A FEW THINGS WE NEED

The thought has occurred to us many, many times, why this city has not progressed in rapid strides? Why, the best place on earth to live in, has not been deemed to be the best place to invest in, and why those who live here, and could not be forced away by any compulsion, quickly lend an ear to any foreign scheme for investment and that too, in precarious ventures? May we not be permitted to suggest to our business men and financiers, that while they are erecting costly homes, palatial banking houses and pretentious stores and theatres, that what this city needs now is something more than money facilities, something more than luxurious homes, something more than places of amusement and recreation. We want the hum of machinery, the sound of factory whistles, the hurrying footsteps of numberless workmen who labor and earn. We want factories to eat into our splendid contiguous forests, factories to take our cotton and cottonseed, factories to mill our rice and cure our potatoes, factories to can our vegetables and commercialize our sugar cane.

We are in truth laggards, consummate laggards, who ill deserve the splendid things which nature has vouchsafed to us. But let any sleek persuasive promoter with oil stocks to sell come into our midst and hundreds lend a listening ear, and recklessly pour out their hard earned treasures in his waiting palms. But speak of a rice mill, handle factory, a syrup mill, a cotton cloth factory, a refinery, potato curing plant, and you can't get an audience. Pause a moment and take an inventory of things! Who here, has ever profited from oil stocks? Who has ever profited from life or fire insurance stocks, or for that matter from any foreign stocks?

We are gullible, easy marks, who pass up, with contempt, the good things at our very doors and at the same time while posing as financiers and business men, throw our money to the dogs. We say: If Opelousas is good enough to live in, its good enough to invest in! What say you mister business man and financier? The question is: Has not the legal phrase "Ne varietur" been with us long enough and ought there not to be substituted the commonplace and neighborly invitation: "Go to it, we'll see you through."

HARDING COMING TO LAFAYETTE

Lafayette, July 2nd, 1920.—Are Mars and the other planets inhabited? What keeps the sun hot and where is it at midnight? Why are some stars red and others blue? What is the earth? These are a few of the questions to be answered in a series of five illustrated lectures entitled, "Trips to Other Worlds," which will be given at the Industrial Institute by Dr. A. M. Harding, professor of mathematics and astronomy at the university of Arkansas.

The lectures will be illustrated by several hundred lantern slides showing telescopic photographs of the sun, the moon, the stars, the comets and meteors, and other heavenly bodies. Mercury, Venus, Mars and the other planets, and the myths concerning the sun, the moon, and the rest of the celestial bodies will be the subjects of the first lecture given Monday night July 5th. The question of the habitability of Mars and the possibility of communication with her will be features of the program.

"The man in the moon" is the subject of the second lecture which is scheduled for Tuesday night. It will be in the nature of a travelogue. Close up photographs of the craters, mountain ranges, and seas of the moon will be shown in connection with this lecture. Dr. Harding will discuss the lunar influences on the earth. The sun will also be included in this lecture, emphasis being given to its relation to the earth and its chemical composition.

In the third lecture, "Signs and Wonders," comets, meteors, and shooting stars will be discussed. Dr. Harding will review the history of all of the large comets which have appeared and will explain the cause of the meteoric showers which caused so much alarm during the nineteenth century. "The Heaven Above and the Earth Beneath" is the subject of the fourth lecture, which will tell something of the sun's travels through space, of the various constellations, and of double stars, star clusters, nebulae, other worlds in the process of formation and the milky way.

In his fifth and last lecture, "The Origin of the Earth and the End of the World," Dr. Harding will take up the probability of life in the other worlds and will give the theories held by scientists of the past and present as to the origin of the earth. Laplace's "ring nebular theory" and Moulton's "planetesimal theory" of the earth's origin will receive special attention. In conclusion, Dr. Harding will give the ways in which the world may come to an end.

Dr. Harding will give five lectures nightly beginning Monday night, July 5th, at 8 p. m.
