Governor Willing to Call Extra Session.

Baton Rouge, La. Aug. 8.—Governor Pleasant, in an address before the mass meeting in the interest of the L. S. U. agricultural college, inspired by the resignation of Dr. W. R. Dodson, declared he was willing to call an extra session of the legislature at once to provide funds for favored adoption of a constitutional amendment levying a one mill special tax for the support of all state educational and elementary institutions to yield about $7,500,000 per year. The governor said he would call the general assembly, "If the people want it."

The committee to investigate the needs, T. H. Harris, chairman, found that it would take $5,000,000 to properly equip the university, of which $3,000,000.00 would be necessary to equip the agricultural college and farms, and $1,500,000 to equip other departments that they might keep pace with the university, while a half million, each year will be necessary for the university's maintenance.

More than $3,000 was subscribed on the spot. Modern Farming gave $1,000 and Mayor Behrman pledged $500.

The address of Gov. Pleasant declaring his willingness to call an extra session and advocating special one mill state-wide tax, came as a surprise in some quarters. He expressed the hope that Dr. Dodson would recall his resignation.

Col. T. D. Boyd, president of L. S. U.; Prof. T. H. Harris, superintendent of public education; Senator E. M. Stafford and Mayor Breazeale the last two being candidates for governor, were present and made addresses. Col. Boyd said the greatest thing that the mass meeting could do would be to pledge Dr. Dodson to withdraw his resignation. He praised Dr. Dodson as being the greatest man in his time not only in the state but in the United States, and regarded his leaving as a calamity to the university and the entire state.

He appealed to the people to prevent other interests from entering into the cause, saying the movement was started by the farmers and it is important they should get the benefit.

Baton Rouge, La., August 8.—Farmers who launched the Agricultural College movement Thursday will confine their efforts to the upbuilding of the Louisiana State University College of Agriculture, it was decided at a session of the farmers held Friday. The session was a follow-up one of the large mass meeting held Thursday night which discussed the development of the State Agricultural College, and urged Dr. W. R. Dodson, dean of the college, to withdraw his recent resignation.

The resolution adopted reads: "That it is the sense of the farmers attending the short course at the university that the efforts to obtain adequate means of equipping and supporting the College of Agriculture as developed here during the past few days should be devoted exclusively to the College of Agriculture."

The plan conflicts with the suggestion of Governor Pleasant that he would call a special session of the Legislature to submit to the people a constitutional amendment for putting of 1 mill tax for the support of several state institutions, provided the people of the state show they are in favor of the tax.

The formal name of the farmers association adopted at Friday's session was "Greater Agricultural College Association." The formal organization had been launched at the mass meeting Thursday night, but no name had been selected.

A committee formally called upon Dr. Dodson Friday to ask him to reconsider and withdraw his resignation. Dr. Dodson replied he would not answer the committee at the present time, but would await developments of the movement to improve conditions.

Buyers From 30 States Bid For Columbia Hogs.

BABINGTONS' Big Store News

A Little Home-Made Philosophizing.

Since business has been rather dull for the past few weeks strange things have been revolving in our minds, and this is the big question that has been uppermost in our thoughts: "Where do you, dear reader, spend your money?"

Is it with the firm that you would go to should you need financial aid; the firm that you would go to to help build your neighborhood church; the firm that pays taxes and licenses in your parish, thereby helping to swell the revenues of the parish devoted to good roads, new school houses and the education of your children?

We are not selfish enough to think that we are the only firm that pays its full share of the parish revenues, but we believe that we pay our share and do our part in the upbuilding of the country, and we ask those who never thought of the question: "Where Do You Spend Your Money?" to take these thoughts into consideration, and we believe that you will do more trading with your local firms.

SOFT DRINK SALOONS OF SALVATION ARMY

Commander Booth Tells of New Community Centers.

Following the announcement that the Salvation Army was to take over all of the available saloons in the big community centers this explanation is given by Evangeline Booth, commander of the Salvation Army in the United States in the New York Evening Post:

We of the Salvation Army believe that the saloon became an institution because it was not wholly bad. It had an appeal to the social instinct. In taking over saloons the Salvation Army will sell only non-intoxicating drinks and it will try to give the good features of what we call the saloon and take out of it all that made for the undermining of character.

What is a saloon? When we say saloon we employ merely a polite name to gloss over the business of selling strong drinks. The original saloon was a gathering place for social purposes. It had the nature of the French salon, which was nothing more nor less than a reception room or parlor in which men and women gathered to discuss literature, art, politics, and in fact everything which tended to embellish civilized life. The serving of refreshments in the salon of the real type is an incident. It made little difference whether they were drinking champagne, sherbert or tea. When the keeper of a low-grade groggery calls his place of business a saloon, he wrests from its true meaning a name which should make for good and for the uplifting of the ideals of mankind.

Still Hold Old Meaning. Strange as it may seem, even the cheapest saloon has in it something of the character of the original salon. Men foregather there to talk politics, to discuss sports, to give their opinions about their favorite baseball players or to play a quiet game of checkers or pinochle.

Col William A. McIntyre has made a careful study of the class whom the world calls the "Down and Outs." He has come in contact with all kinds of the victims of drink. In so doing he has learned to know the habits of the American drinking places which we have come to dignify by the name saloon.

The saloon of tomorrow is intended mostly for men who are unattached. It would not so seek to cater to married men who have homes of their own. It does aim, however, to reach bachelors, especially those who are likely to be lonely in our great cities and who have a natural liking for the society of men of their own class or walk in life.

Merely a Salvage Move. Since our announcement with regard to the taking over of saloons we have received many inquiries as to how we would carry out this project on a large scale. It is not our intention to make extensive investments or to use any large amount of capital for this purpose, but where there are leases which may run for a year or so and where fixtures are available it will be practical to carry out our plans without any large expenditures.

The saloon as planned by the Salvation Army would become essentially a poor man's club, where non-intoxicating liquors and wholesome food would be served.

A Soft Drink Club. The soft-drink club, if I may use that expression, would have an entirely different moral effect, not only upon the individual but upon the family than does the hard-drink saloon. This statement is not based upon a mere theory, but upon actual experiments which have been conducted by the Salvation Army.

We have, for instance, in West Forty-seventh street a hotel in which there was a typical bar-room. We took away all the intoxicants but let the fixtures remain exactly as they were and retained the barkeeper. The brass rail on which so many men seem to like to rest their feet is still there. The customers of the place can still put their elbows on the shining bar-rail of mahogany directly level with the counter. They can foregather there as of old, where they can lean in attitudes of ease and have their drinks served to them much in the same manner as they did when the rum bottle was shoved around the shining wood.
