MYSTERIOUS RUN MADE BY AN ENGINE

Alexandria.—The spectacle of a locomotive going through the city at a forty-five or fifty mile clip, with only one man in charge, was presented to the railroad men in the local yards at about 4 o'clock Monday. The engine came in from below over the Missouri-Pacific track and took the Texas & Pacific track, going west.

Advices were received here last night from Oakdale to the effect that an engine had gotten away from that place and was "running wild" in the direction of this city, and orders were sent out to have the track cleared so that a collision could be averted. It was stated, however, that it was hoped that the steam would become exhausted and the engine would stop by the time it reached this city, at least. Oakdale is about fifty miles from here.

At the hour above mentioned the locomotive "hove" in sight, going at the rate above mentioned, with only one man performing the services of both engineer and fireman. He evidently was a railroad man, as it is stated that he gave all the signals which were necessary when he passed through for him and he got by without an accident.

A party of local railroad men was soon organized and went in pursuit of the engine, and they overtook it a short distance, this side of Rapides station, where the man had abandoned it and disappeared in the woods.

The identity of the man, or why he should have taken the engine, is a mystery which has not yet been solved. He is described as being a large man and wearing a gray sweater. It has been suggested that probably the man was insane, or possibly that he had committed some crime and was endeavoring to escape, but of course these are merely surmises, neither of which may be the case. However, the escapade has created considerable comment and subsequent developments are awaited with interest.

A Rank Mistake
"Mrs. Beggs offended her husband's war chums when she welcomed them to a dinner."
"How so?"
"She told them it was a strictly private affair, and they're all officers."

Precedent
"Of course," observed the man with a ponderous intellect, "we must show the deepest respect for precedent."
"Of course," assented the man with a fountain pen. "But that's no excuse for going ahead writing '1919.'"

A Martyr

DON'TS FOR THE POULTRY GROWER

Don't allow your hens to eat decayed flesh of any kind unless you want them to get the limberneck. Many fowls die from this trouble.

Don't allow filth and dampness in and around poultry roosting house; these will cause roup and its attending ills.

Don't let the mites and lice get the upperhand about your place. They will cause untold trouble and loss of both young and old stock.

Don't be afraid to give your fowls an abundance of green stuff at all seasons. It is their salvation, whether they are old or young.

Don't be afraid to invest a few dollars in good stock any more than you would in improved seeds and grain.

Don't keep any males with the females unless you are hatching the eggs. Infertile eggs will keep much longer than fertile ones.

Don't put all sizes, shaped and colors of eggs in one lot for market; learn to grade them so they will look as much like one hen laid them as possible.

Don't allow a dirty stale egg to go into your market basket no matter how high eggs are or how much you need the money.

Don't be afraid to work with your poultry the year around. It is the only road to success. No matter what other duties are, the poultry should not be neglected.

Don't expect every egg to hatch when you buy eggs from dealer. Your own eggs will not do that well as a rule.

Don't raise mongrel and scrub fowls. Possibly there is money in growing this kind of stuff, but there is a great deal more money to be made growing standardbred fowls.

Don't attempt to raise more than one kind of good standardbred chicken if you expect to reap the most benefit from them. Learn to specialize.—H. L. Williams, poultry specialist, Extension Division, Louisiana State University.

Banishes Robber With Spoon
Great Falls, Mont.—With the aid of a silver spoon which he secured while dropping quickly behind the bar of a soft-drink saloon, George Edmonds, the bartender, saved his employers from being robbed by a man who entered the place from the rear and covered Edmonds with a gun. The silver spoon so resembled a revolver projected from the rear of the bar that the highwayman turned and fled.

Among Planets
"Do you think we shall be able to talk with Mars?"
"If we are" replied the busy reporter. "Mars will be getting the best of the conversation. I'm willing to make a bet right now this little earth of ours is developing the biggest news of the solar system."

GIRL WILL WED

HELPLESS HERO

BLIND, DEAF AND ARMLESS AS RESULT OF INJURIES RECEIVED IN WAR

Paris.—Blind, deaf and with both arms amputated as the result of injuries received in action during the war, the young French veteran, Emile Tilloloy, considered the most unfortunate being in all history, has found a refuge from his tribulations in the love of a little peasant girl, Jeanne Delavoine, his boyhood sweetheart.

Their engagement has been announced and the marriage is to take place early in the spring.

The announcement has set at rest the minds of leading French moralists and philosophers who had been debating if the ending of Tilloloy's trials by euthanasia would not be justified.

Debate Painless Death

Had society any right to demand for the sake of a moral precedent, the continued Calvary of this modern Job? Would it be an humane and enlightened act to put and end to his horrible sentence by quick and painless death?

These were the disturbing questions asked by French metaphysicians.

On July 24, 1916, Tilloloy was wounded in both arms and the face by a bursting shell. The detonation broke both ear drums.

Expert surgery and tender care saved his life, but he left the military hospital a year later deprived of the three senses of sight, touch and hearing, able only to taste and smell.

Taps Only Language

He was taken to his own home, in the little hamlet of Canaples, Department of the Somme, and placed under care of his mother and two sisters.

A primitive system of taps on his body for "yes" and "no" constituted his only means of receiving messages.

Upon Tilloloy's return to his home Jeanne became a daily visitor, taking her turn at sitting beside him and tending his needs. She identified herself by three short taps.

He concealed all affection, fearing that out of sympathy she would sacrifice herself to bring him a ray of happiness, and for three years she continued her tender ministrations.

Finally Tilloloy said to his mother: "Jeanne must care for me, or she could not be so faithful. Do you believe she loves me?"

The answering tap was in the affirmative. Then his sweetheart's next visit Tilloloy put the question: "Jeanne will you marry me?"

A resolute tap and the folding of a pair of arms about the blind man's mutilated body turned his fears of a lifetime of solitary suffering into dreams of quiet content.

MILLER AND THE MILLENIUM

The Rev. William Miller—the "Prophet of Low Hampton," as he was called and who founded the sect called the "Millerites," and also known as the "Second Adventists," stirred the country to such a pitch of religious excitement in 1843 as it had never before been stirred.

Miller was a resident of Low Hampton, New York, and was highly esteemed by every one as a benevolent and intelligent man. For many years he had been a most assiduous student of history and the Scriptures. In the study of the latter he became impressed with the conviction that the fifth monarchy predicted by Daniel was about to be consummated.

Miller gave as his views that Jesus Christ would appear a second time in 1843 in the clouds of heaven. It became known that he entertained these views, and he importuned by many to write out his opinions and afterward to go before the public with them. This for a long time, he refused to do, but eventually began a series of articles in the Vermont "Telegraph," and later he set forth his views in a pamphlet and subsequently, in obedience to conscientious convictions of duty he commenced as a public lecturer on prophecy.

Miller soon drew about him a considerable following which included many men generally considered intellectual, which still further added strength to his doctrines. Many churches of the Second Adventists were formed, and they held their first general conference in October of 1840 in Boston.

It was not long before the number of believers reached scores of thousands, all of whom expected that the second advent would take place in 1843, but what particular time of that year was uncertain. The first date set was February 15, but when that day passed and nothing unusual transpired, a later date was announced, and so on during the entire year.

It is noted that in some sections of the New England States the farmers refused to reap their harvests of corn and potatoes, saying it was tempting providence to store up grain for a season that could never arrive.

That irregularities of one kind and another attended a religious movement of this character is not to be wondered at, but it is doubtless true that many of the incidents that were circulated were invented by the opponents of the Millerites.

The most notable incidents was that which occurred in Philadelphia. There a company of about hundred and fifty persons responded to the vision of one Gorgas, and on October 21st, 1843 went out of then Darby Road and encamped in a field under two large tents to await the coming of Christ. The following morning their faith in the "vision" having failed, all but about a dozen returned to the city, and a few days later they all picked up their tents and silently stole back home.

In other sections of the country the faithful made every preparation for what they supposed to be the approaching millennium. They refused to lay in stock of any kind, either for personal use or for the household, feeling that anything in that direction would be useless.

Even after the year 1843 had passed and there was no evidence of a Second Advent, the faithful explained the discrepancy of dates to the fact that chronologists differ three or four years in the dates of this world's history.

In reviewing the circumstances, Mr. Miller wrote: "Were I to live my life over again; with the same evidence I then had, to be honest with God and man, I should have to do as I have done. I confess my error, and acknowledge my disappointment, yet I still believe that the day of the Lord is near, even at the door." Miller died in the year 1849.

CURED SWEET POTATOES GIVE ONE PER CENT LOSS

E. E. Miller, Webster parish, who erected a sweet-potato curing plant according to plans furnished by the Extension Division, brought in a fine sample of potatoes that he cured the past season, writes W. M. McBride, parish agent. Mr. Miller said that he lost possibly one per cent of his potatoes. The potatoes on exhibition are of fine quality.

Self-Sacrifice

Parent—Of course, as my daughter is of age she can suit herself as to marrying you, but the day she does I shall cut her off without a cent.

Suitor—In that case, it's all off. I could not think of depriving a young lady of her inheritance.—Boston Transcript.

Cannot Praise this Remedy too Highly

THE WAY ONE LADY FEELS AFTER SUFFERING TWO YEARS

Judging from her letter, the misery and wretchedness endured by Mrs. Charlie Taylor, R. F. D. No. 1, Box 144, Dillon, S. C., must have been terrible. No one, after reading her letter, can continue to doubt the great healing power of PE-RU-NA for troubles due to catarrh or catarrhal conditions in any part of the body. Her letter is an inspiration to every sick and suffering man or woman anywhere. Here it is: "I suffered two years with catarrh of the head, stomach and bowels. Tried two of the best doctors, who gave me up. I then took PE-RU-NA and can truthfully say I am well. When I began to use PE-RU-NA, I weighed one hundred pounds. My weight now is one hundred and fifty. I cannot praise PE-RU-NA too highly, for it was a Godsend to me. I got relief from the first half bottle and twelve bottles cured me. I advise all sufferers to take PE-RU-NA."

As an emergency remedy in the home, there is nothing quite the equal of this reliable, time-tried medicine, PE-RU-NA. Thousands place their sole dependence on it for coughs, colds, stomach and bowel trouble, constipation, rheumatism, pains in the back, side and loins and to prevent the grip and Spanish Flu. To keep the blood pure and maintain bodily strength and robustness, take PE-RU-NA. You can buy PE-RU-NA anywhere in either tablet or liquid form.

Live Stock Sanitation
The proper fitting of a collar for draft purposes is one of the most important points to be observed in gearing, and, when carefully adjusted, is the saving of a great deal of distress and injury to the animal, and, in consequence, a saving in the performance of its work. A collar to fit well, and allow the most perfect freedom to the animal, should have an even bearing on the shoulders; deep enough below to avoid pressure on the windpipe and the bloodvessels of the neck; without pinching from side to side; and the hames should not be attached too near the point of the shoulder.—Dr. W. H. Dairymple.

His Position
"What is your position on this great question?"
"My position," replied Senator Sarghram, "is somewhat like that of a tight-rope walker. I don't want to stop to argue or show off. What I want to do is to get across to solid ground."
