FIREWORKS AT LOUISIANA FAIR TO BE BEST EVER

"The Siege of The Dardenelles" Will Feature Spectacular Pyrotechnic Program.

Among the many costly attractions booked for the 1920 State Fair of Louisiana, to be held at Shreveport, October 28 to November 7, inclusive, is the most gigantic fireworks exhibition ever booked by the management. It will be staged each evening in front of the grandstand, with new features included in each program.

The big feature of the fireworks display will be the gorgeous spectacle, "The Siege of The Dardenelles," calling to mind vividly one of the most terrific military undertakings of the world war. Through this elaborate exhibition some of the bloodiest and most memorable fighting of the great international conflict will be reproduced. The representation will give the spectators an idea of the magnitude of the Dardenelles campaign, in which was sought the destruction of the Germanized Turkish obstruction.

A mammoth stage is required for the presentation of this spectacle, and numerous men and women participate, including skilled performers. It represents a large historical event and cannot be reproduced except on a large scale. But the management feels that the State Fair visitors are entitled to the very best of everything, and has gone to unusual effort to book this entertainment, which will be given under direction of the Thearle-Duffield Fireworks Company, one of the foremost concerns of the kind in the world.

There will be many other pyrotechnic exhibitions on the program in addition to "The Siege of The Dardenelles," and the spectators, who are expected to fill the grandstand each evening, are assured of exceptionally fine amusement.

DAIRY EXHIBITS WILL BE STATE FAIR FEATURE

What promises to prove one of the most interesting collections of Junior Extension exhibits at the 1920 State Fair of Louisiana, October 28 to November 7, inclusive, will be those entered by the Boys' and Girls' Dairy Clubs. These clubs form a new branch of the Junior Extension service in Louisiana, and, judging by the interest manifested in different sections of the State, the work is going to enjoy wonderful expansion within the next year or two.

Among the exhibits on which premiums have been offered are butter, sweet milk, cottage cheese, dairy work records, and home-made conveniences for handling milk on the farm. Some of the exhibits will be shown especially to stress the importance of milk in diet and the necessity for it for growing children. There is a great deal of waste, but by using the methods taught in the Dairy Clubs the farms can utilize milk and milk products that are now considered of no value.

SWINE SHOW AT FAIR TO DRAW MANY HOGS

With E. L. Jordan, professor of animal husbandry at the Louisiana State University, in charge as superintendent, the general Swine Show at the 1920 State Fair of Louisiana, October 28 to November 7, will give the visitor an excellent idea of the advancement this section of the country is making in raising fine hogs. The judging will be done by J. J. McLain of Anna, Texas.

Competition in this department is open to the world, and many herds from other states as well as many from Louisiana are expected to be represented in the exhibits. Ground for this expectation is given by the reports and inquiries reaching the Fair Association. The premiums are the most abundant ever offered at the State Fair, and this is proving especially interesting to the prospective exhibitors.

In addition to competing for tempting premiums, exhibitors will have the privilege of offering some of their stock for sale and receiving good prices therefor. Each Fair attracts livestock breeders who are anxious to improve their herds and to take advantage of the opportunity offered both at private and auction sales. In other words, buyer and purchaser are brought together, and, as a result, the herds of this part of the country are improved and those making the sales are rewarded by the financial returns they receive.

That Louisiana is well adapted for the raising of fine hogs has been thoroughly demonstrated. Many have gone into the business during the past few years, due especially to lessons obtained at the State Fair, but there is still room for extension of the industry, and the exhibits and sales at this year's Fair will no doubt help in bringing on some of this improvement.
