The Spanish War in The Century Magazine.

THE CENTURY is making a wonderful success of its great series of articles on the Spanish War by the men who fought it. Captain Sigbee has told the story of the war, Lieutenant Hobson has given his graphic narrative of the sinking of the Albatross, and General Shafter has described the Spanish campaign. In March General Greene begins his description of the Manila campaign; and in April is

ADMIRAL SAMPSON'S PERSONAL NARRATIVE Of the Capture of Cervera.

THE CENTURY contains one of the most remarkable features ever printed in an American magazine—nothing less than the Santiago Naval Battle Described by the Commanders.

Joris, by Capt. R. D. Evans, Indiana, by Capt. H. C. Taylor, Texas, by Commodore J. W. Philip, Brooklyn, by Capt. F. A. Cook, Gloucester, by Lt.-Com. Yainwright, New York, by Capt. F. E. Chadwick, Oregon, by Lieut. E. W. Eberle (in command of the forward turret).

EACH man tells the story of his own and of his ship's experiences in the fight, all with novel illustrations taken from the decks of each of the above vessels during the action.
