HOG RAISING IN THE SOUTH.

Hog raising is one of the most profitable branches of animal husbandry in the South if wisely managed, and one of the most unprofitable if conducted in the ordinary way; that is, if the hogs are raised without care and fed without knowledge or judgment.

Two methods of hog raising are common in the Southern States, both equally objectionable:

(1) When managed by the first method the hogs are allowed free range in woods and swamps, fenced or unfenced, subsist on grass, roots, acorns, and grubs; bred indiscriminately, and the survivors are slaughtered at two and three years of age, weighing not from 50 to 125 pounds. Such animals furnish inferior hams and shoulders, provide scarcely any lard, and do not make a compensating return for the use of the land. The owners are liable to heavy losses from diseases, storms, and other causes, and the product does not meet the requirements of the general market.

(2) The second plan is to keep the hogs in small lots and feed corn mainly. This has been proven unprofitable with corn at the average price in the South. Hogs thus fed show a few good condition, are restless, and are generally found rooting in the fresh earth.

The cost of raising hog when fed on corn alone is generally estimated at cents a pound, live weight, when corn is worth 50 cents a bushel, and 7 cents a pound when corn is worth 70 cents a bushel that is, a bushel of corn will usually make 10 pounds of gain live weight when carefully fed to thrifty hogs. This agrees with the results of experiment stations. But corn is not usually fed with care, and when raised on corn alone hogs are seldom very thrifty; consequently the hogs will average much greater than this. Investigations show that 7 pounds of gain to the bushel of corn is nearly the result when corn is fed in the cob without other food. This would place the cost of live weight at 10 cents a pound with 70-cent corn.

The best way to make hog raising profitable in the South is to raise the hogs upon pastures prepared especially for them, supplementing the green food by the addition of a small grain ration. Upon this plan hogs can be raised at an average cost of 1 1/2 to 3 cents a pound, depending mainly upon the management of the sows and pigs and upon an economic plan of fattening. ### EUNICE'S SCHOOL BUILDING.

Sister City Preparing to Dedicate Magnificent Building on November 14.

An elaborate programme is being arranged for the dedication of the Eunice High School building, which is to take place on November 14.

Gov. Sanders, it is announced, will speak there on that day, and the occasion, if indications carry out, will be "one long to be remembered" to use a hackneyed phrase.

Eunice is justly proud of her school building, and has reason to feel so. It is one of the nicest and most commodious in this section of the country, and a credit to the little western city. It was voted by the people almost unanimously.

Napoleon Lives Again.

Critic's Weekly
Jean Bonaparte, the great-grandson of the emperor, is likened in every respect to porting on the stage those last days of St. Helena. Juan's grandfather, Jean Strelowski, was Napoleon's son, born at Warsaw in 1807. Juan is the family tree well defined and clear, and its most perfect guarantee the marvelous likeness which recalls the young Napoleon on the hero of Arcola and Lodi. He is an actor, professional and he has made his best reputation on the European stage. His vivid portrayal of the personality of his great ancestor. He has carried his zeal for local history to the extent of visiting St. Helena, at spending some time in the little hse and in the room in which Napoleon died. He acts entire without makeup, and students of history flock each night to see a living and practically authentic representation of the "Little Corporal."
