FARMERS HUSTLING FOR NEXT SEASON

Old Fashioned Manner of Farming Disappearing Around Opelousas

The old fashioned manner of farming, when the times were good and this country was nothing but a luxurious garden, is fast disappearing around Opelousas. The farmers here are daily becoming convinced that there is no money in farming, if they have to do like their ancestors did, in years gone by, when they owned hundreds of acres of land and had scores of negro families to till the soil and work but a few months out of the year.

Many progressive farmers in this parish are busy at present preparing for the planting season, which does not come before two or three months yet. But when the time comes to plant their cotton or their corn the lands will be in good shape and their chances for making a good crop will be greater than the chances of the man who is taking life easy these winter months.

Oat patches are seen everywhere, and other winter plants are in abundance in St. Landry. Many men have been converted into progressive and industrious farmers in this grand old parish since last Christmas and it is to be hoped that many more will join these when the next Christmas is at hand. No time is lost, now-a-days, in St. Landry, in preparing the land as it should for the coming planting season, and when every farmer will prepare his cotton, corn, potato, or hay lands this country will produce larger crops than at present.

The St. Landry farmers, who were backward for many years, are daily becoming more and more progressive, and it is only a question of a few years, before this parish will have a lot of the most progressive farmers in the United States. When that time comes this country will be more prosperous than it has ever been.

Notice is hereby given that I will apply to the Mayor and Board of Aldermen of the City of Opelousas for a license to operate a saloon for colored people, for the year of 1914, in the Northern portion of the City of Opelousas on North Market Street, on my property in the North-eastern portion of the block bounded on the North by Westwego Street, South by Lincoln Street, East by Market Street, West by Plaisance Street.

JOS. TRAFANY.
