NOT WHAT SHE HAD FEARED

Ben's "Surprise" for Mother Proved Really Small Matter When She Learned the Facts.

The dearest friend and her family have been going by degrees to live in California. First the son, young George, hurried out to enter a university, and his parents planned to follow at their leisure.

Now, the D. F. is, according to her son, the best sport ever but—she does hate dogs! Her aversion of them amounts almost to terror and the Woman knows what she suffered during the brief life of George's only dog.

She had tea with the Woman before the departure West, and confided her fears that her son had a puppy at college, "and of course that means that I will have to have it around vacations."

"What kind of a dog is it?" asked the Woman.

"I don't know yet. You see, he wrote first that he had a 'surprise' for me, that he knew I wouldn't like it, but that he liked it very much. And now every letter tells me that the surprise is growing."

The Woman's parting words were to write her all about the dog. As soon as possible came a letter beginning: "Thank heaven, it's not a dog—it's a mustache."—Chicago Journal.

SWEET WORDS

Diggs—Smith is the finest after-dinner speaker I have ever heard.
Biggs—That so?
Diggs—Yes; he always says, "Waiter, give the check to me."

Glenmora Hi Accepted As Accredited School

Mr. Cooper Editor,
Glenmora, La.

My dear Mr. Cooper:

This is to advise that some few weeks ago I made application to the Hon. Commission on Accredited Schools to have Glenmora High School accepted as an accredited school, at the same time making full report of the nature of work being done, subject matter offered, number of teachers employed, etc., then too the qualifications of high school teachers, all conditions being met, I am advised under date of 12 9 22, by the Hon. C. A. Ives, Chairman of said Commission that Glenmora High School has fully met all conditions as required by the Commission on Accredited Schools of the Association of College and Secondary Schools of southern states, and so was accepted as an accredited school and placed on the accredited list among the leading schools of the State of Louisiana.

Mr. Ives offers his most hearty congratulations and goes on to say that he wishes us well in our new place, ranking as we do among the best schools, and you may state for me, Mr. Cooper, that I am highly pleased, as it means that henceforth our graduates may go out to the different Colleges and Universities and be admitted without examination with no questions asked, but to go on with the work unhampered into the field of education.

The patrons of Glenmora High School will indeed be glad to know of its schools success in the way of making progress. In other words, our High School is now on the map, and I highly appreciate the loyal support that our patrons and business men are anxious and ready to give at any and all times.

Queen Quality Shoes

EVERY woman is interested in knowing why some shoes retain their original style and shape until they are ready to be discarded. Even after many months of wear, women have observed the shapeliness and perfect fit of "Queen Quality" shoes, and marvelled at the craftsmanship built into every pair.

Yet the reason is not far to seek. Shoe-making has become a distinct art. The skill that combines style with comfort, and shapeliness with faultless fit, has been developed by a great organization producing only women's shoes under one roof—in Boston, the home of American shoe-making.
