ARCHBISHOP SHAW WINS HIGH REGARD

BORN IN MOBILE, HE HAS DEVOTED ENTIRE LIFE TO RELIGION

Half a century, plus almost six years, has elapsed since December 2, 1863. Universally, it was not a happy day. Lincoln, in Washington, was bending every atom of his rugged intelligence to the majestic end of preserving the United States of America intact, while the warring states of the North and South fought desperately to destroy the said Union.

The Southland lay stricken and broken beneath the struggle, which had not yet turned towards its final conclusion—and there was sorrow and mourning in numerous Northern homes, desolated by loss of their sons, fathers and brothers, dead and dying on the battlefields of the war-mad nation.

Christmas, the great festival of the Christian religion, whose Leader's gift was peace to all men, was but thirteen days proximo.

Archbishop Shaw's Birth

In these circumstances of the immediate world of America, despite the sorrow and conflict great joy came into the Southern home. In Mobile, Alabama, on December 12, 1863, a son was born to Patrick Shaw and his young wife, who had been Elizabeth Smith.

They christened him John William Shaw, and for the nonce, among this little home circle, the cooling of a baby drowned the roar of cannon; and love, the eternal builder, worked steadily to bring forth her great sons despite man's attempt to destroy them.

Perhaps world conditions existing at the time of his birth were significant of the future of the infant, for today, amid a world once more mad with war and strife, the little boy of 1863, to manhood grown, stands pre-eminently as the most Rev. John William Shaw, D. D., Archbishop of the See of New Orleans, one of the largest and the second oldest See of the Catholic religion in America.

His Early Education

His Eminence, Most Rev. John William Shaw, D. D., Archbishop of New Orleans, began the acquirement of preliminary education at the Academy of the Brothers of the Sacred Heart in his native city of Mobile, Alabama. Later, he became a student of St. Finan's Seminary in Haven, Ireland, where he completed the classics.

In Rome, for six years, at the North American College, His Eminence delved through the philosophical and religious courses. Amid those noble surroundings, there crystallized within the mind of the young student his determination to devote his life to the service of saving men's souls.

He was ordained a priest on May 26, 1888. For eighteen years he acted as rector of the Cathedral of Mobile, Alabama, where on February 7, 1910, he was appointed Bishop Co-adjutor to the Rt. Rev. Bishop Forrest.

On March 11, 1910, he was consecrated Bishop of Mobile, Alabama, the ceremonies occurring in the very same cathedral which had witnessed his unremitting service as rector for practically a score of years.

Beloved by Parishoners

During his incumbency as rector of the Mobile cathedral, he endeared himself to thousands of individuals. He sorrowed with his people, and he joyed with them.

He struggled with them through their weaknesses, always leading them to the Fountain of Strength, using the gentleness of a brother rather than the mastery of a religious director.

As chancellor and secretary to the Rt. Rev. E. P. Allen, Bishop of Mobile, he continued and widened his work among the people for their spiritual elevation.

The scene of his labors was transferred to Texas, where as Bishop of San Antonio for many years he directed the way spiritually for a large multitude, at the same time contributing in no small degree to the general economic upbuilding of that section.

Archbishop's Death

And then came the summons, which long years of persistent study and unselfish devotion to the discharge of the duty at hand had prepared him to answer with such splendid response.

The death of Archbishop Blenk in New Orleans, on April 10, 1917, was not-Catholics only secondarily to the loss sustained by the Catholic themselves.

Archbishop Blenk was one of the most powerful forces in public life in the southeastern section of the United States, with an influence that radiated throughout the entire country. It was generally conceded that the era and his local section, as well as the country at large, had lost one of its most devoted servants, and much interest was aroused as to who would be chosen for successor to a man with so wide a following embracing as it did, men of all religious opinions.

Some anxiety also was experienced for to assume the heavy duties and great responsibilities attendant upon the office of Archbishop of the See of New Orleans requires a man not only highly qualified with the most spiritual religious training, but likewise a scholar and a man generally in touch with public affairs of the section.

Appointed to High Post

The appointment of the Most Rev. William Shaw, D. D., to this weighty office immediately called forth eulogiums from all classes and sects. His Eminence was native to the section he would serve in so highly a capacity.

No Worms in a Healthy Child

All children troubled with worms have an unhealthy complexion, which indicates poor blood, and as a rule, there is more or less stomach disturbance. GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC given regularly for two or three weeks will enrich the blood, improve the system, and act as a General Strengthening Tonic, the whole system. Nature will then throw off or expel the worms, and the Child will be in perfect health. Pleasant to take. 60c per bottle.

In addition his personal record for service had established a complete confidence in him among sectarian and non-sectarian, Catholic, Protestant and others, all of whom united in expressions of great satisfaction and approval of the wisdom of the choice of a successor for the late deeply lamented and highly esteemed Archbishop Blenk.

The investiture of His Eminence with the Sacred Pallium occurred in New Orleans during the Season of Advent, 1918. It added another glorious even to a long history of notable occurrences in a city whose archives are plentifully colored with accounts of religious and secular pageantry, and ranks among the most imposing of the various majestic ceremonies enacted within the precincts of the ancient and historic St. Louis Cathedral, where the solemn dedication was splendidly completed.

It required the special visit of the direct representative of Pope Benedict XV, who arrived in New Orleans on December 7, 1918, fully authorized and prepared to confer this most august honor on the then Bishop of San Antonio.

His Wide Jurisdiction

On December 8, 1918, in the Cathedral of St. Louis, New Orleans, the former Bishop of San Antonio, amid one of the stateliest throngs ever gathered together in this section, was invested with the office of Archbishop of New Orleans, and His Eminence the most Rev. John William Shaw, D. D., assumed the spiritual reins of government over an area reaching from Mississippi and part of Florida on the east to the western border of Texas and Oklahoma and Arkansas on the north.

A better conception of the responsibilities of the office will be gained when it is remembered that in New Orleans alone there is a Catholic population aggregating some 250,000 persons; there are 142 priests in New Orleans, 893 sisters, 40 churches, 42 schools, 45 colleges, academies and other institutions under the direction of Catholic officials, and all this vast array of individuals and activities are directly under the guidance of the Archbishop of New Orleans.

Then, consider the enormous area comprised in the See of New Orleans, every part of which is filled with a prosperous population, numerous institutions and various activities of wide scope, each sub-division looking to the most Rev. John William Shaw, D. D., Archbishop of New Orleans, for direction and approval, and it easily becomes apparent that to successfully meet such responsibilities requires a man able, of comprehensive judgment, wide discrimination and generally equipped personally and by attainment with the highest attributes with which to cope with the various demands made upon his intelligence, zeal and vigor.

Win People's Confidence

These weighty duties seemed to devolve naturally upon His Eminence, the Most Rev. John William Shaw, D. D., who in his one year's service in the high office he occupies had already won the confidence of the entire community and the world generally.

Among Catholics he is regarded with especial approbation and veneration, and the public life of the southeast is enhanced and greatly enlivened by the existence of such a man in its midst.

Great expectations attend the progress of the career of His Eminence Most Rev. John William Shaw, D. D., Archbishop of New Orleans, who will undoubtedly increase and expand in splendid achievement the highly successful initial efforts which bring before the public permanently a man of such remarkable capabilities and personality.

Urge Value of Beechnut

A writer in the Chicago Daily News makes a plea for the beechnut. A high-grade quality of this nut might easily be made a delicious article of food. The beech tree, well grown, is an object of great beauty. In Europe extensive avenues of them are found, and the fruit carefully conserved. Many a township could easily handle along its roadsides 10,000 noble beeches and as many hickories, not to speak of a large sprinkling of other nut trees and shrubs, all of them largely taking care of themselves. Each town or county could have its own nursery for fostering a high grade of nut trees and shrubs.

Have to Piece Out the Truth

You can draw your own conclusion from the fact that there isn't enough truth in existence to keep tongues of gossip constantly wagging.

SKETCH OF LIFE OF MARTIN BEHRMAN, OF NEW ORLEANS

Improvement. Recently sales of surplus foods from the army supply base here were instituted by Mayor Behrman, saving the people many thousands of dollars.

Serious Situations

New Orleans was visited during Mayor Behrman's first term of office by its ancient enemy, the yellow fever. A serious situation ensued, but concurrently with the federal government, the situation was handled with such skill and judgment that the disease soon was stamped out and never has returned, and what is still more gratifying, never will return.

About four years ago there was a visitation of the dreaded bubonic plague. The city authorities received the most expert and skillful aid from the United States Health Service and Mayor Behrman saw that every requirement, regulation and order emanating from the federal authorities in connection with the fight against this disease was carried out promptly and to the letter, with the result that New Orleans is not only plague-proof today but rat-proof as well.

In September, 1915, a hurricane, declared to have been the most violent that ever visited the Western Hemisphere, swept over New Orleans, doing great damage to property and causing considerable expense to citizens and the municipal government. The authorities were obliged to make immediate provision for restoration of normal conditions to insure the safe and uninterrupted traffic over the public streets, for prompt restoration of public buildings and works and for the relief of numerous communities nearby where the homes and food supplies had been swept away by the terrific wind or the floods.

Under direction of Mayor Behrman the repair work was promptly instituted and carried out and relief quickly extended to the storm sufferers so that the disaster was averted from developing into a greater calamity. Day and night Mayor Behrman labored in this service and he was the leader in all the details of the restoration and rescue work.

During the war the reputation and popularity of Mayor Behrman was greatly enhanced because of the active part he took in helping New Orleans and Louisiana to do their share in winning the great conflict. Intensely patriotic and thoroughly aroused with the desire to see victory perched upon American arms, Martin Behrman devoted himself to every feature of war work that was presented.

He purchased Liberty Bonds and War Savings Stamps to the limit of his means and worked enthusiastically to induce others to purchase them. In all the war relief drives he was an active participant and in every movement looking toward increasing the effectiveness and comfort of our fighting forces, Mr. Behrman rendered conspicuous service.

campaigns, helped to provide extras for and to encourage and maintain the morale of our soldiers, at home and abroad, gave especial attention to the wants of the men in the camps near this city and was the moving spirit in the arrangements made in conjunction with the soldiers' and sailors' reception and entertainment upon their return home.

Mayor Behrman was married in 1887 to Miss Julia Collins, of Cincinnati, who has been one of the most potent factors in shaping the career of her brilliant husband. They have two children—a son, Stanley W. Behrman, who was an officer in the United States army during the war, and a daughter, Mrs. Nat W. Bond.

It is probable that Mayor Behrman is a member of more clubs, fraternal and benefit societies than any other one person in the city of New Orleans. He holds membership in the Elks, Knights of Columbus, New Orleans Press Club, New Orleans Association of Commerce, Young Men's Gymnastic Club, Alhambra Club, Chess, Checkers and Whist Club, Young Men's Christian Association, Young Men's Benevolent Association, Loyal Order of Moose, Druids, Maccoches, Southern Yacht Club, French Opera Club, Choctaw Club, Travelers' Protective Association, Woodmen of the World, Rex Carnival Organization, Rotary Club, the Jovians, Benevolent Knights of America, Firemen's Charitable Association. He is the president of the League of American Municipalities. He is also a member of the League of Louisiana Municipalities.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and for years it was supposed to be incurable. Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Medicine, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is a constitutional remedy, is taken internally and acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system. One Hundred Dollars reward is offered for any case that Hall's Catarrh Medicine fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.
