HELPING YOURSELF BY HELPING YOUR TOWN

(From The Lafayette Advertiser)
Roanoke, Va., Sept. 28, 1916.
To The Advertiser:

The comparison of 'catalog house' prices featured in the advertisement of Mr. N. Abramson in a recent issue of The Advertiser is deserving of more than passing notice. In thus exploding the current belief among the buying public that catalog or mail order houses undersell the home merchant, Mr. Abramson is not only boosting his own business but he is also conferring a benefit upon his fellow-merchants along with the general public. This is individual effort of a broad and constructive character and because it embraces in its results the PUBLIC good as well as the good of the individual directly concerned, activities of this kind are always to be commended and encouraged. They contain the element or vital principle of the law which underlies all real progress in the life of communities and of nations, which is that individual initiative and effort find their highest expression and fullest reward in the life and character of the community in which they are exerted. It is the way of the world to give back in overflowing measure to every man and woman whatever he, or she, puts into the world; and fortunate indeed is the one who is conscious of this great fact and utilizes it in good ways.

The question of "buying at home" is one of very personal interest to every man and woman in the community. Because it is an essential factor in the material prosperity and social advancement of every community, our children should be made to realize the important bearing that this subject has upon their future welfare.

Patronizing local industry builds up a community and insures its prosperity. This applies to business men and to business establishments as well as to their customers. It embraces everybody. It is as much the duty of the individual citizen to patronize the merchant.

Being fair to local enterprise is the only proper and sensible course to follow. The man who pursues any other course is a "slacker." He leaves the responsibility and labor of upholding his community to others. He enjoys the advantage of the community, lives in it and walks its streets and accepts its bounty but when it comes to doing his share towards maintaining it, he is sadly deficient.

If there are any slackers, we have a slow town. If merchants refuse to patronize home industry and citizens refuse to patronize merchants, we have a condition that leads to stagnation and often to decay. If we buy our shirts, collars, shoes, etc., form a Chicago mail-order house, we may imagine that we save a few cents but in the long run we are the losers. We contribute to the piling up of wealth in Chicago, to the building of more schools and streets and public institutions there, but we don't help Lafayette one bit. Lafayette has helped us, but when it comes to an opportunity to help Lafayette, we pull out a dirk and stab Lafayette in the back.

Some may think this is putting it somewhat sharply but it's the truth and we know that it's the truth that hurts. Standing by your home town is a question of principle and a matter of good faith. You may fool yourself and order your supplies continually from New York or Chicago, but you can't escape the fact that you are sand-bagging your town.

"Thank You"

There is told somewhere a beautiful legend of two angels that were sent upon earth, each with a different mission to perform. Both were given golden baskets—the one was to gather up all the petitions he could possibly secure—the other was to stow in his basket all the thanks he could glean.

It was no time before the angel of gratitude sent flew back into the portals of heaven with almost empty arms. But, long in the dusk of the evening came the angel of petitions, whose burdens had become so heavy that he could no longer bear the weight alone and Prince Michael sent forth a choir of angels to carry back to heaven the wearied angel of requests.

And how aptly this legend applies to the realities of life? How many petitions are made—how few thanks returned. We all want for something; ask for it; but wherefore our gratitude? Demands are made, favors are asked, but the simple words of gratitude, how sparingly they are spoken.

There is no sweeter sound to human ear than the word appreciation and what little effort it means on the part of anyone to say the welcome word, "I thank you." It is in the little child that the early seed of appreciation should be sown, for habit then forms and becomes part of the individuality of the man.

We all know the hurt and sting of crural ingratitude, when perhaps we have striven with might and main to do the best that lies within our power, when we have furthered every effort to do a kindly deed for some one we love dearly or perhaps for some one we have not cherished so fondly, to find that our well-meant attempts must go unrewarded, unappreciated because of the lack of expressed gratitude.

It is a lamentable fact in the daily routine of our lives that so many kind words go unsaid, so many beautiful thoughts are never given verbal expression.

Flattery, undue praise or profuse gratitude are not wholesome, but for the kind word of appreciation, the good word of encouragement, a more general practice is needed and how easy to say: "Thank you."—Toiler.

Experience is the abridgment of illusion. This is one of the sad conditions of life, that experience is not transmissible. No man will learn from the sufferings of another; he must suffer himself.

To most men experience is like the stern light of a ship, which illumine only the track it has passed. Experience is the name men give to their follies or their sorrows. Each succeeding day is the scholar of that which went before it.—Exchange.

Here is some of the odd requests that have come under Mr. Townsend's notice, who is a hotel manager in an Eastern City.

A woman in mourning who refused to ride on the elevator with any one else save the operator.

A man who wanted the same thing for lunch every day in the year and who wanted it on the table at two o'clock whether he was there or not.

A woman who wanted all parcels delivered under a wax seal placed there by the hotel.

A Southerner who always persisted on having seven blankets on his bed. Six would not suffice.

A man with a family of two boys and a girl who insisted on his children having the freedom of the men's writing room for an hour every afternoon. He did not have his request granted.

Neuralgia of the face, shoulder, hands or feet requires a powerful remedy that will penetrate the flesh. BALLARD'S SNOW LINIMENT possesses that power. Rubbed in where the pain is felt is all that is necessary to relieve suffering and restore normal conditions. Price 25c, 50c, and $1.00 per bottle. Sold by Belanger Drug Co.

SAVES DAUGHTER

Advice of Mother no Doubt Prevents Daughter's Unlucky End.

Randy, Ky.—"I was not able to do anything for nearly six months," writes Mrs. Laura Bratcher, of this place, "and was down in bed for three months. I cannot tell you how I suffered with my head, and with nervousness and womanly troubles.

Our family doctor told my husband he could not do me any good, and he had to give it up. We tried another doctor, but he did not help me.

At last, my mother advised me to take Cardui, the woman's tonic. I thought it was no use for I was nearly dead and nothing seemed to do me any good. But I took eleven bottles, and now I am able to do all of my work and my own washing.

I think Cardui is the best medicine in the world. My weight has increased, and I look the picture of health.

If you suffer from any of the ailments peculiar to women, get a bottle of Cardui today. Delay is dangerous. We know it will help you, for it has helped so many thousands of other weak women in the past 50 years.

SEPT. WEATHER REPORT.

The farmers around Morgan City scored another victory over the Weather Man during September, when ideal conditions for crop growing continued thru the month. The weather budget for September made by The Review Reporter during the first of the month materialized in almost all details.

The total precipitation for September amounted to 2.90 inches, with this rainfall distributed among eight of the days of the month. The coolest night recorded was 44 degrees, while the hottest day in the sun was at 102 degrees.

September was just right for gathering corn, hay and other things maturing during the month. Most of the corn in this section has now been gathered, or will be in during the next few days.

The cool spell which came on the 15th caught the cane in the proper shape for ripening. The continuation of the drop in temperature has done much toward completing the good work of making a fine cane crop begun by nature in the early months of 1916.

As a forecast by the Reporter no winds of any strength developed during September. The Southern summer has been delightful and atmospheric differences between the land and the water have not been so great, hence a reduction of the probability of storms.

The harvesting of cane will begin on or about the 15th of October on most of the places in South Louisiana, and by the time our next report appears, the 1916 crop will be nearly harvested. We have but one thing to fear at this writing, and that is a freeze. Those who have large cane crops will no doubt avoid the catastrophe of 1911 by win rowing during November, so that the minimum amount of damage may be done by an early freeze, while a late freeze would do very little damage.

In 1911 practically no win rowing was done when the freeze came on December the 2nd. It is very probable the farmers will not again be caught napping, since the fine tonnage and good price for cane this year will encourage the spending of a few more dollars to save all the harvest.

There were 16 partly cloudy days during the month. The first two weeks were warm, with frequent showers.

The following tabulated record may be of interest to those who wish to follow the weather record of this vicinity. The data was taken from the Avoca Books, where the United States Government gets information for publication in its monthly weather report.

Did you ever stop to think that the rich, who can afford best to get along without life insurance, are usually the ones who appreciate most what it means and carry the largest amount of it? They know that it is one of the surest and best ways of leaving an estate.

While charity is one of the purposes of fraternalism, there are other benefits equally important. The encouragement and lessons in self-help which the members receive are factors in the development of a more resourceful and independent people.
