Mt. Hermon Notes.

December 4, 1921.

Every thing is very quiet now, we suppose it is the calm that precedes the storm which will strike in full force in about twenty days when Christmas, Santa Claus and white lightning will hold forth. We had hoped to see in time when the latter would be dethroned but it seems a far off possibility.

A letter from Presiding Elder Lee, of the Baton Rouge District, Methodist church, states that the Franklinton circuit of which Mt. Hermon is a post will be supplied by Rev. A. L. McQueen, a transfer from the Arkansas conference and will soon be on hand to begin the work.

The Mt. Hermon school will give a bonfire box supper next Saturday night. It will be staged in tents near the school house. Many other features of interest will be produced, so come to the festal board Saturday night, for bright eyed beauties will be there. Come with your purse stuffed tight and buy the box of your lady fair. It is given in the interest of the athletic club.

Homes Help Community.

A wealthy Englishman once said that a good home was an institution for civilizing a community, and instead of surrounding his own home by a high hedge, like many in the vicinity, he built about it an open fence, so that whoever passed, rich or poor, might enjoy the beauty of house and lawn and garden. It is a good thing for the girls of today who are to be the home makers of tomorrow, to grow up with the idea that the home owes something to the community.

PASS-A-LOUTRE HUNTING GROUNDS

New Orleans.—The Pass-a-Loutre Public Hunting Grounds, opened Nov. 1, have already demonstrated the wisdom of the Louisiana Department of Conservation in dedicating this immense tract of marsh land to the recreation and pleasure of citizens of the State who are enamored of outdoor life and the sport of the gun. Hunters returning after the first week were enthusiastic in respect of the accommodations furnished in the lodge provided for those hunters who do not wish to look out for themselves. The lodge is mosquito and storm proof and has accommodations for twenty guests, the charge being a nominal one, to cover cost only. Reservation for quarters in this lodge must be made in advance, to prevent overcrowding, and to assure the comfort of those who have quarters there. The grounds are open to any one having a hunting license and stopping at the lodge is entirely optional, though all hunters who use the tract of 60,000 acres must register there before beginning the hunt.

PROSPEROUS TRAPPING SEASON IS INDICATED

New Orleans.—The fur trapping season in Louisiana opened Nov. 1, and reports to the Department of Conservation indicate that the season will be a prosperous one. The value of the annual yield of furs in the State is about $3,500,000, and there is no reason to believe the sum realized this year will fall below that figure. Raccoon and muskrat furnish the bulk of this sum, with mink a bad third. Opossum, skunk and the other varieties of furs do not go far to swell the total.

One trapper in Tangipahoa Parish last season marketed in the season $3,340 worth of pelts—the raising of which did not cost him a penny. His only investment was the traps he already had on hand, and yet he took in $1,100 a month, which he could not have realized in any other business, even though he had considerable capital invested in it. This was an exceptional case, to be sure, but there were other trappers who did as well or nearly as well.

WHAT A HUNTER MAY GET FOR ONE DOLLAR

New Orleans.—The regular hunting season in Louisiana began Nov. 1 and will continue for three months. For two or three weeks now sportsmen have been oiling their guns, laying in supplies of ammunition and food and patching up their progies, but few of them have thought what the State, through the Conservation Department, offers them for the one dollar license they pay for the privilege of hunting. If the sportsman takes full advantage of the opportunities offered him by the department, he can not only provide food during the open season for his family, but for the families of a number of his friends. Stated briefly, he will be permitted to kill during the three months 11,953 birds, 1,155 squirrels, five deer and an unlimited number of rabbits and bear. True, the department does not guarantee that he will get all of this game for the dollar license he pays the State, but it opens the opportunity for him and leaves the issue to his skill and activity.

This is what he may kill during the 92 days of the hunting season: Rabbits, bears and alligators, an unlimited number; deer, 2 a day, 5 a season; squirrels, 15 a day; geese, 8 a day; ducks, 25; poule d'eau, gallinules and marsh hens, 25 altogether; snipe, 25; yellow legs and plover, 15 altogether; turkeys, 1; quail, 15. The open season for turkeys and quail begins Nov. 15. This list does not take account of the outland animals and birds which may be slaughtered at any time, and which include such sporting propositions as the fox, wolf, wildcat and panther.

WILD TURKEYS ARE RAISED ON FARM

Bains, La.—Edward Butler of this place has been experimenting with the raising of wild turkeys on his farm, and has made a report to the Conservation Department of the State that this season's hatch was good, with no loss from disease. Such losses as Mr. Butler suffered were from the natural enemies of poultry, principally the horned owl, and once his plans to check this preying on his flocks are developed, he anticipates no further trouble. Mr. Butler has found much pleasure in raising these wild turkeys and they have caused him no trouble. He has endeavored to raise them under conditions analogous to those in the wild state, which probably accounts for the absence of disease in his flock. One or two of his broods have reverted to the wild state entirely and are rarely seen around the farm.

Some of the Butler stock has been distributed in the parishes of West Feliciana and East Baton Rouge, and he has other surplus stock on hand. Wild turkeys have been successfully raised in different parts of the country, but generally on so large a scale that the average farmer could not follow, and probably with considerable capital back of the experiment, most of the propagating pens being located on large club reserves; but Mr. Butler has demonstrated that the turkeys can be raised on the average farm. The Conservation Department is much interested in the propagation of this bird, and will co-operate with reliable persons who desire a business which promises much pleasure and moderately profitable business.
