The Big Wallop

The leading merchants of the country are pursuing a policy that'll give H. C. L. a wallop he'll always remember. And they're doing it in a simple way; taking less than a fair profit; doing a real service to the community.

We're glad to get into the "band-wagon;" we've always marked our clothes as closely as possible, but we're going further. We've often stressed the point that profit is not the sole purpose of our business. We want the people of Opelousas and St. Landry to say in a few months "WINSBERG'S DID EVERYTHING THEY COULD TO LOWER THE COST OF LIVING."

Napoleon's a Lover of Books

Napoleon had always been a great reader although he declared that in his public life he only read what was of direct use for his purposes, says Lord Roseberry in his "Napoleon, the Last Phase." The frequency of Napoleon's demands for books when he was a scholar at Brienne was the torment of the college librarian. "When I was a lieutenant of artillery," Napoleon said before the collected princes at Erfurt, "I was for three years in garrison at Valence. I spent that time in reading and re-reading the library there."

DARK HORSE BEST BET AT CHICAGO

WILSON AND M'ADOO ARE MENTIONED BY DEMOCRATS, BUT NEITHER WILL WIN

New York.—One week from Tuesday the Republican National Convention will convene at Chicago to nominate candidates for president and vice president and to enunciate the platform upon which that party expects to win the control of the government of the United States on Nov. 8 next.

The 984 delegates to the Chicago function should have completed their task more than two weeks before the 1,004 delegates to the Democratic convention at San Francisco meet to perform a similar duty. Up to date, 824 delegates have been elected to the Republican convention. To the San Francisco convention 709 delegates have been selected.

The one outstanding feature of the present situation that applies to both parties is that no man to whom delegates in either convention have been pledged is assured of enough to give him even a first class mortgage on the prize. The claims advanced by the various aspirants for the two nominations regarding the number of delegates or either tentatively pledged to them is of small value.

Uninstructed to Control
There are a greater number of unpledged and therefore independent delegates to both conventions that can be claimed by any of the candidates for either nomination. In other words, the contests for the prizes to be awarded at Chicago and San Francisco are "open" events in the fullest sense of the word.

The uninstructed delegates will control the results in both. This condition of affairs in the Republican convention is due to a skillfully devised plan adopted by the important leaders in most of the states and one which has been intelligently carried out. The distribution of delegates voted for to some of the candidates for the Republican nomination has, to a very large extent, been governed by the decisions of these leaders who having no candidate of their own long ago plotted to control the award of it.

The supremacy of the uninstructed delegates already elected to the San Francisco convention has been largely the result of the uncertainties regarding the personal plans of President Wilson. Democratic leaders have refrained from committing themselves to the support of any candidate pending the final decision of Mr. Wilson regarding a third term.

Wilson Cannot Stand It
While some of the Democratic leaders believe Wilson may yet emerge as the nominee, the overwhelming majority of them are convinced that his physical condition and personal inclinations will not permit his participation in the turbulent and personal campaign that is expected. Democratic leaders have adhered to the policy of sending delegations unpledged to any candidate.

There have been elected to the Republican convention 366 delegates free from instruction as to candidates while 458 delegates pledges have been distributed between Gen. Leonard Wood, who has 265; Senator Hiram Johnson of California, 98; Gov. Lowden of Illinois, 85; Senator Harding of Ohio, 39; Senator Poindexter of Washington, 14; and Judge Pritchard of North Carolina, 17.

The managers of Gen. Wood, Gov. Lowden and Senator Johnson make claim to some of the uninstructed delegates and the support of pledged delegates on the "second choice" basis, but with apparent little justification. Of the 709 delegates selected to the San Francisco convention 440 are uninstructed, while 269 delegates pledges are distributed between Gov. Cox of Ohio with 74; William G. McAdoo, 50; Herbert Hoover (Republican) 33; Gov. Edwards of New Jersey and attorney General Palmer, 28 each; Senator Owen of Oklahoma, 20; Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, 16; William Jennings Bryan and James W. Gerard 10 each.

Fewer Contests
The number of contests at the Chicago convention will be much smaller than expected. This is due to the determination of the leaders of all factions to prevent a repetition of the scandals that resulted from the successful effort of the leaders opposed to Col. Roosevelt in 1912, to prevent him from winning the nomination that year from William Howard Taft.

The missionary work performed in the South by the supporters of Gen. Wood, Gov. Lowden and some of the other candidates will, therefore, come largely to naught. The important, leaders not committed to any one candidate, have united to compel compromises in the Southern states which are solely affected by the contests, in order that every aspirant to the presidency shall come into the convention with "clean hands" free from the taint of barter and sale.

Regarding candidates, Republican leaders and delegates are wide apart in their estimates of the respective strength of those aspiring to the nomination. Gen. Wood is conceded to have the largest number of votes actually pledged, and that will be cast for him on the first ballot.

That what extent these efforts of the big leaders will succeed in reducing the number of contests remains to be seen. There will be some of course, but the number will be far below the sixty-eight that were indicated a few weeks ago. Rather proof of this is provided by the postponement of the consideration of contests by the Republican National Committee.

The hearing was first set for May 23. It was later advanced to June 1. This is taken to indicate that the contests will be few in number. Up to date there have been very few notices of contest received by the Democratic National Committee, probably not more than a half a dozen and none affecting the present prospects of aspirants to the nomination.

As to platforms, the Republican leaders appear to assume that there will be no difficulty in constructing one that will reflect the attitude of the party on the protective tariff, economy in government, "a more vigorous foreign policy," whatever that may mean, mixed up with some of the social justice doctrines advocated by the late Col. Roosevelt.

The Republican leaders will discourage any attempt to inject the prohibition issue into this convention. Delegates from some of the most industrial states with large cities will, of course make a show of fighting for the repeal of the 18 Amendment and a modification of the Volstead Enforcement Law. But such an undertaking is apparently destined to fail. There is no question that the most generally favored policy of the party is to either ignore prohibition as an issue or affirm the existing measure if the pressure from the woman delegates and the dry states becomes too strong to resist.

The Prohibition Nightmare
The Democratic Convention will experience more difficulty in disposing of the prohibition nightmare. That subject appears to engage the attention of delegates and leaders who will exclusion of the relative chances of fight it out at San Francisco to the candidates. It is quite certain that the fight will be a most exciting one and of uncertain results.

A pretty complete canvass of the delegate attitude conducted by some of the leaders of the party and revealed to the writer indicates that the division of sentiment on the liquor question will be very much closer than is generally expected with the chances favoring a declaration in favor of the modification of the Volstead act at least, despite the menacing consequences of a bolt of the dry forces under the leadership of William Jennings Bryan, New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Illinois, Ohio and to a very great extent Pennsylvania will lead the fight for a declaration in favor of a more liberal conditions.

Regarding candidates, Republican leaders and delegates are wide apart strength of those aspiring to the nomination in their estimates of the respective nation. Gen. Wood is conceded to have the largest number of votes actually pledged and that will be cast for him on the first ballot.

Senator Johnson while next in number of votes, is regarded as a positive menace by the reactionary element which does not approve of his policies in general and particularly his complete opposition to the League of Nations. It is admitted by some of the Old Guard leaders, who do not admire Mr. Johnson that he "will grow when Wood begins to shrink."

Hoover the Uncertainty
Another of the many elements of uncertainty is Mr. Hoover, who, despite the recent slump of his presidential boom, still continues to hold much of the support with which he started out before he turned his back on the Democratic party. The women voters of the country, who will have a substantial representation at Chicago, have in no degree altered their estimates of Mr. Hoover's presidential qualities. Most of the women and a good many of the men delegates will favor his nomination.

There are some delegates among the eighty-eight from New York who place a very high estimate on the vote-getting abilities of Mr. Hoover, leaving aside entirely the matter of fitness and political availability. There is very good reason to justify the statement that if the tide begins to turn toward Mr. Hoover at Chicago he will have more than a score of New York delegates in line, although on the first ballot it is quite certain that President Nicholas Murry of Columbia College will secure the larger number of votes from the state, a few being scattered among Gov. Lowden, Charles E. Hughes, Gov. Coolidge of Massachusetts and Gov. Sprout of Pennsylvania.

Dark Horse Best Bet
For some reason or another best known to themselves, the majority of Republican leaders throughout the country do not believe that either Gen. Wood or Senator Johnson will be nominated. They cling to the impressions that both will be eliminated and a "dark horse" run away with the prize. The identity of this sombre steed is a matter of acute and entertaining speculation among Republicans of all kinds.

The guessing is running, from Gov. Lowden, Gov. Sprout, and Gov. Allen (of Kansas) in order named to a host of rank "outsiders" upon whom popular professional fancy does not deign to cast even a patronizing glance at present. One guess as to the identity of the Republican presidential nominee is good and another is anyone cares to guess.

Regarding the Democratic nomination there is even less ground upon which to base speculation than on the Republican side, for in the Democratic family there are many issues and conditions that do not exist in the Republican situation. The professional Democratic leaders seem to think that at the last minute President Wilson will throw the balance of his power to Mr. McAdoo, his son-in-law, and that the radical labor and dry vote will do the rest.

There are no indications, however, that President Wilson will do anything of the kind and if Mr. McAdoo wins it will be because the uninfluenced delegates will favor his selection. To win he will have to roll up two-thirds of the delegates in the convention—a task his distinguished father-in-law had trouble in doing in Baltimore eight years ago.

The consensus is that Mr. McAdoo cannot be nominated, Governor Cox seems to be more generally favored than Mr. McAdoo yet he will have to negotiate some rather embarrassing hurdles that the Bryan faction will
