HOW THE BIG DAILIES VIEW THE PRINT-PAPER SITUATION

Many of the larger papers of the country are intimating very strongly that all of the raise in price of print paper is not justified on the grounds of increased cost of labor or raw material, but that a combination of print paper manufacturers is responsible for the greater portion of the increase. These same statements were made before the federal trade commission investigation at Washington. The following editorial from the New York World is a fair example of the attitude of many of the most influential papers of the country:

Piracy in Paper
"When the federal trade commission reassembles in August it will meet an important problem relating to the price of print paper. If this government agency for the correction or rapacity in business is ever to have an opportunity to prove its value, it can ask nothing better than that which now presents itself.

"Except as individual publishers have protected themselves from monopolizes in this country for almost a generation. There is a pretense of competition, but the consumer who enters the market soon finds that he has allotted to a single producer and that nobody else cares to do business with him. This is combination at its worst.

"Of late, purchasers not protected by long-time contracts have met prices prohibitive on all sides, and the evidence of conspiracy are too numerous and too plain to be disregarded. Extortion in this line can make no plea of necessity. It is to be attributed to nothing but the ethics of highway—the power to rob and the helplessness of the victim who is to be robbed.

"Perhaps a vigorous protest on the trade commission will bring this buccaneering to an end. If not, the case should go to a federal grand jury without delay."

Shelby, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Arceneaux, was severely wounded about the ankle from glass cuts received while playing in the rear of their home Sunday morning.

U. S. MARINES MAKE LONG HIKE

Washington, Aug. 14. What is believed to have been one of the longest tropical hikes ever made by American troops thrown on their own resources in a hostile country, was the hike made by the Eight Company, Fourth Regiment of U. S. Marines, when it covered in a day and a night, of July 2nd and 3rd, the 111 kilometers between Monte Cristi and Santiago, Santo Domingo, after fighting most of the way. It is seventy-six Americans miles between these two points and the hike was the third longest ever made by the U. S. Marine Corps, approached warfare.

With a handful of U. S. Marines, Col. Pendleton maintained unbroken, an eighty mile line of communication, and the quick settling of the Dominican trouble is probably due, in the opinion of Marine Corps officials, to the rapid hiking of the Marines to the interior of the country. The natives have been disarmed and there is no further fighting.

The expeditionary force under Col. Pendleton of the Marine Corps, consisted of two regiments of Marines.
