homes, the separation of families, of the landing of the party to which she had been attached upon the Maryland shores, of the kindness of the Englishmen, Brent and Smith, who gave the exiles shelter, and finally of their toilsome journey through the wilds to join their compatriots in Louisiana. A chapter is devoted to the "True Story of Evangeline,"—Emmeline Labiche, who, separated from her betrothed, finally found him wedded to another. The narrative is touchingly told, the descriptions of Acadian life are charming, and the little volume is a delightful addition to Louisiana literature.

It is durably bound in cloth, and will be sent to any address, postpaid, for only $1.00. Order from

WRONG METHODS OF TEACHING CHILDREN

Rushed too Young to School; Made to Take Up Subjects Which They Can Not Comprehend.

SAYS MEMPHIS EDUCATOR

Blames Parents for Bad Children, and Teachers for Children Who Have an Aversion to School Work.

Denver, July 3.—"Some teaching is so unscientific and consequently so spiritless that it would make almost any child delinquent," said J. C. McNeill, superintendent of schools, at Memphis, in an address before the council of education of the National Educational Association.

Parents and teachers often make delinquents of children by failing to observe the fundamental things and processes incident to growth and development, said the speaker.

"They make children hate books by forcing them to read before an interest in reading is aroused. By rushing them into arithmetic and grammatical analysis before their development warrants it, they are made to dislike the subject. Permanent aversion to school is the legitimate result of putting children to work in studies they are not mature enough to apprehend. The method of presentation, however, often counts as much as maturity."

Studies Are Too Advanced.

The speaker condemned the attempt to put high school branches into grammar grades or intermediate studies into primary grades, and said that educative agencies must look continually to the care of the physical and emotional, as well as the intellectual side of education.

"Society suffers from elements which are unstable, erratic, shiftless and inefficient. These elements corrupt morals, lead to irrational modes of living and swell the hosts of the helpless and criminal who become the real burdens of society. Unless the delinquent classes have the benefits of the kind of education which is adapted to their peculiar needs, they grow up among us and recruit the army of people who never fit anywhere. They fill the poor house, the prisons, the asylums and the slums. They produce and reproduce their kind and bring about a feeling of social unrest, which is growing in this complex age.

"A failure on the part of the home to exercise even and forceful discipline is a moral sin which has but the curse of Cain and the stamp of Satan upon many a promising boy or girl.

"When we realize the baneful working of uneven discipline, growing out of weak-willed, inefficient parental government, we stand in the presence of a great problem. How can we impress fathers and mothers and teachers with the idea that weak and vacillating government of children blasts their lives and makes them candidates for the ranks of the ignoble?"

GAVE FINGER TO ENLIST.

William Bull of Bayne Has Finger Amputated To Pass Examination.

William Bull, son of the justice of the peace and real estate dealer of Bayne, certainly possessed a strong desire to serve in the navy of his country.

Young Bull went to New Orleans with the determination to enlist, but when he presented himself at the recruiting station, he was ascertained that there was an obstacle to his acceptance in the shape of the stiff and useless condition of the middle finger of his left hand, the result of an accident in a bottling works two years ago.

"Could I get in if the was off?" Bull inquired.

"You certainly could," responded the examining physician.

"Well, it will be taken off," declared the young man, who despite remonstrations of those about, hurried to the Charity hospital and had the member amputated at the second joint.

Triumphant, he returned to the recruiting station, was accepted and immediately enlisted.

The officers at the recruiting office say that a boy with that sort of pluck will certainly rise from the ranks.
