LUTHER E. HALL

The whole state of Louisiana and St. Landry parish in particular, has been saddened and bereaved by the untimely death of this great and good man. Apparently in the flush of manhood and still imbued with the qualities of political combativeness which has signalized his career in public life, no premonition of his untimely demise was given his multitude of friends and supporters throughout the state. He died suddenly, and even before it was given to him to know and understand that his battles for the common people and their interests had deeply and affectionately enshrined him in the hearts of all true Louisianians. It is a lasting pity that a man of the ability and breadth of knowledge and intellect which Governor Hall was admitted to possess did not live long enough to receive the open gratitude and plaudits of the people of his native State, who, after all is said and done, and in the bottom of their hearts, held him in high esteem and gratitude; and, it is a further pity that such a man was never permitted to reach the ultima thule of his ambition—a justiceship on the supreme bench of the state, and in which position he would have towered as a lasting ornament and credit to all of its people.

Gov. Hall, and up to the time he placed his fate and fortune in the hands of perfidious friends, fairly leaped from one judicial position to another, until he had at last obtained and by a vote of his people a place on the highest judicial tribunal in the state. He was elected to the supreme bench for a term of twelve years, and the employment was both congenial and remunerative. He had no thought of other political place or power until the calls of the leaders of the Democratic Good Government League became so overpowering he was moved to relinquish his well earned position on the supreme bench and became the standard bearer of that political organization in the memorable fight that followed. How gallantly and ably he bore the brunt of that fierce campaign, and like a plumed knight of old, emerged triumphant and victorious is a matter of history well known to all men.

And then came the saddest and most trying years of his life, when like the sturdy oak, and under the storm and stress of political opposition and unearned bitterness he finally bowed his head, and passed beyond; where, let us hope, he will receive his just deserts, and at least be free from the poisoned darts of malignant hate and envy of his enemies.

Peace to your ashes, friend of all men, the high and the low, the rich and the poor!

Sister Mary Elms, Dies In Houston, Texas

St. Joseph's Infirmary, Houston, Texas, Nov. 5.—On the feast of All Saints, Sister Mary Elms, a member of the Sisters of Charity of the Incarnate Word, passed to her eternal reward after an illness of several months.

The deceased was a daughter of Geo. O. Elms and Mary Barker Elms of Opelousas and Lake Charles, La. From her earliest girlhood she ministered to the sick, the care of her grandmother, two brothers and her father in their last lingering illness, laying the foundation of her career.

After the death of her relatives she entered training at Schumpert Memorial, Shreveport, La., and graduated in May, 1915, at which time she determined to devote her life to others as a member of the Order of the Incarnate Word. In October, 1915 she entered the Mother House at Galveston. Most nobly did she fulfill her obligation laboring there three years.

The last two years of her life were spent in St. Joseph's Infirmary, Houston Texas, where she peacefully breathed her last, comforted with the presence of her family.

In the Convent Chapel, at St. Mary's Galveston, which was the scene of her first vows, Bishop Christopher Bryne delivered a touching eulogy on the gentle character of Sister Mary.

Six members of the order served as pall-bearers as she was laid to rest in Calvary Cemetery with all the love and devotion their religion can bestow.

Dupre Recalls Their Agreement in the "Severance" Demagogues and "Public Opinion."

The Editor of The Item—We have heard a great deal about the unanimity of sentiment in North Louisiana, and more particularly of such sentiment in the oil bearing parishes with a view to increase the tax on oil and gas from two and one-half percent to three per cent. If there is such sentiment concerning which I express no opinion, for want of first hand knowledge upon the subject matter, I must say it did not materialize upon yesterday in the house of which I am an humble member.

The vote in Caddo stood two for the increase, two against such increase. The vote in Claiborne was divided it was similarly divided in the parish of Ouachita. Certain it is these Representatives are aware of the feelings at home and to a certain extent reflected the wishes of their constituents. All of this talk of not being bound by their own act and deed is buncombe pure and simple. Every member of the general assembly, and there were 105 of these, who voted for Act. No. 31 of 1920 was aware of the fact that he was voting to perpetuate the "Gentlemen's Agreement" entered into between Governor Parker and the oil and gas people, and to now attempt to set aside their lawful agreement, is bad faith of the rankest kind.

"Agreements legally entered into have the effect of laws, on those who have formed them.

"They must be performed with good faith"—Civil Code, Article, 1901.

And I have no doubt that a majority of the members of the house, who voted against the three per cent raise, felt bound by the agreement which the governor had entered into, and which they had ratified. This accounts for the defeat of the Douglas Amendment, to increase the tax from two and one-half to three per cent.

GILBERT L. DUPRE

TEX RICKARD

The long, lean, Texan, whose imagination and brain power enabled him to stage the greatest event the World has ever known. The Fight of the Century it has been called, and when Dempsey and Carpentier fought at Jersey City, on that epoch making day, the whole World ceased its work and listened to the Returns. King George installed a private wire in Buckingham Palace; all Europe was in suspense, while 95,000 people cheered the men on in Boyle's Arena.
